Notice.

We understand that a good many of our customers are under the impression that we no longer give them credit for ginning, bagging and ties, but demand the cash when the cotton is ginned. That is not true. We have our same old rules for ginning, but observe them more closely. We will gin your cotton just as cheaply as anyone else in town and allow you until the cotton is sold or until you wish to haul the bale from the warehouse to pay for the ginning. Having had our machinery put in first class condition and being operated by old and experienced men, we can assure you perfect satisfaction. We also pay the highest cash price for cotton seed.

HART-MULLINS

The marriage of Miss Myrtle Mullins and Mr. Eric Hart took place at the home of Mr. and Mrs. Guy Higgins, Wednesday afternoon at four o'clock.

The house was beautifully decorated for the occasion, pink and white being used very effectively throughout the lower floor.

Miss Ruth Kate Mullins and Miss Winnie Reynolds, gowned in pink, served punch in the hall.

Miss Bessie VanDerveer and Miss Maude Mullins, sister of the bride, presided over the bride's book.

Mrs. I. H. Middleton, assisted by Mesdames A. M. Gowan and J. O. Middleton, had charge of the music.

Misses Maude and Ruth Kate Mullins, followed by Misses Bessie VanDerveer, Winnie and Willie Reynolds and Alice Bolton of Atlanta, preceded the bride down the stairs and formed a ribbon aisle through which the bride and groom passed, unattended, to the library, where the ceremony was performed by Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle.

The bride, a petite blonde, was very pretty in her bridal gown of Rice cloth [illegible] the [illegible] mingo. She is the daughter of [illegible] Mullins.

IRELAND'S MANY FLAGS

COUNTRY HAS HAD NUMEROUS EMBLEMS OF SOVEREIGNTY.

Harp, Deemed by Most People as Typically Irish, Was Really Imposed Upon the Country by an English King.

What flag shall Ireland fly? This is a question that is again being discussed, writes a London correspondent of the New York Sun.

Probably no country has had more national flags than Ireland, so that of old-time flags range of choice is by no means restricted. The most ancient, without doubt, is the "Spear and Serpent," said to commemorate the curing by Moses of an ancestor of Milesius who had been bitten by a snake. Then there is the golden sunburst upon a blue ground, emblem of Fionn MacCumhaill's Fenian (militia). Blue was always Ireland's national color until 1798, when the United Irishmen, to signify the blending of north and south evolved a national color of the blue formed by the amalgamation of blue and orange—namely, green.

Another flag is that which Cromwell's soldiers are reputed to have seen when fighting the Kernes, a red cross upon a golden ground. Opinions as to whether such was ever a national emblem or not are divided, many people believing it to have been the arms of an insurgent commander.

The three golden crowns upon a blue ground is another emblem which has not been overlooked. The design appears today in the arms of Munster, and the three crowns are said to typify the triple kingdoms of Desmond, Thomond and Ormond. Anyway, this flag was the emblem of Ireland from 1170 to 1547, when Henry VIII of England substituted the harp for the three crowns, the reason being that Henry was anxious that the three crowns should not be confused with the triple tiara of the pope, with whom, at this juncture, Henry was not on the best of terms.

Thus it comes about that the harp, which is deemed as typically Irish, was imposed upon Ireland by an English king; but had not the United Irishmen, although they decreowned the harp in 1798, adopted it as their emblem, and Grattan's parliament recognized the harp, although they did not like the green ground, it is hardly likely that the average Irishman today would regard it as other than an upstart bergee.

Still another national device to be considered is the "Lamh Dearg Eirian," the Red Hand of Ireland, which, upon a white ground, was borne by Shane and Hugh O'Neill's armies that defeated Queen Elizabeth's generals.

The early hours of the nineteenth century saw Ireland inflicted with the St. Patrick's Cross, a red saltire upon a white ground. What St. Patrick had to do with it nobody can say, but some emblem or the other had got to be incorporated in the British flag upon the passing of the act of union, and so the heralds did the rest. Wherever they got the red saltire from it is not known, but there is reason to believe that it was borrowed from the arms of Trinity college, Dublin, which had in turn borrowed it from the Fitzgerald family.

In all probability Ireland will adopt the sunburst upon a blue ground, the chief reason being its antiquity, its distinctly Irish origin, and its symbolism of Ireland rising to take her proper place among the nations.

But come what may, the ground of the new flag is going to be blue. The Sinn Feiners are resolved upon that, and that the flag's material shall not be silk or cotton, but good Irish linen.

Whimsical Prisoner.

A prisoner's remarkable flow of words caused great amusement at Dublin sessions recently. A laborer was charged with stealing a pair of boots.

"By what stretch of imagination or by what insane processes of reasoning can you assume that I stole the boots?" he asked.

Addressing the court later, he said: "I have always testified with the utmost ardor and fervor of my soul my high admiration for the courage, discipline, and exalted integrity and inspiring honesty of the Dublin police. I had some blows and artistic pictures when arrested, and refused them to the police sergeant for his edification. I would serve 40,000 years in jail rather than knuckle down to the whimsical and fantastic charge."

Iowa Man Stuck With Pitchfork

A farmer living in the Northern part of Iowa stuck himself in the leg with a pitch fork. The wound would not heal and for years he had a running sore. He tried all the common salves and liniments and sometimes the sore would heal, but it always broke open again. Finally he healed it up to stay healed with Allan's Ulcerine Salve.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

DRIVEN TO ATROCITIES, GERMAN COMMANDER TELLS CORRESPONDENT

By E. ALEXANDER POWELL.
[By Cable to The Chicago Tribune.]

Headquarters in the Field of the Ninth Imperial Army, Chateau Lafeye, near Renaix, Belgium.—Three weeks ago the government of Belgium requested me to place before the American people a list of specific and authenticated atrocities committed by the German armies upon Belgian noncombatants.

Today General von Boehn, commanding the Ninth Imperial field army, acting mouthpiece of the German general staff, has asked me to place before the American people the German version of the incidents in question.

So far as I am aware I am the only correspondent in the present war who has motored for an entire day through the ranks of the advancing German army, who has dined as a guest of the German army commander and his staff, and who has had the progress of the army on the march arrested in order to obtain photographs of the German troops.

This unusual experience came about in a curious and roundabout way.

Invited by General Von Boehn.

After an encounter in the streets of Ghent last Tuesday between a German military automobile and a Belgian armored car, in which two German soldiers were wounded, American Vice Consul Van Hee persuaded the burgomaster to accompany him immediately to the headquarters of General von Boehn to explain the circumstances and ask that the city should not be held responsible for the unfortunate affair.

In the course of the conversation with Mr. Van Hee General von Boehn remarked that copies of papers containing articles written by Alexander Powell criticising the German treatment of the Belgian civil population had come to his attention and said he regretted he could not have an opportunity to talk with Powell and give him the German version.

Mr. Van Hee said by a fortunate coincidence I happened to be in Ghent, whereupon the general asked him to bring me out to dinner the following day, and issued a safe conduct through the German lines.

Though nothing was said about a photographer, I took with me Photographer Donald Thompson. As there was some doubt regarding the propriety of taking a Belgian driver into the German lines, I drove the car myself.

In Midst of Kaiser's Men.

Half a mile out of Sottehem our road debouched into the great highway which leads through Lille to Paris. We suddenly found ourselves in the midst of the German army. It was a sight never to be forgotten. Far as the eye could see stretched solid columns of marching men, pressing westward, ever westward.

The army was advancing in three mighty columns along three parallel roads. These dense masses of moving men in their elusive blue gray uniforms looked for all the world like three monstrous serpents crawling across the countryside.

American flags which fluttered from our windshield proved a passport in themselves and as we approached the close locked ranks they parted to let us through.

For five solid hours, traveling always at express train speed, we motored between the walls of the marching men. In time the constant shuffle of boots and the rhythmic swing of gray-clad arms and shoulders grew maddening and I became obsessed with the fear that I would send the car plowing into the human wedge on either side.

Miles of German Soldiers.

It seemed that the ranks never would end, and as far as we were concerned they never did, for we never saw or heard the end of that mighty column.

We passed regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade of infantry, and after them hussars, uhlans, cuirassiers, field batteries, more infantry, more field guns, ambulances, then siege guns, each drawn by 30 horses, engineers, telephone corps, pontoon wagons, armored motor cars, more uhlans, the sunlight gleaming on their forest of lances, more infantry in spiked helmets, all sweeping by as irresistible as a mighty river, with their faces turned toward France.

This was the Ninth field army and composed the very flower of the empire, including the magnificent troops of the Imperial guard. It was first and last a fighting army. The men were all young. They struck me as being keen as razors and as hard as nails. The horses were magnificent. They could not have been better. The field guns of the Imperial guard were almost twice the size of any used by our army.

Thirty-two Horses Draw Howitzer.

But the most interesting of all, of course, were the five gigantic howitzers, each drawn by 15 pairs of horses. These howitzers can send a shell to pieces at a distance of 11 miles.

Every contingency seems to have been foreseen. Nothing was left to chance or overlooked. Roads of Belgium, with which every soldier is provided, are the most astounding of topography I have ever seen. Every path, every lane, every cross road is numbered, and every fork is signposted. At one place I counted seven signposts at a single fork.

And how the [illegible] morning edition of Deutsche Kreiger Zeitung was being printed and distributed to the passing men. It contained nothing but accounts of German victories, of which I never had heard, but it seemed greatly to cheer the men.

Field Kitchens Cook Meals.

Field kitchens with smoke pouring from their stovepipe funnels rumbled down the lines, serving steaming soup and coffee to the marching men, who held out tin cups and had them filled without once breaking step.

Covered Wagons Hide Machine Guns.

There were wagons filled with army cobblers, sitting cross-legged on the floor, who were mending soldiers' shoes just as if they were back in their little shops in the fatherland. Other wagons, to all appearances ordinary two wheeled farm carts, hid under their arched canvas covers nine machine guns which could instantly be brought into action.

The medical corps was as magnificent as businesslike. It was as perfectly equipped and as efficient as a great city hospital.

Men on bicycles with a coil of insulated wire slung between them strung a field telephone from tree to tree so the general commanding could converse with any part of the 50 miles long column.

The whole army never sleeps. When half is resting the other half is advancing. The soldiers are treated as if they were valuable machines which must be speeded up to the highest possible efficiency. Therefore, they are well fed, well shod, well clothed, and worked as a negro teamster works mules.

Only men who are well cared for can march 35 miles a day week in and week out. Only once did I see a man mistreated. A sentry on duty in front of the general headquarters failed to salute an officer with sufficient promptness, whereupon the officer lashed him again and again across the face with a riding whip. Though welts rose with every blow, the soldier stood rigidly at attention and never quivered.

Finally Reaches Von Boehn.

It was considerably past midday and we were within a few miles of the French frontier when we saw a guidon, which signifies the presence of the head of the army, planted at the entrance of a splendid old chateau. As we passed through the iron gates and whirled up the stately tree-lined drive and drew up in front of the terrace a dozen officers in staff uniform came running out to meet us. For a few minutes it felt as if we were being welcomed at a country house in America instead of at the headquarters of the German army in the field. So perfect was the field telephone service that the staff had been able to keep in touch with our progress along the lines and were waiting dinner for us.

After dinner we grouped ourselves on the terrace in the self-conscious attitude people always assume when having their pictures taken, and Thompson made some photographs. They probably are the only ones of this war, at least of a German general and an American war correspondent who was not under arrest.

Then we gathered about the table, on which was spread a staff map of the war area, and got down to serious business. The general began by asserting that the stories of atrocities perpetrated on Belgian noncombatants were a tissue of lies.

"Look at these officers about you," he said. "They are gentlemen like yourself. Look at the soldiers marching past in the road out there. Most of them are fathers of families. Surely you don't believe they would do the things they have been accused of."

Explains Aerschot Crimes.

"Three days ago, general," I said, "I was in Aerschot. The whole town now is but a ghastly, blackened, blood-stained ruin."

"When we entered Aerschot the son of the burgomaster came into the room, drew a revolver, and assassinated my chief of staff," the general said. "What followed was only retribution. The townspeople only got what they deserved."

"But why wreak your vengeance on women and children?"

"None has been killed," the general asserted positively.

"I am sorry to contradict you, general," I asserted with equal positiveness, "but I have myself seen their mutilated bodies. So has Mr. Ilsley, secretary of the American legation at Brussels, who was present during the destruction of Louvain."

"Of course, there always is danger of women and children being killed during street fighting," said General von Boehn, "if they insist on coming into the street. It is unfortunate, but it is war."

Rape Another Cause.

"But how about a woman's body I saw, with her hands and feet cut off? How about a white-haired man and his son whom I helped bury outside Haecht, who had been killed merely because a [illegible]

Explains Zeppelin Bombs.

"Zeppelins have orders to drop their bombs only on fortifications and soldiers," he answered.

"As a matter of fact," I remarked, "they only destroyed private houses and civilians, several of them women. If one of those bombs had dropped 200 yards nearer my hotel I wouldn't be smoking one of your excellent cigars today."

"This is a calamity which I thank God didn't happen."

"If you feel for my safety as deeply as that, general," I said earnestly, "you can make quite sure of my coming to no harm by sending no more Zeppelins."

"Well," he said, laughing, "we will think about it." He continued gravely:

"I trust you will tell the American people through your paper what I have told you today. Let them hear our side of this atrocity business. It is only justice that they should be made familiar with both sides of the question."

I have quoted my conversation with the general as nearly verbatim as I can remember it. I have no comments to make. I will leave it to my readers to decide for themselves just how convincing are the answers of the German general staff to the Belgian accusations.

Photographs German Army.

Before we began our conversation I asked the general if Mr. Thompson might be permitted to take photographs of the great army passing. Five minutes later Thompson was whirled away in a military motor car cicerboned by an army officer who had attended the army school at Fort Riley. It seems they stopped the car beside the road in a place where the light was good, and when Thompson saw approaching a regiment or battery of which he wished a picture he would tell the officer, whereupon the officer would blow his whistle, and the whole column would halt.

"Just wait a few minutes until the dust settles," Thompson would remark, nonchalantly lighting a cigarette, and the Ninth Imperial army, whose columns stretched over the countryside as far as the eye could see would stand in its tracks until the air was sufficiently clear to get a picture.

Thus far the only one who has succeeded in halting the German army is the little photographer from Kansas.

Show Thompson Gunnery.

As a field battery of the Imperial guard rumbled past, Thompson made some remark about the accuracy of the American gunners at Vera Cruz.

"Let us show you what our gunners can do," said the officer, and gave an order. There were more orders, a perfect volley of them, a bugle shrilled harshly, the eight horses strained against their collars, the drivers cracked their whips, and the gun left the road, bounded across a ditch, and swung into position in an adjacent field.

On a knoll three miles away an ancient windmill was beating the air with its huge wings. The shell hit the windmill fair and square and tore it into splinters.

"Good work," Thompson observed critically; "if those fellows of yours keep on they'll be able to get a job in the American navy after the war."

"In all the annals of modern war I do not believe there is a parallel to this American war photographer hailing with an upraised, peremptory hand the advancing army, leisurely photographing regiment after regiment, and then having a field gun of the Imperial guard go into action solely to gratify his curiosity."

Find Brother Leaders.

According to a dispatch from a Dally Mail correspondent in Rome the Germans have been able with seemingly uncanny precision to locate the headquarters of the British general staff, no matter where it moved.

ELDER BOYS TO MEET IN OCTOBER

Conference Will Be Held in Birmingham October 16 to 18—Many Expected to Be Present.

TO TRAIN BOYS FOR LEADERSHIP

In Sunday School Work Is Object of Meeting—Membership of Conference Limited to 400.

Montgomery.—It was announced at the State headquarters of the Alabama Sunday School Association in Montgomery that a State-wide conference of "older boys" will be held in Birmingham on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 16 to 18, inclusive, with John L. Alexander of Chicago as the leading speaker.

The purpose of the conference will be to enlist the older "Teen-Age" boys, from 15 to 21, in the work of the Sunday school, and to train them for Christian leadership. The membership in the conference is limited to 400, and the delegates will consist of picked boys, chosen from the leading Sunday schools of the State.

Delegates may be appointed by the superintendent of the Sunday school and the names sent to the Boys' Club, 213 Farley Building, Birmingham, until the limit of 400 is reached, after which no more registrations will be received. The present outlook is that the registration will be completed within the next six or eight days.

The three days' program of the conference provides for every phase of the boy's life—physical, mental, social, spiritual. A "Grand Indian Council"-will be held, led by Mr. Alexander, addresses on boys' work will be made by boys themselves, and a "Forward Step" meeting for deeper personal consecration, held on the closing afternoon.

This will be one of the first State-wide Older Boys' Conferences ever held in this country, and Sunday school leaders throughout the country are looking forward to it with much interest.

NO OCCASION FOR PESSIMISM.

Head of Convict Board Discusses Situation After Visit Through North.

Montgomery.—There is little occasion for depression on the part of the southern farmer as a result of the European war, nor is there any need to consider with gloomy forebodings the cotton situation, declares Hartwell Douglass, president of the state board of convict inspectors, who is back in Montgomery after a short business trip to New York. Mr. Douglass accompanied the governor to the big eastern metropolis about ten days ago and was the first to return home.

Regarding the cotton situation, Mr. Douglass states that a feeling of optimism prevails in New York. Bankers and leading business men of the east are taking keen interest in the south's welfare, according to Mr. Douglass and believe there is no need to be discouraged or to feel that the country is on the verge of a financial panic.

"The buy-a-bale movement has been received with much favor in New York," said Mr. Douglass, "and the impression prevails there that the plan is probably the best that has been suggested as a protection to the south's most important resource. While in New York I talked with many leading financiers and other business men who had purchased one or more bales of cotton and was surprised to learn that the scheme had been received there with so much favor. One of the leading bankers of the city informed me that a customer of the bank had authorized the purchase of 5,000 bales of cotton at 10 cents per pound to be stored in a warehouse.

Mr. Douglass was asked if he had not suggested that the cotton be purchased in Alabama.

"To be sure I did," replied Mr. Douglass, "but I was told that the cotton would be bought in Memphis. I also tried to find out the name of the man who had ordered 5,000 bales, but without success."

WHEAT SUGGESTION POPULAR

According to Weekly Bulletin of Agricultural Department.

Montgomery.—Alabama farmers have responded to the request that they plant certain portions of their farms in wheat this winter and the prospects are bright that 50,000 bushels required to supply a new flour mill in Montgomery will be raised, is declared in the weekly bulletin of the State Department of Agriculture issued by Captain Reuben F. Kolb, Commissioner.

SECURING COTTON STATISTICS.

Walker Asks Banks Amount of Money They Are Lending on Cotton.

Montgomery.—Alex E. Walker, state superintendent of banks, has addressed telegrams to all the state banks asking for information about the amount of money they are lending on cotton and on what terms. The telegrams were sent out by the state bank superintendent following a request for such information from John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency.

The statistics which Superintendent Walker will collect will be used by the government in attempting to arrive at a solution of the cotton problem. The various national banks have been called upon by the government to report on cotton conditions.

Superintendent Walker asked the following questions in his telegram:

How much in the aggregate are you lending on notes directly secured by cotton?

How much are you lending on notes or obligations given for the production and marketing of cotton?

What is the average rate of interest you are charging on such loans?

At what price per pound are you lending on cotton?

At what price per pound is spot cotton selling in your community?

GRAVES NAMES COMMITTEEMEN

Designates Campaign Committee of Party Nominees for Offices.

Montgomery.—Gen. Bibb Graves, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, designated the campaign committee of the party nominees for state and congressional offices in the November election.

W. D. Nesbitt of Birmingham was named chairman of the committee, with Col. R. A. Mitchell of Etowah and Judge J. C. Kumpe of Lawrence, members of the committee from the state-at-large. The other members of the committee include one from each congressional district.

The committee elected by General Graves is as follows: Chairman, W. D. Nesbitt of Jefferson; state at large, R. A. Mitchell of Etowah, state-at-large, J. C. Kumpe of Lawrence; first district, W. H Lindsey of Choctaw; second district, John Gamble of Pike; third district, W. H. Morris of Geneva; fourth district, E. W. Pettus of Dallas; fifth district, J. C. Wood of Lowndes; sixth district, George A. Searcy of Tuscaloosa; seventh district, R. L. Barnes of Marshall; eighth district, A. G. Patterson of Morgan, ninth district, George B. Tarrant of Jefferson.

STATE BRIEFS.

Births in Talladega 32 and deaths 16 in August.

In Talladega county 50 cents per 100 is the price of cotton picking.

State university has passed all previous records in number of students.

Perry county farmers will not sell cotton at 7 cents.

Dale county will plant a large acreage of oats.

Covington county is going to put $600 on its roads.

Dale farmers are holding their cotton on the farms.

There are 15,500 Confederate pensioners in Alabama.

Dr. L. L. Stanley will build a flour mill in Greene county.

Contract has been let for the state road from Lafayette to Oakbowery.

It is about as important to hold the cotton seed as the cotton. In some places only $12 a ton is offered.

In Sumter there are 4502 farm homes and of these 482 are occupied by the owners and free of mortgage. Renters occupy 3768 farm homes.

Omer Collins, charged with murder at Gadsden, had his case continued until the January term.

There are 4501 farm homes in Talladega and 1169 of these are owned by the people who live in them and have no mortgage. Only 569 farmers are mortgaged.

Several schools in the state have decided to teach on Saturdays and have a holiday on Monday.

DRIVEN TO ATROCITIES, GERMAN COMMANDER TELLS CORRESPONDENT

Today General von Boehn, commanding the Ninth Imperial field army, acting mouthpiece of the German general staff, has asked me to place before the American people the German version of the incidents in question.

So far as I am aware I am the only correspondent in the present war who has motored for an entire day through the ranks of the advancing German army, who has dined as a guest of the German army commander and his staff, and who has had the progress of the army on the march arrested in order to obtain photographs of the German troops.

This unusual experience came about in a curious and roundabout way.

Invited by General Von Boehn.

After an encounter in the streets of Ghent last Tuesday between a German military automobile and a Belgian armored car, in which two German soldiers were wounded, American Vice Consul Van Hee persuaded the burgomaster to accompany him immediately to the headquarters of General von Boehn to explain the circumstances and ask that the city should not be held responsible for the unfortunate affair.

In the course of the conversation with Mr. Van Hee General von Boehn remarked that copies of papers containing articles written by Alexander Powell criticising the German treatment of the Belgian civil population had come to his attention and said he regretted he could not have an opportunity to talk with Powell and give him the German version.

Mr. Van Hee said by a fortunate coincidence I happened to be in Ghent, whereupon the general asked him to bring me out to dinner the following day, and issued a safe conduct through the German lines.

Though nothing was said about a photographer, I took with me Photographer Donald Thompson. As there was some doubt regarding the propriety of taking a Belgian driver into the German lines, I drove the car myself.

In Midst of Kaiser's Men.

Half a mile out of Sottehem our road debouched into the great highway which leads through Lille to Paris. We suddenly found ourselves in the midst of the German army. It was a sight never to be forgotten. Far as the eye could see stretched solid columns of marching men, pressing westward, ever westward.

The army was advancing in three mighty columns along three parallel roads. These dense masses of moving men in their elusive blue gray uniforms looked for all the world like three monstrous serpents crawling across the countryside.

American flags which fluttered from our windshield proved a passport in themselves and as we approached the close locked ranks they parted to let us through.

For five solid hours, traveling always at express train speed, we motored between the walls of the marching men. In time the constant shuffle of boots and the rhythmic swing of gray-clad arms and shoulders grew maddening and I became obsessed with the fear that I would send the car plowing into the human wedge on either side.

Miles of German Soldiers.

It seemed that the ranks never would end, and as far as we were concerned they never did, for we never saw or heard the end of that mighty column.

We passed regiment after regiment, brigade after brigade of infantry, and after them Hussars, uhlans, cuirassiers, field batteries, more infantry, more field guns, ambulances, then siege guns, each drawn by 30 horses, engineers, telephone corps, pontoon wagons, armored motor cars, more uhlans, the sunlight gleaming on their forest of lances, more infantry in spiked helmets, all sweeping by as irresistible as a mighty river, with their faces turned toward France.

This was the Ninth field army and composed the very flower of the empire, including the magnificent troops of the Imperial guard. It was first and last a fighting army. The men were all young. They struck me as being keen as razors and as hard as nails. The horses were magnificent. They could not have been better. The field guns of the Imperial guard were almost twice the size of any used by our army.

Thirty-two Horses Draw Howitzer.

But the most interesting of all, of course, were the five gigantic howitzers, each drawn by 16 pairs of horses. These howitzers can tear a city to pieces at a distance of a dozen miles.

Every contingency seems to have been foreseen. Nothing was left to chance or overlooked. Maps of Belgium, with which every soldier is provided, are the finest examples of topography I have ever seen. Every path, every farm building, every change of level, and every twig is shown.

At one place a motor army wagon containing complete printing outfit was known to break down and the morning edition of Deutsche Kreiger Zeitung was being printed and distributed to the passing men. It contained nothing but accounts of German victories, of which I never had heard, but it seemed greatly to cheer the men.

Field kitchens with smoke pouring from their stovepipe funnels rumbled down the lines, serving steaming soup and coffee to the marching men, who held out tin cups and had them filled without once breaking step.

Covered Wagons Hide Machine Guns.

There were wagons filled with army cobblers, sitting cross-legged on the floor, who were mending soldiers' shoes just as if they were back in their little shops in the fatherland. Other wagons, to all appearances ordinary two wheeled farm carts, hid under their arched canvas covers nine machine guns which could instantly be brought into action.

The medical corps was as magnificent as businesslike. It was as perfectly equipped and as efficient as a great city hospital.

Men on bicycles with a coil of insulated wire slung between them strung a field telephone from tree to tree so the general commanding could converse with any part of the 50 miles long column.

The whole army never sleeps. When half is resting the other half is advancing. The soldiers are treated as if they were valuable machines which must be speeded up to the highest possible efficiency. Therefore they are well fed, well shod, well clothed, and worked as a negro teamster works mules.

Only men who are well cared for can march 35 miles a day week in and week out. Only once did I see a man mistreated. A sentry on duty in front of the general headquarters failed to salute an officer with sufficient promptness, whereupon the officer lashed him again and again across the face with a riding whip. Though welts rose with every blow, the soldier stood rigidly at attention and never quivered.

Finally Reaches Von Boehn.

It was considerably past midday and we were within a few miles of the French frontier when we saw a guidon, which signifies the presence of the head of the army, planted at the entrance of a splendid old chateau. As we passed through the iron gates and whirled up the stately tree-lined drive and drew up in front of the terrace a dozen officers in staff uniform came running out to meet us. For a few minutes it felt as if we were being welcomed at a country house in America instead of at the headquarters of the German army in the field. So perfect was the field telephone service that the staff had been able to keep in touch with our progress along the lines and were waiting dinner for us.

After dinner we grouped ourselves on the terrace in the self-conscious attitude people always assume when having their pictures taken, and Thompson made some photographs. They probably are the only ones of this war, at least of a German general and an American war correspondent who was not under arrest.

Then we gathered about the table, on which was spread a staff map of the war area, and got down to serious business. The general began by asserting that the stories of atrocities perpetrated on Belgian noncombatants were a tissue of lies.

"Look at these officers about you," he said. "They are gentlemen like yourself. Look at the soldiers marching past in the road out there. Most of them are fathers of families. Surely you don't believe they would do the things they have been accused of."

Explains Aerschot Crimes.

"Three days ago, general," I said, "I was in Aerschot. The whole town now is but a ghastly, blackened, blood-stained ruin."

"When we entered Aerschot the son of the burgomaster came into the room, drew a revolver, and assassinated my chief of staff," the general said. "What followed was only retribution. The townspeople only got what they deserved."

"But why wreak your vengeance on women and children?"

"None has been killed," the general asserted positively.

"I am sorry to contradict you, general," I asserted with equal positiveness, "but I have myself seen their mutilated bodies. So has Mr. Gibson, secretary of the American legation at Brussels, who was present during the destruction of Louvain."

"Of course, there always is danger of women and children being killed during street fighting," said General von Boehn, "if they insist on coming into the street. It is unfortunate, but it is war."

Data Startles General.

"But how about a woman's body I saw, with her hands and feet cut off? How about a white-haired man and his son whom I helped bury outside Senlez, who had been killed shortly before a retreating English unit shot a German soldier, cutting their bodies to pieces?" I asked.

There were 21 bayonet wounds on the old man's body. I counted them. How about the little girl five years old who was shot while in her mother's arms by a uhlan, which I saw myself?"

[illegible] the general asked [illegible] name of my date.

"Such things are horrible, it is true," he said. "Of course our soldiers, like soldiers of all armies, sometimes get out of hand and do things which we would never tolerate if we knew it. At Louvain, for example, I sentenced two soldiers to 12 years' penal servitude apiece for assaulting a woman."

Louvain Library Incident.

"Apropos of Louvain," I remarked, "why did you destroy the library? It was one of the literary storehouses of the world."

"We regretted that as much as any one else," answered the general. "It caught fire from burning houses and we could not save it."

"But why did you burn Louvain at all?" I asked.

"Because the townspeople fired on our troops. We actually found machine guns in some of the houses." And smashing his fist down on the table, he continued: "Whenever civilians fire upon our troops we will teach them a lasting lesson. If women and children insist on getting in the way of bullets, so much the worse for the women and children."

"How do you explain the bombardment of Antwerp by Zeppelins?" I queried.

Explains Zeppelin Bombs.

"Zeppelins have orders to drop their bombs only on fortifications and soldiers," he answered.

"As a matter of fact," I remarked, "they only destroyed private houses and civilians, several of them women. If one of those bombs had dropped 200 yards nearer my hotel I wouldn't be smoking one of your excellent cigars today."

"This is a calamity which I thank God didn't happen."

"If you feel for my safety as deeply as that, general," I said earnestly, "you can make quite sure of my coming to no harm by sending no more Zeppelins."

"Well," he said, laughing, "we will think about it." He continued gravely:

"I trust you will tell the American people through your paper what I have told you today. Let them hear our side of this atrocity business. It is only justice that they should be made familiar with both sides of the question."

I have quoted my conversation with the general as nearly verbatim as I can remember it. I have no comments to make. I will leave it to my readers to decide for themselves just how convincing are the answers of the German general staff to the Belgian accusations.

Photographs German Army.

Before we began our conversation I asked the general if Mr. Thompson might be permitted to take photographs of the great army passing. Five minutes later Thompson was whirled away in a military motor car cicerroned by an army officer who had attended the army school at Fort Riley. It seems they stopped the car beside the road in a place where the light was good, and when Thompson saw approaching a regiment or battery of which he wished a picture he would tell the officer, whereupon the officer would blow his whistle, and the whole column would halt.

"Just wait a few minutes until the dust settles," Thompson would remark, nonchalantly lighting a cigarette, and the Ninth imperial army, whose columns stretched over the countryside as far as the eye could see would stand in its tracks until the air was sufficiently clear to get a picture.

Thus far the only one who has succeeded in halting the German army is the little photographer from Kansas.

Show Thompson Gunnery.

As a field battery of the Imperial guard rumbled past, Thompson made some remark about the accuracy of the American gunners at Vera Cruz.

"Let us show you what our gunners can do," said the officer, and gave an order. There were more orders, a perfect volley of them, a bugle shrilled harshly, the sight horses strained against their collars, the drivers cracked their whips, and the gun left the road, bounded across a ditch, and swung into position in an adjacent field.

On a knoll three miles away an ancient windmill was beating the air with its huge wings. The shell hit the windmill fair and square and tore it into splinters.

"Good work," Thompson observed critically; "if those fellows of yours keep on they'll be able to get a job in the American navy after the war."

In all the annals of modern war I do not believe there is a parallel to this American war photographer halting with an upraised, peremptory hand the advancing army, leisurely photographing regiment after regiment, and then having a field gun of the Imperial guard go into action solely to gratify his curiosity.

"OLDER BOYS" TO MEET IN OCTOBER

Conference Will Be Held in Birmingham October 16 to 18—Many Expected to Be Present.

TO TRAIN BOYS FOR LEADERSHIP

In Sunday School Work Is Object of Meeting—Membership of Conference Limited to 400.

Montgomery.—It was announced at the State headquarters of the Alabama Sunday School Association in Montgomery that a State-wide conference of "older boys" will be held in Birmingham on Friday, Saturday and Sunday, October 16 to 18, inclusive, with John L. Alexander of Chicago as the leading speaker.

The purpose of the conference will be to enlist the older "Teen-Age" boys, from 15 to 21, in the work of the Sunday school, and to train them for Christian leadership. The membership in the conference is limited to 400, and the delegates will consist of picked boys, chosen from the leading Sunday schools of the State.

Delegates may be appointed by the superintendent of the Sunday school and the names sent to the Boys' Club, 213 Farley Building, Birmingham, until the limit of 400 is reached, after which no more registrations will be received. The present outlook is that the registration will be completed within the next six or eight days.

The three days' program of the conference provides for every phase of the boy's life—physical, mental, social, spiritual. A "Grand Indian Council" will be held, led by Mr. Alexander, addresses on boys' work will be made by boys themselves, and a "Forward Step" meeting for deeper personal consecration, held on the closing afternoon.

This will be one of the first State-wide Older Boys' Conferences ever held in this country, and Sunday school leaders throughout the country are looking forward to it with much interest.

NO OCCASION FOR PESSIMISM.

Head of Convict Board Discusses Situation After Visit Through North.

Montgomery.—There is little occasion for depression on the part of the southern farmer as a result of the European war, nor is there any need to consider with gloomy forebodings the cotton situation, declares Hartwell Douglass, president of the state board of convict inspectors, who is back in Montgomery after a short business trip to New York. Mr. Douglass accompanied the governor to the big eastern metropolis about ten days ago and was the first to return home.

Regarding the cotton situation, Mr. Douglass states that a feeling of optimism prevails in New York. Bankers and leading business men of the east are taking keen interest in the south's welfare, according to Mr. Douglass and believe there is no need to be discouraged or to feel that the country is on the verge of a financial panic.

"The buy-a-bale movement has been received with much favor in New York," said Mr. Douglass, "and the impression prevails there that the plan is probably the best that has been suggested as a protection to the south's most important resource. While in New York I talked with many leading financiers and other business men who had purchased one or more bales of cotton and was surprised to learn that the scheme had been received there with so much favor. One of the leading bankers of the city informed me that a customer of the bank had authorized the purchase of 5,000 bales of cotton at 10 cents per pound to be stored in a warehouse."

Mr. Douglass was asked if he had not suggested that the cotton be purchased in Alabama.

"To be sure I did," replied Mr. Douglass, "but I was told that the cotton would be bought in Memphis. I also tried to find out the name of the man who had ordered 5,000 bales, but without success."

COTTON ASSOCIATION MEETS.

State Convention Held in Montgomery September 22.

Montgomery.—Pursuant to a call of the president of the state division, W. H. Seymour, several hundred delegates attended the state convention here on September 22 of the Southern Cotton Association. The present low price of cotton and methods leading to the relief of [illegible] were the

WHEAT SUGGESTION POPULAR

According to Weekly Bulletin of Agricultural Department.

Montgomery.—Alabama farmers have responded to the request that they plant certain portions of their farms in wheat this winter and the prospects are bright that 50,000 bushels required to supply a new flour mill in Montgomery will be raised, is declared in the weekly bulletin of the State Department of Agriculture issued by Captain Reuben F. Kolb, Commissioner.

SECURING COTTON STATISTICS.

Walker Asks Banks Amount of Money They Are Lending on Cotton.

Montgomery.—Alex E. Walker, state superintendent of banks, has addressed telegrams to all the state banks asking for information about the amount of money they are lending on cotton and on what terms. The telegrams were sent out by the state bank superintendent following a request for such information from John Skelton Williams, comptroller of the currency.

The statistics which Superintendent Walker will collect will be used by the government in attempting to arrive at a solution of the cotton problem. The various national banks have been called upon by the government to report on cotton conditions.

Superintendent Walker asked the following questions in his telegram:

How much in the aggregate are you lending on notes directly secured by cotton?

How much are you lending on notes or obligations given for the production and marketing of cotton?

What is the average rate of interest you are charging on such loans?

At what price per pound are you lending on cotton?

At what price per pound is spot cotton selling in your community?

GRAVES NAMES COMMITTEEMEN

Designates Campaign Committee of Party Nominees for Offices.

Montgomery.—Gen. Bibb Graves, chairman of the state democratic executive committee, designated the campaign committee of the party nominees for state and congressional offices in the November election.

W. D. Nesbitt of Birmingham was named chairman of the committee, with Col. R. A. Mitchell of Etowah and Judge J. C. Kumpe of Lawrence, members of the committee from the state-at-large. The other members of the committee include one from each congressional district.

The committee elected by General Graves is as follows: Chairman, W. D. Nesbitt of Jefferson; state at large, R. A. Mitchell of Etowah, state-at-large, J. C. Kumpe of Lawrence; first district, W. H. Lindsey of Choctaw; second district, John Gamble of Pike; third district, W. H. Morris of Geneva; fourth district, E. W. Pettus of Dallas; fifth district, J. C. Wood of Lowndes; sixth district, George A. Searcy of Tuscaloosa; seventh district, R. L. Barnes of Marshall; eighth district, A. G. Patterson of Morgan, ninth district, George B. Tarrant of Jefferson.

STATE BRIEFS.

Births in Talladega 52 and deaths 16 in August.

In Talladega county 50 cents per 100 is the price of cotton picking.

State university has passed all previous records in number of students.

Perry county farmers will not sell cotton at 7 cents.

Dale county will plant a large acreage of oats.

Covington county is going to put $600 on its roads.

Dale farmers are holding their cotton on the farms.

There are 15,500 Confederate pensioners in Alabama.

Dr. L. L. Starkey will build a flour mill in Greene county.

Contract has been let for the state road from Lafayette to Oakbowery.

It is about as important to hold the cotton seed as the cotton. In some places only $12 a ton is offered.

In Sumter there are 4505 farm homes and of these 483 are occupied by the owners and free of mortgage. Eastern county 3703 farm homes.

Opey Coffee, charged with murder at Gadsden, had his case continued until the January term.

There are 4581 farm homes in Talladega and 7143 of these are owned by the people who live in them and have no mortgage. Only 581 farm homes are mortgaged.

Several schools in the state have decided to teach on Saturdays and take a holiday on Monday.

ALLIED ARMIES ARE REINFORCED

Forces of British And French Fighting Against Germans At Aisne Greatly Strengthened

RUSSIANS CHECK GERMANS

East Prussia—Begins Assault on Last Austrian Stronghold in Galicia

Reinforcements have reached the forces of the allies fighting against the Germans in the battle of the Aisne in the north of France. For nearly ten days these two great bodies of men have struggled against great odds for supremacy. Thousands of lives have been sacrificed by both the allied armies and the Germans in their endeavor to gain an advantage. The Germans are strongly entrenched in the mountains in the region of the Aisne, northwest of Paris. This battle line extends to the river Meuse, north of the Verdun. In East Prussia the Russians have checked the advance of the Germans. They have also begun an assault on the fort at Przemysl, the last stronghold of the Austrians in Galicia.

Allies Win Battle of Marne.

When the German armies invaded France from Belgium they swept the country before them and pushed steadily forward until they were almost under the walls of Paris. Then the tide of battle turned. The allies were the pursuers and the Germans the pursued. This was known as the battle of the Marne. The battle ended when the Germans had been driven north of the Aisne rivers and the allies were the victors.

Three Million Men Engaged.

It is predicted that the battle of the Aisne will be even more appalling than the battle of the Marne. Military experts estimate that there are nearly 3,000,000 men assembled on a battle front of about 110 miles long. Thousands of lives more will be sacrificed in the attempt of the armies of the defenders to push the invaders out of France. The Germans have left a sufficient force in Belgium to protect their retreat through that country in the event they are forced to fall back.

Reinforcements For Germans.

Word has been received that Germany has recalled the armies she sent into the north of France and Belgium to fight Prussia to check the onward march of the Czar's armies through East Prussia, and will send them to the assistance of the Germans in France.

Move For Peace Is On.

The negotiations that have been going on between the United States and Germany with regard to a movement for peace have given little encouragement. Von Bethmann-Hollwegg, the imperial chancellor of Germany, has suggested to United States Ambassador Gerard at Berlin that the United States secure terms of peace from Great Britain, France and Russia. Germany," he said, "wants permanent peace and protection from further war-fare." President Wilson announced he would continue his efforts along this line.

Russians Moving Forward.

Undaunted by the former defeat at Konigsberg, in East Prussia, the Russians are preparing to take advantage of the withdrawal of a large portion of the German soldiers in that vicinity, who have been ordered to the relief of the Kaiser's armies in France, and are planning another assault on Konigsberg. The Russians are also enjoying victories against the Austro-German armies in Poland. The armies of the Czar in Galicia and Poland are already marching on Berlin and in the event they are successful in defeating the Germans in East Prussia it will be only a short time before there will be three great armies pushing their way to Berlin.

Fighting Spreads to Asia

The European war during the past week spread to Asia and Africa. The Japanese, who declared war against Germany several weeks ago, have begun an attack on the German possessions in China. The British forces in Africa have begun a campaign against the Germans in Africa.

Austria In Deep Gloom.

The deepest gloom overspreads Austria. The government has called the last reserves to the colors. News of victories over the Servians was given out to the people of Austria, but this has not helped to dispell the depression caused by the continual defeats suffered by their soldiers fighting the Russians in Galicia. Vienna lives in constant fear that the Russians will change their course in Galicia and instead of continuing on to Berlin they will encircle the Carpathians and besiege the capital of the dual-monarchy.

Strike for War Wages

San Francisco.—The steamer Mariposa, of the Union line, left port for Australia after having been delayed thirty-six hours by a "war strike" of stokers. The stokers went aboard at—hours before sailing time and demanded—twenty-five pounds sterling in wages for the return trip for "war risk." [illegible] refused and they all went ashore. [illegible] were arrested for disorderly conduct. Company officials [illegible] Walter Raleigh, who obtained [illegible] members. They went [illegible] the old rates.

HERE AND THERE

On the Battle Front.—The western wing of the German line has been thrust back about seven miles as a sequel to continuous fighting day and night.

Both armies, despite almost superhuman fatigues, show the utmost determination not to yield an inch of ground without a terrible struggle, but the fresher troops at the disposal of the allied commanders have gradually forced the Germans to recede.

London.—The unparalleled struggle on the river Aisne, which commenced about a week ago, has developed into siege operations. The two armies, strongly entrenched, are carrying on an artillery duel, while the infantry makes attacks and counter attacks which are in the nature of sorties from a besieged fortress.

Occasionally one or the other gains a little ground, but it is so little that the opposing forces remain in their trenches or take up positions in new entrenchments immediately behind those from which they are driven.

It is now becoming the conviction of military men that nothing but outflanking movements can have any serious effect on either army. The Germans, according to their own official report, have been strongly reinforced, both on the right, where Gen. Von Kluck is making such a stubborn stand in almost impregnable positions on the hills north of the Aisne, and in the center, where the Germans are making almost superhuman efforts to recapture Rheims. It is probably the desire to recapture this town at all costs because of its importance as the key to important communications that will improve all their connections for attack or retreat, that has led the Germans to continue the bombardment which has resulted in the destruction of the famous cathedral.

Austria Faces Bankruptcy

Vienna.—The Vienna papers continue to maintain silence regarding the fighting in Galicia and Servia. They seem, however, to draw encouragement from General Danki's order of the day which, after praising his valorous troops, admits they have been forced to abandon the offensive and face overwhelming numbers.

The newspapers are appealing daily for more doctors and surgical supplies. The increase in the number of cases of dysentery is causing apprehension.

All available public buildings are being converted into hospitals for the treatment of wounded.

Commercial depression is rapidly increasing and many industries are threatened with ruin. The government is resorting to extreme measures to prevent wholesale bankruptcy. A decree has been published providing for official supervision and guardianship over insolvent concerns. Several industries already have been forced to appeal to the government for special aid. The textile and clothing branches are among the chief sufferers.

Kaiser Guarded by Thousands

London.—The German emperor has taken up his quarters in Luxemburg, according to a Paris dispatch to the Exchange Telegraph company. Thousands of troops are stationed around the legation where he resides. To guard against possible raids by French aviators, a squadron of aeroplanes is in constant readiness to beat off attacks.

Methods Chinese Jailed

Honolulu.—Seventy members of the Chinese crews of the German refugee steamers Loongmoon, Staatssekretar Kraethe and Governeur Jaeschke, of the Hamburg-American line, were imprisoned here on mutiny charges made by the captains of the vessels. Jail accommodations are taken by the number of officials under arrest, the three captains of the German steamers say they fear further trouble from the 156 Chinese still aboard their ships. They said the Chinese had refused to stay aboard any longer.

Germans Destroy Famous Cathedral

London.—The Rheims correspondent of the Daily Mail sends this story of the damage wrought in the cathedral there:

"The magnificent cathedral of Rheims, which was a national monument of universal fame, now is no more than an empty shell of charred and blackened wall. It is not yet known to what extent its stone work has been weakened by the flames or whether later it can be restored, but it will never be what it was before.

"The fire started between 4 and 5 Sunday afternoon, after shells had been crashing into the town all day. Over five hundred fell between early morning and sunset. A quarter of the city, several hundred yards square, was set afire, the flames spreading from street to street.

"The cathedral had been turned into a hospital for the German wounded.

Women Urge Peace Movement

Washington.—President Wilson had before him for consideration a strong appeal that he lead a movement to end the war in Europe, presented to him in behalf of fully one million women, members of suffrage organizations in thirteen countries, including nearly all of those engaged in the conflict. The plea was laid before the president by Mrs. Carrie Chapman Catt of New York, president of the International Woman Suffrage Alliance, and Madame Rosika Schwimmer of Hungary, secretary of the alliance. Requests that President Wilson be urged to take steps to help stop the warfare were sent to the headquarters of the alliance in London by suffrage associations in Australia, Canada, Denmark, France, Holland, Hungary, Italy, Norway, Russia, Sweden, Great Britain, west Germany and the United States.

Kaiser Awards Many Iron Crosses

Berlin.—Denial is given the report of the death of Col. Von Reuter, who was in command of the German regiment at the time of the Zabern affair.

Herr Bassermann, the noted national liberator, member of the reichstag, who is a corps captain, has been awarded the iron cross and promoted to major for bravery.

Prince August William, who is serving in a minor rank, has been awarded the iron cross. All the sons of the German emperor, except Prince Adalbert, who is in the navy, have been decorated.

"According to a wounded German officer, now in a hospital at Cracow, the Austrians and Hungarians fought the Russians with a courage and pugnacity defying description.

"One must see them," he said, "to appreciate the gigantic tasks they have performed."

Shower Arrows Upon Germans

Berlin.—A shower of steel arrows, released by French aviators over a mile high in the air, is the most modern terror of war, according to accounts of German wounded, printed in the Munich Medical Weekly. The arrows, which are of pressed steel, from four to six inches long and a quarter of an inch in diameter, have a heavy pointed head and a skeletonized shaft. The arrows seem to have caused more surprise than actual damage. Only one man was killed by a head wound in the attack described, the others causing flesh wounds.

Germany Urges Party's Aid

Rome.—Germany continues to try to influence public opinion with all kinds of publications; the latest being a pamphlet in Italian which has been widely distributed and bears the title, "The Truth About the War." Among the collaborators of the publication are Count Ernest Von Reventlow, military expert; Maximilian Harden, editor of the Zukunft, organ of the German socialists, and Joseph Widmann, Geneva correspondent of the Berlin Handelsblatt and Journal de Geneve, members of the parliament.

DEVERS' REPORT IS MADE PUBLIC

United States Army Officer Tells of Mutiny of Battery B Alabama National Guard.

DOINGS AT STATE CAPITAL

Proceedings of Public Events—News of An Important Nature Given.

—Montgomery.

Major L. S. Dorrance, of Birmingham, commander of the three batteries of Alabama artillery, made public the official report of Lieutenant J. L. Devers, United States army, on incidents connected with the entraining of Battery B of Montgomery, at Mobile, at the conclusion of the annual encampment several weeks ago. Lieutenant Devers served at the camp as instruction officer.

According to the United States army officer, the members of the Montgomery battery were practically in a state of mutiny, and indicated that the "military discipline was nearly non-existent. Lieutenant Devers further said in his report that it "is difficult to see in what particular the organization is of any value to either the state or federal government."

Major Dorrance stated that the dismissal of the battery from the service of the National Guard was based solely upon Lieutenant Devers' report and upon the recommendation of Major General Wood of the United States army.

Major General Wood declared in the order issued at Governor's Island, that the battery was mustered out of service because of "manifest unfitness and incompetency of the non-commissioned officers of this battery, the general lack of discipline, training and efficiency."

Capt. Samuel Roswald, commanding the battery, insists that the battery has been dismissed without the investigation which he has requested and and which he again demanded in a statement made public.

Schools Make Monthly Reports.

Monthly reports will hereafter be filed in the office of the State Department of Education by the County high schools, the State Normal schools and the district agricultural schools, according to an announcement made by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education.

These reports have not been required heretofore. In the reports the executive officers will tell of the work being done and of its monthly progress. He will also be required to set forth the needs of the school and other details of school work.

There are fifty-three county high schools, ten agricultural schools and six State Normal schools in Alabama.

Etowah Jail In Good Shape.

Etowah's county jail is in satisfactory condition and the prisoners are well treated, according to a report made by John D. Adams, chief clerk of the prison inspection department. Mr. Adams made his report of Dr. W. H. Oates, State Prison Inspector.

The Etowah county jail is practically a new one. Mr. Adams made no report of his examination of the county convict camp. He will file this report later.

Curtis Granted Parole.

Upon the recommendation of Dr. J. M. Austin, physician inspector of the State Board of Convict Inspectors, a parole has been granted to C. A. Curtis, a white man of Mobile county, who was sent to the penitentiary several years ago for forgery. Dr. Austin declared in his recommendation for executive clemency that Curtis was suffering with a cancer of the throat.

Examine A. N. G. Officers.

Newly elected officers of the Alabama National Guard will be examined Sept 28, by the State board of military examiners, according to announcement made at the office of Adjutant General Joseph B. Scully. Nine officers will be present to take the examinations.

Morgan County Books Closed.

Mobile Jail Is Crowded.

Mobile.—The Mobile county jail is crowded to its capacity with prisoners awaiting trial in the various courts of the county. Sheriff Joseph Mastin has asked the county commissioners to provide more room for the prisoners.

Ready to Succeed Baker.

Prof. N. B. Baker, State Supervisor of Rural Schools, has resigned, and J. R. Hobdy of Auburn has been appointed in his place, the changes being effective October 1, it was announced by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. Professor Baker resigned to accept the position of Assistant County Superintendent of Education of Jefferson county, which comes in the nature of a promotion.

Professor Baker was appointed as State Supervisor of Rural Schools in 1911 by H. J. Willingham, at that time State Superintendent of Education. He has done much excellent work for the rural schools of the State and has compiled some of the most interesting data concerning the rural schools of the State that has ever been published. In his new position he will have an opportunity for doing much good educational work. He formerly lived in Jefferson county and is well known to all the educational workers there.

Professor Hobdy, who succeeds Professor Baker, is one of the best known educational workers in the State. He began his career as a member of the faculty of the Seventh District Agricultural School in Albertville, of which W. F. Feagin was at that time president. He served in this position from 1897 to 1901, when he succeeded Mr. Feagin as president when Mr. Feagin resigned to become connected with the Department of Education.

For ten years, Professor Hobdy served as president of the Albertville school, when he resigned to accept a position in the Auburn faculty in 1911. Since 1911 he has been associated with Prof. L. N. Duncan in the Boys' Corn Club work in Alabama. He has also served as high school inspector. Professor Hobdy will make his residence in this city.

Mr. Feagin announced that the position to be filled by Professor Hobdy will hereafter be known as that of "Rural School Agent" instead of "Supervisor of Rural Schools." Prof. J. L. Sibley will continue as agent for the negro rural schools of the state. These officials are paid out of the general educational fund, but work under the supervision of the State Superintendent of Education.

Taxes in Jefferson Heavy.

Jefferson county paid in taxes to the state and county during 1913 $1,950,049.84. Of that amount $1,039,328.52 went to the county and $910,721.32 to the state. W. R. Foster, examiner of public accounts, has just completed an examination of the books of F. B. Bowers, tax collector of Jefferson county, and made a report to Governor O'Neal.

Mr. Foster also reports favorably upon the minutes and accounts of the Jefferson county board of revenue. He found that $138,468.23 was paid out between September 1, 1913, and August 31, 1914, for charity, and remarked that, although the institutions and cause were worthy, it seemed a burden upon the taxpayers.

To Make Malarial Survey.

Dr. R. H. Von Ezdorf, the health and sanitary expert of Mobile, while in Montgomery, conferred with Dr. W. H. Sanders, State Health Officer, in connection with a proposed malarial survey of Alabama. It is proposed to make a study of malarial conditions throughout the state to enable health officers to know malarial conditions at all points.

Books Given History Department.

Announcement has been made by the Alabama State Department of archives and history of the gift to the department of a number of new and attractive books, the gift of various collections. These books cover all classes of literature, including conduct of life, nature study, literature for children, animals, birds, biography, myths, etc.

Call Issued State Banks.

Superintendent of Banks Alex E. Walker issued a call to the state banks for a statement of their condition at the close of business on September 12. The present call is the third which the bank superintendent has issued this year the last one having been sent out several months ago.

Perry County Negro Paroled.

Governor O'Neal granted a parole to George Smith, a Perry county convict, who was serving a twelve year sentence in the state penitentiary on a charge of murder. The parole was granted upon the recommendation of Dr. J. M. Austin, physician inspector.

Montgomery Tax Assessor Dead.

Morgan B. Gilmer, tax assessor of Montgomery county, died at Bayard, North Carolina. He was a most distinguished Confederate veteran and organizer of the "Valley Hamsters," an organization composed of juvenile descendants of Alabama veterans and was made official recently by the Alabama division of Veterans.

Trade Institutes in Progress.

Teachers' institutes are being held [illegible] in Montgomery, Mobile and [illegible] counties.

FARMER'S WIFE TOO ILL TO WORK

A Weak, Nervous Sufferer Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Kasota, Minn. — "I am glad to say that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done more for me than anything else, and I had the best physician here. I was so weak and nervous that I could not do my work and suffered with pains low down in my right side for a year or more. I took Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and now I feel like a different person. I believe there is nothing like Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for weak women and young girls, and I would be glad if I could influence anyone to try the medicine, for I know it will do all and much more than it is claimed to do." — Mrs. CLARA FRANKS, R. MEN AND WOMEN VIE WITH EACH OTHER AT THE ALABAMA STATE FAIR

Mrs. John B. Reid, Superintendent of the Women's Department Addresses a Letter to the Women of the State. Fair Dates Sept. 28-Oct. 10.

My Dear Friend:

Through the press and special columns we are informed of what our clubs and societies are doing for the women who are active in public affairs, but the plodders—the women who do things with their hands—work so silently. The outside world little realizes what is being accomplished amid the elements of the simple life.

Sixteen years ago as manager of the Woman's department of the Alabama State Fair I began to make a search in every section of Alabama for busy women and idle ones. We needed the examples of the former to display as an inspiration to those who were waiting and wanting to do. Strange, we found it easier to awake the drone than to intrude upon the busy hours of those already active. At first co-operation came very slowly—woman's world was asleep as far as making things was concerned. Determined to demonstrate the real purpose of an annual exhibit was the only process of awakening the folks. From the beginning, with a very few samples of woman's work to place in our "show window," we realized the real need of presenting patterns.

Today about 2000 Alabama women are busy sending their own examples to enter for the prizes offered by the Alabama State Fair, yet the work is incomplete—we want every woman in the state to lend her interest and her exhibit. Realizing the value of such an exhibition not only in stimulating industry, but in making home comfortable and in creating "pin money ambition." The Alabama State Fair appropriates $2600 each year for prizes to be offered for woman's work. The Chamber of Commerce of Birmingham, substantiate this amount with a liberal offer of $500 more, and merchants of the city make special prizes amounting to about $1000. Thus the aggregate reaches $3500 to be distributed among the Alabama women. Our catalogues are ready for circulation. Would it not be a credit to the state if every housekeeper in her borders would contribute one specimen of her work that visitors to the fair may have the benefit of her patterns?

I am extending this invitation to make an exhibit at the Alabama State Fair to every woman in every section of the state, and will mail catalog upon request.

"He that wrestles with us strengthens our nerve, and sharpens our skill."

With the convenience of parcel post established even the remote districts can be represented and the articles will be properly exhibited and returned.

Thanking each of you for your past co-operation and trusting for your continued interest and an exhibit for the fair of 1914, I am,

Cordially,

MRS. J. B. REID,

Manager Woman's Department.

BABY SHOW GREAT FEATURE OF ALABAMA STATE FAIR.

Fond Mothers Vie With One Another for Recognition of Perfection of Their Offsprings.

Mama, daddy, sister, buddie and Joe are not the only ones who have great times at the Alabama State Fair, which is to be held this year from September 28 to October 10. Baby also is the center of attraction, for the best baby show in the south is held at the Alabama State Fair in the Woman's Department of the fair.

Mrs. J. B. Reid, superintendent of this department, was overjoyed last year at the number of entries that came in. Mamas from all over the state entered their babies and any of them won prizes and those who did not said they were going to enter their babies again this year and go after the prizes again.

There are many substantial prizes offered, foremost among which is a savings account in one of the banks of Birmingham, which stays in the bank and draws interest until baby is 18 years old. Then there are other prizes of importance.

A catalog will give you all the information about the baby show you want and a postal card mailed to the Alabama State Fair, Birmingham, will bring you a catalog. Write for it today.

EQUAL JUSTICE

Selfishness actuates many of the arguments made on the political stump and pleas made before juries. Equal Justice to all parties concerned is lost sight of.

The cradle days of the American Republic were marked by hardship and privation on the battle field. Our fathers were determined that they would enjoy equal rights with the mother country.

Emerging victorious they adopted a Constitution which provided and guaranteed equal justice to all. That document is a masterpiece of calmness, of statesmanship, of high ideals.

How many of our people have read that document? How many of us have memorized, have pondered it, thinking out the words which constitute the very foundation of our national life?

The L. & N. writes of these things because we want equal justice for the corporation and the citizen alike; no more, no less. We realize the freedom of political speech. We appreciate the educational value of discussion. We hold in reverence the judicial part of our government. We realize that law and order are essential to national prosperity.

We ask only that a mutual understanding exist. That is why we are writing to you frankly, sincerely.

If the citizen would resent the filing of claims which are without merit, the making of attacks that are without foundation, the unjust treatment of corporations on the stump and before juries, a better day would dawn for American peace and prosperity.

The policy of the L. & N. is that no one shall be imposed upon. We devote equal effort in safeguarding the interest of the general public and the interest of our property, to the end that equal justice may be meted out to all.

It is only through equal justice that mutual prosperity can exist.

BLACKMON WRITES ON SITUATION.

HOUSE OF REPRESENTATIVES
Washington, D. C., Sept. 11, 1914.

Mr. Moses A. Kilgore,
Clanton Alabama.

Dear Mr. Kilgore:

I have your letter of the 9th instant, and have read with much interest the suggestions contained therein. I have taken the liberty of referring the same to the Committee of Agriculture, which Committee is dealing largely with this question.

I am against a tax on cotton because I believe the producer should have the right to grow whatsoever he sees fit to grow, without interference on the part of the Federal Government. I believe the intelligence of our people is sufficient to indicate to them that until the war in Europe is over it is unwise to have an over production of cotton. But with the war going on in Europe, and for many years thereafter, if our people will devote their efforts to the growing of food-stuffs it will make us a still greater and more prosperous Nation. I have the utmost confidence in the ability of the American people to always do the right thing; and, I think all intelligent people now realize that it behooves us to prepare to feed the balance of the world, at least for some years to come.

In the year 1913 we exported about 9,000,000 bales of cotton most of which was shipped to the nations now at war, and before we can have a market and expect any important and lasting relief, our foreign customers will have to quit killing each other and go to spinning cotton, for if Europe is to buy our cotton her people must be employed.

Congress and the President are doing everything within their power to aid in the present crisis; and never before in the history of our Government has Congress and the President done as much in a crisis as has the present Congress and Administration. The present conditions are in no way due to any fault on the part of the American people, but wholly to the European war.

The Treasury Department, immediately upon breaking out of the war, loaned $34,000,000.00 to aid in the crop movement; and Congress immediately authorized the Treasury Department to issue an emergency currency fund, almost without limit. Congress also passed a bill to insure cotton and other farm products carried on vessels flying the American flag, with a view to finding markets for our products at this time. The Treasury Department has also notified the banks that the U. S. Treasury will accept cotton warehouse receipts as collateral for funds loaned to the banks.

The true situation is this, Congress has acted promptly in the matter of supplying emergency currency and if the banks will take advantage of securing this money and loan it to the farmers at a reasonable rate of interest, and if the merchants will extend to the producers all the consideration they can consistently do, I think we can tide over the present crisis with a minimum loss. In this connection, I enclose herewith copy of a bill which I introduced sometime ago requiring the banks to loan the emergency and crop moving funds only for the purposes intended; and if a rate of interest of 4 per cent [illegible] this bill and hope it [illegible] at an early [illegible] if he finds [illegible] the purposes intended, or it found to be exacting a high rate of interest, he will immediately withdraw all government funds from such banks.

You may rest assured that the present Democratic Congress and President are doing everything possible to relieve the situation. Never in the history of this Government has an administration worked harder or done more for the masses of the people than the present Democratic Administration. We have passed a bill reducing the tariff, in order to lower the cost of living; enacted an income tax which places the burden of taxation on the wealthy class to the amount of a hundred million per year; enacted a new banking and currency law, agreed by all parties to be the best financial laws ever enacted; Election of U. S. Senators by direct vote of the people; Completion of the Panama Canal and the establishment of a Government for the Canal Zone; Granting to Alaska a territorial form of Government; Authorizing the building of a Government Railway in Alaska to develop the wonderful resources of that Territory; Legislation in behalf of labor; Anti-trust legislation; Good Roads; Agricultural Extension Law; Establishment of a Bureau of Markets to work out a plan to assist the farmer in disposing of his products; the establishment of a Parcel Post; Loan on Farm Lands, through a provision in the Banking and Currency Law making it possible for a farmer to borrow money from the banks with his land as security; and numerous other laws in the way of reforms promised by the Democratic Party.

Through the wise policy of President Wilson in his dealings with the Mexican problem, we today find ourselves at peace with the world, while one-half of the world is at war. The Republican Party criticized him severely for his policy of "Watchful Waiting," the crowning event of his administration; but the American people, today, regardless of their political faith realize the value and wisdom of his policy when compared with war and all its cruelties and horrors.

I am always glad to hear from you. With best wishes, I am rs very truly,

FRED L. BLACKMON.

FREIGHT TRAINS COLLIDE NEAR WADSWORTH

Second section of freight train No. 18 and second section of south bound freight train No. 27 on the L. & N., collided head-on Monday evening soon after six o'clock, a short distance north of Wadsworth and near Mountain Creek, and besides badly wrecking two engines and a number of cars in both trains, blocked the track for more than twelve hours.

Engineer D. Hogan, on the southbound train, received a dislocated shoulder in jumping off of his engine before the impact, and this was the only personal injury in the wreck.

Passenger trains Nos. 4 and 8 did not pass Clanton until nearly 7 o'clock Tuesday morning.

Second section of train No. 18, northbound, in charge of Engineer Vyle Hooss and Conductor Wells, had orders to meet first section of train No. [illegible] at Wadsworth [illegible] and also the second section [illegible]

MASS MEETING OF FARMERS

Pursuant to call, the farmers of the county met in mass meeting at Cedar Grove church last Saturday. J. W. Hayes was elected chairman and J. M. Smith was chosen as secretary. After hearing reports from farmers from different parts of the county regarding the cotton holding proposition, a motion was carried that a resolution committee of five be appointed by the chair; said committee appointed as follows: B. L. Cobb, S. E. Waldrup, N. J. Vinson, E. B. Popwell and W. H. Cooper. The Committee presented the following resolutions, which were adopted:

1st. We recommend that the farmers hold cotton for fifteen cents per pound, and that cotton seed be held for $25.00 per ton, or used for fertilizer.

2nd. We ask the ginners to reduce ginning charges to 25c per hundred pounds of lint and covering to 75c per bale.

3rd. That we reduce our cotton acreage to not more than six acres per farm horse for 1915, and as a means of reducing expenses, we recommend the following:

1st. A repeal of the law creating the Jury Commission and that the Commissioners' Court be required to select the jurors for each term of court.

2nd. A repeal of the law creating the office of back-tax commissioner and that two competent men be elected to assess land values, said assessment to be made every four years.

3rd. That the nine agricultural schools and six of the normal schools be disposed of and the appropriation heretofore made to those schools be placed to the credit of the rural schools.

4th. That we discharge the health nurse at work in our county.

Many farmers have expressed themselves as being unwilling to purchase any commercial fertilizers, as they considered it a risky proposition if used to grow cotton.

The meeting adjourned at 4 p. m. subject to the call of the chairman.

DELEGATES TO STATE COTTON MEET NAMED

Three delegates from each county of Alabama were appointed Saturday afternoon by President W. H. Seymour, of the Alabama division, Southern Cotton association, to represent this State at the convention of the association to be held in New Orleans Tuesday for the purpose of developing plans for caring for the cotton crop. The delegates are confined to no particular class but are from all the business walks of life.

In announcing the delegates, President Seymour stated that special round trip rates would be offered by the railroads for this convention, and he hoped that every Alabama delegate would be present. He expects to leave Monday for New Orleans.

The delegates appointed from Chilton county are: P. A. Gulledge, Verbena; W. H. Crowell, Jemison; W. T. Cotton, Clanton.

TO THE SINGERS OF CHILTON COUNTY

You are requested to meet at Thorsby Baptist church, Saturday, October 3rd, at 1:30 p.m., for the purpose of organizing a choir and electing a director, to sing at the Chilton county Fair, Friday, October 30th, 1914; books used will "Perrennial Praise." Do not fail to attend this meeting, as you will have to organize and rehearse with us if you sing in this choir.

MOUNTAIN CREEK NEWS

With the approach of the Fall months, visitors to the Soldiers' Home enjoy the outings occasionally taken there. On Sunday two auto parties remained nearly all day, one from near Clanton, and the other from Robinson Springs.

The visitors seemed to enjoy their visit to the Home and surely the old veterans were delighted to have them.

Mrs. Ruby Knox, Miss Pearl Culver, Miss Myrtle Holland and Miss Inez Gentry have undertaken to raise funds sufficient to pay minister Cannon's salary. This quartette is fully equal to the occasion, and no doubt they will succeed.

LANCASTER-WILLIAMS

An interesting event of yesterday was the marriage of Miss Nettie Williams and Mr. Millard Lee Lancaster, which took place at 8 o'clock in the evening at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. H. Williams, in West End. The living room, in which the ceremony was performed, was prettily decorated in palms and ferns and the [illegible] blue cloth with a smart black velvet sailor trimmed with white aigrettes. She wore an old brooch, an heirloom in the family, and for "something borrowed" wore a diamond lavalliere belonging to her dearest friend. Her flowers were bride roses showered with lilies of the valley.

Miss Roper was clad in white crepe de chine, with lace tunic and pearl trimmings, and Miss Wheeler wore shadow lace over pink.

The presents were displaped after the ceremony and punch was served in the dining room by Miss Annie Burke and Miss Sarah Gallagher.

Mr. and Mrs. Lancaster left last night for a wedding trip East, and after a short while they will return to be at home at 622 North Second Avenue, West End.—Birmingham News.

The above will be read with interest here, as the bride formerly resided in Clanton, where she has many friends.

STATE EXPOSITION WILL BE LARGELY ATTENDED

Montgomery, Ala.—Reports received by the officials of the Alabama State Exposition Association indicate that the largest crowd that has ever attended a fair or Exposition in this section will visit the 1914 State exposition, October 12-17.

Traveling men coming into the city during the past few days declare that conditions are improving in all sections of the State and that the farmers are displaying a great deal of interest in the preparations being made for the exposition.

MRS. MARY RUSSELL PAYTON, DECEASED

Mrs. Mary Russell Payton, a venerable lady of 78 years of age, and mother of Mrs. J. P. Smith, died at the latter's home, near Clanton, on September 10, 1914.

She was the wife of the late Archibald Payton, who moved to this county with his family in 1902, and died at Maplesville in 1912. Since the death of her husband she had been living with the family of Mr. Smith.

As a believer and worker in the church of Christ the deceased lady had been active since the early years of her womanhood; her membership was at Salem church, in Coosa county, the place she had cherished from childhood days.

She was twice married, and was preceded in the grave by both her husbands. Her life was blessed by ten children, six of whom are living.

Funeral services over the remains of her mortal existence were conducted by Rev. W. J. Armstrong at Mulberry church, where all that was earthly of this good woman was given back to the dust; and the noble spirit of her life returned to the God who gave it.

NEVER SAW LIKE OF PRESIDENT WILSON

Arizona Statesman Tells Major Hemphill Citizens of Eleven States Without Exception Praises Executive.

BY J. C. HEMPHILL.

Washington, Sept. 28.—Senator Marcus Aurelius Smith of Arizona, is a sound lawyer, a successful politician and a very clever man. He was born in Kentucky, but has lived in Arizona for thirty-three years. He was territorial delegate in eight Congresses, and when Arizona was raised to the dignity of Statehood, he was elected United States Senator. His term will expire next March. He has been renominated for a second term at a Statewide primary and will be elected, doubtless, as he is quite the sort of man in the present state of public opinion in his neck of the woods the people of Arizona would prefer. Senator Smith is a Democrat, "body, soul and breeches;" he has never been anything else. In the last two years he has been absent from his place in Washington for only two or three weeks, which he spent with his constituents. He had a walkover at the primary election and will be an easy winner at the general election in November; at least he ought to be, if faithful and efficient service is to rewarded.

Senator Smith talked to me last night in an understanding way about the President and his work and the political outlook in the country.

"There is nobody like the President I have ever known," he said. "I have just returned to Washington. I have traveled through eleven states, talked to all sorts of people of every political shade, and I have not found a single man, whatever his political affiliations or sectional prejudice, who spoke in other but the highest terms of Mr. Wilson and his administration of his office.

Democrats, Republicans and Progressives, all, told the same story of absolute confidence in the President's good faith, increasing respect for his wise leadership, and general acknowledgement of what he has done of substantial value to the whole country. In my own State during the continuance of the revolution in Mexico there was much feeling against the Government at Washington, and far more occasion every week, as the people thought, for a declaration of war by the United States against Mexico than there was for the declaration of the Emperor of Austria against Servia, which has plunged half the world into a sea of blood. They did not know then, but they know now how wisely the President was planning for peace, and how much better it was that we should have kept out Mexico. Many of us did not think so at the time, but all admit now that the President knew more about it than we and that this is

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE

SYNOPSIS.

Bud Hooker and Phil De Lancey are forced, owing to a revolution in Mexico, to give up their mining claim and return to the United States. In the border town of Gadsden Bud meets Henry Kruger, a wealthy miner, who makes him a proposition to return to Mexico to acquire title to a very rich mine which Kruger had blown up when he found he had been cheated out of the title by one Aragon. The Mexican subsequently had spent a large sum of money in an unsuccessful attempt to relocate the vein and then allowed the land to revert for taxes. Hooker and De Lancey arrive at Fortuna, near where the Eagle Tail mine is located. They engage Cruz Mendez to acquire the title for them and begin preliminary work. Aragon accuses them of jumping his claim. Hooker discovers that matrimonial entanglements prevent Mendez from acquiring a valid title. Phil, who has been paying attention to Gracia Aragon, decides to turn Mexican and acquire the title. Aragon fails in his attempt to drive them off the claim. Rebels are reported in the vicinity. A rich vein of gold is struck and work on the mine is stopped until the title can be perfected. Phil is arrested by Manual del Rey, captain of the rurales and suitor of Gracia's. He is released on promise to stay away from Gracia. Phil is forced to enlist in the rurales. He asks Bud to take care of Gracia. The rebels are defeated in a fierce battle near Fortuna. Phil deserts and returns to the United States. Bud turns Mexican and takes steps to secure title to the mine in his own name. Hired assassins of Aragon make an unsuccessful attack on Bud and four of them are killed.

CHAPTER XXI.

On the morning after they had laughed at the comic paper and decided that all the world was fair, Hooker and Amigo were squatting by the fire and eating a man's-size breakfast.

The creek, swollen by yesterday's torrential rain, had settled to a rivulet. The wind had not risen and the sun was just over the hill when, with a rush and a scramble, Amigo threw down his cup and was off in a flash for the rocks.

A moment later two men rode down the canyon, and then two more, and two more. It was a column of men, all armed with rifles, and they cast envious eyes at Copper Bottom as they halted before the camp. As for Bud, he saluted gravely, for he knew them for what they were.

These were the lost forces of Bernardo Bravo and Salazar, Rojas and the other bandit chiefs, and they marched, as he well knew, upon Fortuna. They marched quietly, and the great whistle had not blown.

It would make a rich prize, Fortuna, if they could take it by surprise! The ransom for the Spanish haciendados alone would amount to thousands of dollars, and the mine-owners could afford to pay anything in order to save their works.

A box of dynamite under the giant concentrator and the money would be produced at once, and yet the scoundrels halted at a one-man camp to steal a single horse.

A flicker of scorn passed over Hooker's face as the leader came dashing up, but the Texan greeted him with a slow smile.

"Buenos dias, general!" he said; "you have many men."

"Enough!" observed the "general" hurriedly, "but some in the rear are on foot. As I suppose you are in sympathy with our great cause, I will ask you for that horse. Of course, I will give you a receipt."

He fetched out a blank-book as he spoke and motioned to a ragged beggar at his heels. Bud checked the man's rush with a look.

"One moment!" he said, and as the soldier turned back his general glanced up sharply.

"Only this, Senor General," answered Bud. "You are welcome to anything I have—food, blankets, money—but I cannot give you that horse."

"But, senor!" protested the general, regarding him with arrogant pig eyes that glinted wickedly, "this poor soldier's feet are sore. Surely you would not make him walk. Only name your price and I will give you a receipt for him, but my man must have the horse."

There was a pause and men began to dismount and move in closer. At a word from their commander any one of them would draw and kill him, as Hooker very well knew, but his love for Copper Bottom made him obdurate.

"If the man is lame," he said, "I will give him another horse—but he cannot have this sorrel."

He stepped quickly over to the corral and turned with his back to the gate, while the commander spat out orders in Spanish and armed men came running.

"Senor," he said, advancing brusquely upon the defiant Hooker, "I must trouble you for that pistol."

"No, senor!" answered the cowboy, keeping his hand upon his gun; "not so yes nor no man—and I'll never give it up to a Mexican!"

"Caray!" exclaimed the officer impatiently; "you are an American—no?"

"Not only that," rumbled Bud, drawing himself upon his guard, "I am a Tejano, also, and if any man touches that horse I'll kill him!"

His voice trembled with anger, but his hand remained upon the Mexican and not deceive [illegible]

"Ha, [illegible] Tejano!" murmured [illegible] then he shook [illegible] and was [illegible] that quarter [illegible] Spanish [illegible] Mexican [illegible] who had proclaimed themselves Americans to the insurrectos—boastfully done, it was said to be the quickest way there was of drawing a Mexican bullet. But to be a Texan was different—somehow the very name suggested trouble to their minds and an Alamo fight to the death. Hooker saw that he had made an impression, and he was not slow to follow it up.

"If you need a horse," he said to the general; "let your man go up that arroyo and he will find one hobbled on the flat. Then give me your receipt for two hundred dollars gold and I will contribute a saddle."

It was a reasonable concession, under the circumstances, and, best of all, it saved the general's face. The hideous frown with which he had regarded the American changed suddenly to a look of pompous pride. He jerked an imperious head at his ragged retainer and drew forth his receipt-book with a flourish.

While he waited for the horse to appear he turned upon his snooping men and drove them to their mounts with curses. Evidently it was no sinecure to command in the army of the liberation, and the veiled mutterings of his followers showed that they were little better than tigers in leash.

Mounted upon horses, mules, and even burros; armed with every conceivable weapon from a musket to standard repeating rifles, they were a tatterdemalion army, more fit for "treason, stratagems and spoils" than the sterner duties of war.

Bud looked them over closely, well satisfied to have his back against a wall, and when the low-browed retainer came hurrying back with the horse he quickly took the worthless receipt and watched them on their way. Then, as the last camp-follower disappeared, he ran for his saddle and rifle and within a minute he was mounted and away.

There were rebels below him—very likely there were more to come—the only safe place for Copper Bottom was over the hills at Fortuna. Without stopping for path or trail, he headed straight northwest over the ridges, riding as the cowboys do when they rake the range for cattle. Hardly had he topped the first high crest when he came in sight of Amigo, loaded down with his cartridge-belts and carrying his heavy Mauser.

In a long, shambling trot the Yaqui was drifting along the hillside with the free grace of a wild creature, and when Hooker pulled down his horse to keep pace with him he laughed and motioned him on. Taking the lead, he loped on over hogback and barranca, picking out the best trail by instinct and setting such a pace that Bud was hard pressed to keep up with him.

He had heard it said that in the Yaqui country no white man, no matter how well he was mounted, could outdistance the Indians on foot, and now he knew it was true. But why this killing haste on the part of Amigo? He had neither friends nor kin in town; why, then, should he run so fast to warn them of the enemy?

They reached up the hill and down another, while the insurrectos followed the canyon that swung to the south, and finally in a last scramble, they mounted a rocky ridge and looked down upon old Fortuna.

Already the hard-driven ponies were [illegible] in the heats of early [illegible] was rising from the [illegible] Aragon was busy, but [illegible] worse than [illegible] told [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

FIGHTING CONTINUES WITH LITTLE CHANGE

Few Details of Battle Given Public—Official Statements of Opposing Forces Are Vague.

VIOLENT ATTACKS FRUITLESS

Germans Redouble Efforts—Furious Fighting Continues in Northern France.

Paris.—The following official communication was issued:

"First—On our left wing, the reports on the situation are favorable.

"Second—On the center, our troops have successfully withstood new and very violent attacks. We have made some slight progress on the heights of the Meuse. In the Woevre region a thick fog has caused the suspension of operations.

"Third, on our right wing (Lorraine and Vosges) there has been no change in the situation."

London.—Furious fighting continues in northern France where the Allies and the British armies are at grips with the German forces in what is characterized as the crucial action of the battle of the Aisne. Beyond admitting this fact the official statements are vague. Few details of the struggle which may be the turning point of the western campaign have been give nthe waiting public.

One sentence, "There is no change in the situation," epitomizes the official reports from London, Paris and Berlin. The allies claim to have made slight advances here and there, notably on the heights of the Meuse. The German official statement, however declares that "reports concerning a victorious advance of the enemy are untrue."

Both the British and the French official statements refer to the violence of the attacks made by the Germans, who seem to have redoubled their efforts in an attempt to hurl back the allied line. The reports indicate, however, that the French and British have given no ground.

A very rigorous sensorship evidently has been imposed at virtually all points, particularly in London, regarding the operations at the front, as very little news is being permitted to come through. The war officials probably hesitate to raise the hopes of the people without some decisive results having been attained and fear that the publication of even the smallest details of the operations might be of aid to the Germans.

Petrograd reports officially that the Austrian stronghold of Przemysl, in Galicia, is invested completely by the Russians and that the main Austrain army is retiring behind the Carpathians into Hungary, pursued by the Russians. Berlin, however, declares that "reports of the fall of two of the przemysl are invention."

The Montenegrins, who have allied themselves with the Servians in the conflict with Austria, are making advances, according to advices. A dispatch from Cettinje, Montenegro, says the Montenegrins are within artillery range of Sarajevo, capital of Bosnia.

The Austrian forts at Cattaro, Dalmatia, on September 19, sunk a large French warship, according to a dispatch to the Cologne Gazette. This ship was one of the fleet of 12 which was met by a salvo from one of the Austrian forts when it approached the stronghold. The rest of the fleet retreated hastily, says the dispatch, after the French ship was sunk.

A dispatch from Constantinople says that the Dardanelles have been closed to navigation.

The Austrian government has confiscated the Canadian Pacific Railway company's securities and money deposited at Vienna, according to report, as well as the company's observation cars running on the Austrian railroads. This is the result, it is said, of a refusal of the company to pay the dividends of the Austrian shareholders.

Advices received in Paris say that the rapid increase in grain prices in Austria is causing anxiety in official circles. Farmers are holding their supplies for higher prices and the government proposes to fix a maximum price for this cotamodity.

For the first time since the war began, wireless news sent out by the French government through the Eiffel tower has been received in London. The message detailed the fierce fighting which took place in northern France between September 26 and 28.

Sir Edward Carson, the Ulster leader, in outlining the Ulster programme with respect to the home rule bill has called upon Ulstermen to three things unless "ultimately in the meantime what has been demanded is conceded."

I was unable to sleep at night the itching was so severe. I had to take sleeping medicines several times a week to get any sleep at all. It broke out as a rash and some of the eruption turned to boils. My skin was covered and I had several boils on my face. REMEDIES FOR POTASH SHORTAGE

By Prof. H. A. Noyes.

Various suggestions have been made in regard to the steps to be taken by farmers in reference to the shortage of Potash in their fertilizers, caused by the greatly reduced shipments of Potash from Germany since the first of August. Most of the Fertiliser Companies have endeavored to make the Potash on hand go as far as possible by selling for the present brands of complete fertilizers containing only 2 or 3 per cent of Potash and withholding from sale brands containing larger amounts.

The suggestion that some or all of the Potash be replaced by phosphoric acid is absurd, for every schoolboy knows that one plant food cannot take the place of another. There are some indirect fertilizers, such as lime, gypsum and salt that can release a limited amount of Potash from some soils that contain hydrated silicates of Alumina and Potash. But if these soils have already been treated with lime or have received repeated dressings of the usual forms of fertilizer containing soluble phosphate with its accompanying gypsum, then the Potash in the hydrated silicates has to a large extent already been replaced and the use of more lime or gypsum or salt could not be expected to release much additional Potash. Ground limestone or oyster shells act too slowly to be used as Potash releasers.

The residue of soda left in the soil by nitrate of soda is more effective in releasing Potash than is gypsum and hence goods, in which the nitrogen is largely in the form of nitrate of soda, may have a special value in the present emergency.

It is often stated that decaying organic matter releases Potash from the soil, but there seems to be no direct evidence of this. On the contrary, Dr. S. Peacock states in the American Fertilizer of Sept. 5, 1914, "Several thoroughly competent researches have shown that decaying organic matter has little effect on converting inert mineral plant food in the soil into available form."

In any soil the amount of Potash capable of being released by these indirect means is a very small fraction of the total Potash in the soil, most of which exists in a form about as soluble as window glass. There is no known profitable method for rendering this inert Potash of the soil available fast enough to provide for profitable crops. Whatever temporary expedients we may employ in the present emergency, we must keep in mind that the Potash thus removed from the semi-available soil reserves must later be replaced if we are to maintain the soil's productiveness.

There is danger in the statement that farmers have been using an excess of Potash. Crops use on the average about two and one-half times as much Potash as phosphoric acid, while the average fertilizer sold contains only half as much Potash as phosphoric acid; yet no one claims that we are using too much phosphoric acid. The Potash remaining from previous fertilization is practically nothing except in the limited areas where a ton or more of fertiliser has been used per acre on truck crops. Very rarely is half as much Potash applied to the wheat, oats, corn or cotton crop as the crop removes.

The Potash mines are so numerous and the stocks on hand so large that supplies can be promptly sent forward, as soon as European conditions permit freight shipments to be resumed.

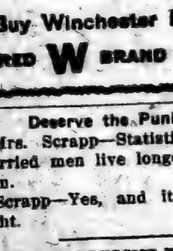
One Way to Lengthen Life



Late in life, when the organs begin to weaken, the hard-working kidneys often tire out first.

Failing eyesight, stiff, achy joints, rheumatic pains, lame back and distressing urination are often due only to weak kidneys.

Prevention is the best cure and at middle age any sign of kidney weakness should have prompt attention.

Doan's Kidney Pills have made life more comfortable for thousands of old folks. It is the best recommended special kidney remedy.

To put an old phrase to good use once, the Wilson administration is best judged by the enemies it has made.

The Union-Banner has fed the voter on the same old diet—the ISSUE—week in and week out, but it has yet to cite him to one instance where the Progressive party has ever benefitted the people. Talk about principles. Bah!

We would like for our friend, the Union-Banner, if he can divert his mind from the "ISSUE" long enough, to kindly tell us how he figures the Democrats being responsible for the county being in debt.

In this issue will be found a letter from Congressman Blackmon to Mr. M. A. Kilgore, which should set at rest the cries of the Bull Moose calamity howler that the Democratic party is not standing by the farmer in the present crisis. Mr. Blackmon makes it plain that Congress is doing everything in its power to relieve the situation.

The Union-Banner, in its delerium, is still going after the "issue" and invites a discussion with the Press as to the policies and principles for which both the Democratic and Bull Moose parties stand. We do not care to gratify our contemporary's ambition for a discussion along these lines. Every intelligent and well posted citizen knows full well what the principles and policies of the Democratic party stand for; we could ask for no better proof of this than the recent Democratic victories in Maine, New Jersey, and other states. As for the principles and policies of the Progressive party, we hold our readers to a word in last week's issue that purpose of the Bull Moose party in the Nation and in Chilton county, and if our friend [illegible] Banner [illegible] look another, but could not [illegible] and that "the [illegible] notably, in [illegible] Jersey [illegible] bosses, and seems willing to distort the facts and go to any extreme in his efforts to make the voter believe that the Bull Moose party is anything but a weakling.

That the Progressive party is dying there can be no doubt, and if we mistake not, it will be but a short while until the tattered remnants of Roosevelt's party will not have a corporal's guard to do it honor.

Woodrow Wilson is truly the idol of the American people. Everywhere, Democrat, Republican and Progressive alike are acclaiming him one of the greatest Presidents this country has ever had. Republican and Progressive Senators and Congressmen are speaking in the most commendatory terms of his policies in dealing with the intricate problems that confront us, especially the way in which he has handled the Mexican situation and in maintaining this country's neutrality while the European strife is going on. Wilson is truly, as was Washington, "First in the hearts of his Countrymen," and his name will be imortalized on history's pages as one of the greatest and most beloved Chief Executives who ever graced the presidential chair.

Will the Union-Banner tell us what the people of Maine, California, New Jersey and other states think of Roosevelt and his policies?

The Court of County Commissioners is to be commended by every patriotic citizen who desires better highways, for its action in passing a resolution providing for the constructing of a highway from Clanton north to the Shelby county line. The road will be built by grading or cherting or graveling, and the payment for said highway will be made by the County issuing county warrants in installments of from one to three years. This road will be the northern end of Chilton's link of the Birmingham and Montgomery highway, eight miles of the southern end having been recently completed, and contracts let for the remainder of the highway to the Autauga line, and when completed we will have one of the best roads in the state running north and south through the county. The completion of this highway will be an era in road building in this County and will be but the beginning of better roads over which the farmer may haul his products. Naturally other good roads will intersect this highway, and in a few years let us hope that Chilton, along with other counties of the state, will be forging to the front in this growing movement for better highways.

There is no other agency that builds up a community like good roads and the Commissioners are to be congratulated for the course they have pursued in constructing this highway, as it does not entail a long debt upon the county, nor work a hardship upon any individual.

PRAISES SHELBY ROADS.

"The Shelby link of the Birmingham to Montgomery highway was virtually completed by A. K. Newell & Bros. today," said A. P. Longshore, Jr., chief clerk in the probate office at Columbiana, who came to the city with a shopping party Wednesday in his automobile.

"I understand that Chilton has arranged to take up the 28 miles of the highway in that county and will issue county warrants to pay for the same. The small stretches in Elmore and Autauga counties to complete the highway will be properly graded and cherted so that in a few months there will be a continuous standard roadway from Birmingham to Montgomery.

"Our citizens are delighted with the roads already constructed, and when we have completed the work now under construction our main roads will be the finest in the state. Already our citizens are planning to improve intersecting roads running from the main thoroughfares.

"The benefit to property owners was immediate along the improved roads, for values were advanced in many cases, while most of them don't wish to sell."—Age Herald.

The foregoing remarks are from the pen of A. P. Longshore, the Progressive leader of Shelby county, and the sentiments coincide with the views of the Union-Banner and Bull Moose [illegible] in this county. Although a Bull Moose [illegible] Longshore is not [illegible] to say

We submit that the only issue with the Bull Moose leaders in Chilton county is public office. They are cavorting over the county filling the people with prejudice and hatred and trying to make them believe that the Democratic party is responsible for this European war and a lot of other silly rot.

The Press, however, has great confidence in the voters of this county, and we believe by their ballots in November they are going to measure up to their full duty and enter their vigorous protest against any such methods.

AMERICAN ROAD CONGRESS

"Overtopping all other road problems in its importance is that of maintenance," says Logan Waller Page, Director of the U. S. Office of Public Roads and President of the American Highway Association. "The destructive agencies of traffic and the elements are unceasing in their activities, and it is as idle to speak of permanent roads as to speak of a house, a fence, or railroad ties as permanent," says Mr. Page. "The public roads today, by reason of the exceptionally destructive traffic conditions, are more costly in construction, and this is continually increasing with the increase in the prices of labor and material. It is criminally wasteful, therefore, to invest large sums of public money in building the highways demanded by traffic, unless the investment is conserved by adequate maintenance. Without such adequate maintenance a road costing anywhere from $5,000 to $15,000 per mile may go to ruin in a year or two, thus involving a permanent loss of considerable magnitude."

"When it is considered that the aggregate expenditure on roads in the United States is well over $2,000,000,000, the seriousness of the question is apparent. Look to the conference of highway officials which will be held during the 4th American Road Congress, which meets in Atlanta, Ga., on November 9, to devote much attention to road maintenance, and that the accumulative moral effect of their findings will go far towards bringing legislatures and county boards to a realization of the necessity for prompt and efficient action. The roads should be classified and maintenance, in organization and money, provided according to the importance of the representative classes of roads."

One of the questions which the Congress will discuss is that relating to the road laws. A complete compilation of the road laws of all States will be available for the session devoted to legislation and it is expected that in outlining bases for revision, maintenance will be given particular attention.

Following the spectacle, a circus program of unusual brilliancy will be presented, including an array of foreign and American Acts new to the circus world. The menagerie contains 1,003 wild animals, 41 elephants, 5 giraffes and a "baby zoo." The circus is transported on 89 double length cars. Special arrangements have been made by the railroads to accommodate the crowds that will attend the circus from this city and the surrounding country.

AUTHORIZES PAPER TO BUY FIVE BALES

Craddock, Terry Company Wires The Advertiser to Buy Cotton on Its Account at Ten Cents a Pound.

Montgomery's part in the "Buy-a-Bale movement is enlisting the aid of capital outside the State. This was shown yesterday, when The Advertiser received a telegram from the Craddock Terry Company, of Lynchburg, Va., authorizing the management of the paper to buy five bales of middling cotton for the well known shoe company at ten cents a pound.

The message from Lynchburg conveys the heartiest sympathy for those who are promoting the cotton-buying movement and expresses the hope that several million bales will be retired by this method, and at a reasonable price, considering the absence of export outlets.

Following is the message to The Advertiser:

"In appreciation of the splendid effort you are making in the interest of the cotton planters of the South, we hereby authorize you to buy for us five bales of middling cotton at ten cents a pound. We want to co-operate with you in assisting the farmers, and hope several million bales of cotton can be marketed at this price through the buy-a-bale of cotton movement.

"Craddock Terry Company."

BIDS WANTED.

Notice is hereby given that at a regular meeting of the Commissioners Court of Chilton county, Alabama, held at Clanton, Alabama, on the 14th day of September, 1914, a resolution was adopted providing for building or constructing of a public highway from Clanton to the line of Chilton and Shelby counties near South Calera by way of Thornby and Jemison in Chilton county along or near the line of the present highway between said points.

Said road is to be built by grading, cherting or graveling, the work to be done by contract and said contract to be let to the lowest bidder under sealed bids to be deposited with the Judge of Probate on or before the [illegible] day of October, 1914.

Said bid shall set forth the number of miles in length and the kind of road, whether graded, cherted or graveled and the charge for each kind. Said bids shall be made upon plans of specifications to be provided by J. E. Converse, Civil Engineer, of Selma, Alabama.

The payment for the building of said highway as the work is done by the County by Special County Warrants payable in annual [illegible] one to three years from date [illegible] 6 per cent per annum [illegible] by the Board of Commissioners of Chilton County, Alabama.

Notice.

We understand that a good many of our customers are under the impression that we no longer give them credit for ginning, bagging and ties, but demand the cash when the cotton is ginned. That is not true. We have our same old rules for ginning, but observe them more closely. We will gin your cotton just as cheaply as anyone else in town and allow you until the cotton is sold or until you wish to haul the bale from the warehouse to pay for the ginning. Having had our machinery put in first class condition, and being operated by old and experienced men, we can assure you perfect satisfaction. We also pay the highest cash price for cotton seed.

GREETING THE WRONG MAN

Cases of Mistaken Identity That Have Been Chronicled by a Collector.

Scrapbook keepers and chroniclers of odd things who are on the alert to increase the store of interest grippers are able to list no end of mistakes made by prominent men at various times and places. One of these collectors has gathered incidents that might easily make 200 pages of an ordinary book. He insists that all are as true as—well, as true as anything can be that you hear about.

According to this collector, says the New York Sun, there's a Brooklyn clergyman who went over to Newark to fill a pulpit one Sunday and greeted three men as the pastor of the church he was to preach in before he shook hands with the right man. One or two deacons and other members were waiting for him in the vestibule when he arrived.

He thought he knew a minister when he saw one, so he put out his hand with a "Glad to meet you, doctor," only to find it wasn't the pastor. Then he looked from one to the other and stretched out a hand to the second man, scoring another mistake. Finally, inside the church on the way to the pulpit, he was sure the ministerial-looking man who advanced toward him was the pastor, and so he greeted him that way. But it was a trustee.

An insurance solicitor, top notcher, of one of the big companies, called on a prospective risk at his Riverside drive residence one evening to nail him for a policy. He talked eloquently and at length. When it came to signing his man he found he had been talking to a nephew of the same man. The nephew was already insured, but had listened because he was interested in insurance.

The scrapbook man has a great number of clips to prove that slouchily dressed Gen. U. S. Grant was repeatedly mistaken for some third-class subaltern. Dispatch bearers who had never met the general often galloped up to headquarters and were directed to a group of officers of which Grant was one. Often the papers were handed the most nattily dressed or the most pompous-appearing officer in preference to Grant.

A droll-minded, little, inconsequential-looking man of London used to take great delight in inviting prominent men to visit him and see the mistakes they made in supposing somebody else was he. Hearty greeting would be half finished before they would discover the mistake. The little man was a famous Egyptologist and used to send out his invitations in ancient hieroglyphics, which may account for the upsetness of the visitors.

The cases are numerous in which in visits of ceremony at courts and among naval commanders of warships of different nations in harbor ridiculous mistakes in identity have been made. A French admiral is reported to have put forth his most formal greeting to a marine officer on board the ship he was visiting, supposing he was the commander in a newly designed uniform. At a detached surrender of troops in the Russian-Japanese war a Russian commander, very formally offered his sword to a war correspondent.

Bold-Pirated Door Knobs!

On some of the $36,000 a year flats on Fifth avenue, New York, the knob wire is gold plated. Elegant window brackets, fixtures, door handles, keyplates, finger rims all finished with gold before being placed in position. All that is required to keep gold in fine condition is an occasional rubbing with a piece of dry leather. No polish is necessary and the gold never tarnishes. Ohio gentleman [illegible] Springfield.

IN MEMORY OF LITTLE WESLEY SMITH

The death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. C. C. Smith last Saturday morning, September 19th, 1914, and took from them their precious babe, Charles Wesley. It was so sad to give up the little one, but God in His wisdom saw fit to take the precious one to His kingdom.

Little Wesley had been in that home only two months, but had entwined itself in their hearts, especially its mother, until it seemed almost unbearable to give it up, but we must live such lives as will please our Heavenly Father, so when He is done with us here on earth, we will meet our loved ones in a bright and better world than this, and there will be no parting there.

REUNION DETAILS SET OUT IN ORDER

Annual Gathering of Alabama Confederate Veterans Will Take Place in Mobile October 22-24.

SPONSORS PARADE OCT. 22

Friday the Sons of Veterans Will Parade and the Old Vets Will Parade on Saturday.

Montgomery.—"General Reunion Order" to the camps of the Alabama Division, U. C. V., has been issued by Major General Harvey E. Jones, setting out the details of the annual state union of the veterans, which will be held at Mobile October 22-24. Excerpts from the order are given below:

"Each camp of this division is entitled to one delegate for every twenty members in good standing and one additional delegate for a fraction of ten members; provided, every camp in good standing shall be entitled to at least two delegates. A certified list of delegates should be mailed to Col. E. M. Washburn, Division Adjutant General, Montgomery, or handed to this officer at headquarters, Mobile, as soon as possible.

"The convention will be held at the Lyric Theatre on Conti Street."

"Mr. Charles B. Hervey, manager of The Cawthon, has assigned a large assembly room on the ground floor for division headquarters, with no charge whatsoever; also ample space in the lobby, where a large table will be placed and stationery furnished for the use of any and all veterans. The committee room is on the first floor, and on the second floor is a lounging room for the major general and his staff, where all officers and members of the division, as well as officers and members of the sons, will be made welcome; all this without any charge whatever.

"Division headquarters will be open early on the morning of October 22. All division staff officers will report to the adjutant general at these headquarters on the morning of the 22nd, and commanders of brigades will also report to headquarters early on the morning of the 22nd, for detailed information to be transmitted to the commanders of the camps composing their respective brigades. Location of brigade headquarters will be announced later by brigade commanders.

"Thursday there will be a parade for sponsors, maids and visiting ladies, which will be termed the 'Sponsor Parade.' Friday the Sons of Veterans will have a parade.

"Saturday, the 24th, the veterans will parade, assembling at 9 o'clock. This early hour is selected so that all veterans may have ample time to leave on the mid-day trains.

"All veterans who desire will be furnished accommodation and meals. In order that ample provision can be made for free accommodation, commanders of camps will instruct their adjutants to send the names and number of members of their camps desiring to avail themselves of the free entertainment offered by the hospitable people of Mobile to Gen. G. M. Van Liew, Chairman Commissary Committee, Mobile.

"Immediate compliance with the above instructions is imperative in order that the commissary committee may have ample time to prepare to house and feed all who apply."

WILL HANG FOR ROBBERY.

Two Negroes Must Pay Death Penalty on October 30.

Birmingham.—Judge William E. Fort, in the criminal court, sentenced Beanie Ward and Wash Gray to be hanged on October 30, the two negroes being convicted in the court during the week on a charge of highway robbery. The negroes were arrested following a series of robberies and assaults on small storekeepers in Birmingham. Aaron Pollack, who was not only robbed, but was shot, identified the negroes and detectives worked up a strong case against them.

OFFER REWARD OF $1000.

Queen & Crescent Officials After Train Wreckers.

Birmingham.—Officers of the Queen & Crescent will, it was stated, offer a reward of $1000 for the apprehension of the wrecker of the Alabama Great Southern train No. 2 near Livingston. Official notice of the reward has not been received at the local office. In the meantime the special agents of the line are continuing the search in the vicinity of the wreck.

TIMBER WORTH $60,000,000.

Alabama's Forest Resources in Timber Alone Easily Exceed 100,000,000,000 Feet.

Washington.—John H. Wallace, Jr., fish and game commissioner of Alabama, has been furnished by the American Forestry association with the draft of a model state forestry law, and will embody it in his annual report, now being prepared, with recommendations that it be passed by the next legislature.

The American Forestry association is now planning a campaign to secure the passage of this law, and in a statement showing how vital is the need of such a law, says:

"Alabama's forest resources in timber alone easily exceed 100,000,000,000 board feet worth, not less than $600,000,000, besides naval stores and other secondary products. Each year these resources yield to the state in timber cut and other products in excess of $25,000,000. The lumber industry, in fact, ranks first in importance among the industries of the state, giving employment to more than 22,000 persons and disbursing in wages along $7,359,000. This industry alone employs over 30 per cent of all the wage earners of the state.

University Tabooes Hazing.

Montgomery.—Invitations to state officials and employes to attend a five-day farmers' institute at Greenville, Butler county, the last week in October, have been tendered by an entertainment committee. The institute will be the first in Alabama under the Smith-Lever law and prominent men will deliver addresses.

To Hold Farmers' Institute.

University.—The Senior, Sophomore and Junior classes of the University of Alabama have taken steps within the last week that promise to eliminate practically all hazing now going on at the University.

TO INSTRUCT STATE MILITIA

Sergeants Morgan and Sweeney of State Military Department Will Visit Many Cities of the State.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Things In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Sergeant-instructors of the Alabama National Guard started this week on an itinerary of instruction through north and South Alabama, according to an announcement made at the office of the state military department.

Sergt. L. R. Morgan has been detailed to north Alabama, where he will spend several weeks instructing companies at Florence, New Decatur, Birmingham and Bessemer. Sergt. John L. Sweeney will work in south Alabama, going first to Luverne and thence to Mobile, Bay Minette and Castleberry.

Sergeant Morgan will spend two weeks in Florence working with the new company of the Second regiment which has just been mustered into service. He will then go to New Decatur for a week and thence to Birmingham, where he will spend one week with each of the companies in that city. Later he will spend a week instructing the Bessemer company.

The itinerary of Sergeant Sweeney includes one week at each place with the exception of Mobile, where he will remain three weeks.

Shackling of Convicts Inhumane.

Shackling of convicted prisoners in the Bessemer city jail is "inhumane and cruel," and is "a sad commentary upon the city," says a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by Dr. W. H. Oates, state prison inspector, who recently inspected the Bessemer city prison. Dr. Oates declares that many of the prisoners in the jail have ugly scores upon their ankles caused by the use of leg irons.

"I respectfully called the attention of the mayor and members of the city council to the fact that several counties of the state, including Madison, Pike, Morgan and Etowah, are working long term convicts on the roads without shackles, and with very few escapes," said Dr. Oates.

Dr. Oates declares that he has taken up this question several times with the city authorities of Bessemer and was under the impression that the shackles were removed at night, if not altogether discontinued.

"I find that I was wrong and that neither has been done," said Dr. Oates.

Reports on the condition of the county jailes of Etowah, Cherokee, Marshall, St. Clair, Bibb and Blount were filed. The inspections were made by John D. Adams, chief clerk in the office of Dr. Oates. Nearly all of these jails were found to be in satisfactory condition although recommendations as to cleaning and renovating were made in a few instances. In Marshall county it was found that great improvement has been made.

Reappoint Agee and Wilkinson.

W. C. Agee and E. Wilkinson of Birmingham were reappointed by Governor O'Neal as chairman and associate member, respectively, of the Birmingham excise commission. Both were named for two-year terms. Mr. Agee has served three years as associate member.

For the last six weeks an active fight for these two positions has been waged. There were about fifteen applicants for the positions and there was considerable opposition to the reappointment of Chairman Agee. There was practically no opposition to Mr. Wilkinson.

Stoddard Oliver's Opponent.

Samuel L. Stoddard of Cordova will be the Republican candidate for Congress from the Sixth District against William B. Oliver of Tuscaloosa, Democratic nominee, according to a certificate filed in the office of Cyrus B. Brown, Secretary of State. The certificate was filed by Sim T. Wright, secretary of the Republican State organization.

Tax Commissioner Removed.

J. B. Cosby, tax commissioner of Perry county, has been removed by the state tax commission, it was announced by Associate Member Henry P. White. Mr. Cosby was removed "for cause," it was announced. J. G. Bailey of Marion was appointed to succeed the deposed official.

The removal of the county tax official followed a visit to Marion of Special Agent Harvey Sims, who was sent to Perry county in the capacity of [illegible] over the state.

Solvent Credits Taxable.

The state tax commission formally ruled that foreign corporations are taxable on all solvent credits in Alabama and so instructed the various county commissioners of the state. The commission, in its ruling, announced that it had paid especial attention to the class of foreign corporations which have depots or manufacturing plants from which the products of the corporations are sold and distributed, "and for which credit is given and which credits are under the control of some office outside the state of Alabama."

The substance of the commission's ruling was that foreign corporations are taxable on all credits in Alabama where such credits arise from shipments made from the distributing plants and depots in this state. "It is further the opinion of the commission," according to the opinion rendered, "that such solvent credits are assessable at the places where such distributing plants and depots are located."

The commission has not yet passed on the question of assessing credits of public service corporations.

Feagin Issues School Manual.

The County High School Manual, a volume setting out the new course of study, together with the textbooks to be used in these schools, is the latest publication issued by the state department of education.

The manual was prepared by Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin with the assistance of members of the faculties of the higher institutions of learning and principals and teachers of secondary schools, the various subjects being treated separately.

In his introductory statement Superintendent Feagin calls attention to the fact that the county high school is the property of the county and should be in touch with the humblest school in the community.

"In furtherance of the spirit that has been implicit both in the conception and the preparation of this manual, it is confidently expected that the faculty of the county high schools in the state will give themselves largely to extension work in behalf of the rural schools," said the superintendent of education.

Good Roads Tour Announced.

Good roads advocates of Elmore, Coosa, Talladega and Montgomery counties have arranged for a big good roads tour from Montgomery to Talladega for the purpose of mapping out a trunk highway according to an announcement made by W. S. Keller, state highway engineer. Mr. Keller has been invited to go on the trip and make the tour with the good roads promoters.

Leaving Montgomery October 6 the parties will go to Talladega by way of Wetumpka, Sandtuck, Central, Seeman, Equality, Nixburg and Goodwater. No stops will be made in Elmore county because that county already has a splendid system of roads. Stops will be made at Equality, Nixburg and Goodwater. At Goodwater dinner will be served.

On the return trip the scouts will go by way of Sylacauga, Hanover, Rockford, Speed, Buyck and Wetumpka. Stops will be made at Sylacauga, Hanover and Rockford, dinner being served at Rockford.

This movement will be for the purpose of stimulating interest in the "Montgomery - Talladega" highway.

Game Wardens Active.

Illustrative of the activity displayed by county game wardens in prosecuting all violations of the game statutes, John H. Wallace, Jr., state game and fish commissioner, announced a dozen or more recent convictions in three counties of the state.

S. A. Edwards, the game warden of Mobile, reported to Mr. Wallace a few days ago the arrest and conviction of six persons on the charge of shooting squirrels out of season. A fine of $25 was assessed against each violator.

The game warden of Crenshaw county, H. J. Browder, reported to the game department that four persons in his county had been convicted in the circuit court of poisoning streams and had been fined $50 each.

Other convictions were reported by J. C. Mims, game warden of Pickens county, who announced to the department that two persons in his county had been fined $50 each for illicit seining of streams.

Invitation Issued.

Declaring that the time is opportune to give an impetus to road building in Alabama and stating that an interesting program has been arranged for the next annual meeting of the Alabama Good Roads Association, which meets in Montgomery October 21-22, the Chamber of Commerce has issued a general invitation to good roads organizations and other bodies urging them to attend the meeting. The entertainment features of the meeting will consist of a 75-mile pike hiking[illegible] Montgomery county.

GEN. FRENCH TELLS HOW BRITONS HAVE FACED GIANT GERMAN GUNS

London.—The official press bureau issued a report from Field Marshal Sir John French's headquarters on the British operations in France. The text follows:

"The enemy is still maintaining himself along the whole front and in order to do so is throwing into the fight detachments composed of units from the different formations, the active army, reserve, and landwehr, as is shown by the uniforms of the prisoners recently captured.

"Our progress, although slow on account of the strength of the defensive position against which we are pressing, has in certain directions been continuous, but the present battle may well last for some days more before a decision is reached, since it now approximates nearly to siege warfare.

"The Germans are making use of searchlights. This fact, coupled with their great strength in heavy artillery, leads to the supposition that they are employing material which may have been collected for the siege of Paris.

Confident of the Result.

"The nature of the general situation after the operations of the eighteenth, nineteenth and twentieth, cannot be better summarized than as expressed recently in a neighboring French commander to his corps: 'Having repulsed repeated and violent counter attacks made by the enemy, we have a feeling that we have been victorious.'

"So far as the British are concerned, the course of events during these three days can be described in a few words. During Friday, eighteenth, artillery fire was kept up intermittently by both sides during daylight. At night the Germans counter-attacked certain portions of our line, supporting the advance of their infantry as always by a heavy bombardment. But the strokes were not delivered with great vigor and ceased about 2 a. m. During the day's fighting an air-craft gun of the Third army corps succeeded in bringing down a German aeroplane.

"News was received also that a body of French cavalry had demolished part of the railway to the north, cutting, at least temporarily, one line of communication which is of particular importance to the enemy.

German Attack Stopped.

"On Saturday, the nineteenth, the bombardment was resumed by the Germans at an early hour and continued intermittently under reply from our guns. Some of their infantry advanced from cover, apparently with the intention of attacking, but on coming under fire they retired. Otherwise the day was uneventful, except for the activity of the artillery, which is a matter of normal routine rather than an event.

"Another hostile aeroplane was brought down by us, and one of our aviators succeeded in dropping several bombs over the German line, one incendiary bomb falling with considerable effect on a transport park near La Fere.

"A buried store of the enemy's ammunitions of war also was found not far from the Aisne, ten wagon loads of live shells and two wagons of cable being dug up. Traces were discovered of large quantities of stores having been burned—all tending to show that as far back as the Aisne the German retirement was hurried.

"There was a strong wind during the day, accompanied by a driving rain. This militated against the aerial reconnaissance.

Several German Attacks Fail.

"On Sunday, the twentieth, nothing of importance occurred until the afternoon, when there was a break in the clouds and an interval of feeble sunshine, which was hardly powerful enough to warm the soaking troops. The Germans took advantage of this brief spell of fine weather to make several attacks against different points. These were all repulsed with loss to the enemy, but the casualties incurred by us were by no means light.

"In one section of our firing line the occupants of the trenches were under the impression that they heard a military band in the enemy's line just before the attack developed. It is now known that the German infantry started their advance with bands playing.

"The offensive against one or two points was renewed at dusk, with no greater success. The brunt of the resistance naturally has fallen on the infantry. In spite of the fact that they have been, practically to the skin for some days and their trenches have been deep in mud, water and in spite of the incessant night alarms and the almost continuous bombardment to which they have been subjected, they have on every occasion been ready for the enemy's infantry when the latter attempted to assault, and they have beaten them back with great loss. Indeed, the spirit of troops engaged up has been a positive habit after long, trying hours of [illegible] under shell fire.

German Guns Fire Fast.

"The object of the great proportion of artillery fire [illegible] to beat down the resistance of their infantry [illegible] colossal expenditure of ammunition which has been wasted.

"By this it is not implied that the artillery fire is not good. It is more than good—it is excellent. But the British soldier is a difficult person to impress or depress, even by immense shells filled with a high explosive which detonate with terrific violence and form craters large enough to serve as graves for five horses.

Scoff at German Shells.

"The German howitzer shells are from eight to nine inches in caliber and on impact they send up columns of greasy black smoke. On account of this they are irreverently dubbed 'coal boxes,' 'black Marias,' or 'Jack Johnsons' by the soldiers.

"Men who take things in this spirit are, it seems, likely to throw out the calculations based on loss of morale so carefully framed by the German military philosophers.

"A considerable amount of information has been gleaned from prisoners. It has been gathered that our bombardment on the fifteenth produced a great impression. The opinion also is reported that our infantry makes such good use of the ground that the German companies are decimated by our rifle fire before the soldier can be seen.

"From an official diary captured by the First army corps it appears that one of the German corps contains an extraordinary mixture of units. If this composition of the other corps is similar it may be assumed that the present efficiency of the enemy's forces is in no way comparable with what it was when the war commenced.

Germans Lose Many Officers.

"The losses in officers are noted as having been especially severe. A brigade is stated to be commanded by a major; some companies of foot guards by one-year volunteers, while after the battle of Montmirail one regiment lost fifty-five out of sixty officers.

"The prisoners recently captured appreciate the fact that the march on Paris has failed, and that their forces are retreating, but state that the object of this movement is explained by the officers as being to withdraw into closer touch with the supports which have stayed too far in the rear.

"The officers are also endeavoring to encourage the troops by telling them that they will be at home by Christmas. A large number of the men believe that they are beaten.

"Among the items of news are the following: Recently a pilot and observer of the Royal Flying corps were forced by a breakage in their aeroplane to descend in the enemy's lines. The pilot managed to pancake his machine down to earth and the two escaped into some thick undergrowth in the woods.

"The enemy came up and seized and smashed the machine, but did not search for our men with much zeal. The latter lay hid till dark and then found their way to the Aisne, across which they swam, reaching camp in safety but barefooted.

"Numerous floating bridges have by now been thrown across the Aisne and some of the permanent bridges have been repaired under fire. On the twentieth Lieutenant (name deleted) of Third signal corps, Royal Engineers, was unfortunately drowned while attempting to swim across the river with a cable in order to open up fresh telegraph communication on the north.

Telephone Aid to Spies.

"Espionage is still carried on by the enemy to a considerable extent. Recently the suspicions of some of the French troops were aroused by coming across a farm from which the horses had been removed. After some search they discovered a telephone which was connected by an underground cable with the German lines, and the owner of the farm paid the penalty in the usual way in war for his treachery.

"After some cases of village fighting, which occurred earlier in the war, it was reported by some of our officers that the Germans had attempted to approach to close quarters by forcing prisoners to march in front of them. The Germans have recently repeated the same trick on a large scale against the French, as is shown by the copy of an order issued by the French officials. It is therein referred to as a ruse, but if that term can be accepted it is a distinctly illegal ruse.

Changes Tricks to Germans.

"During a recent night attack, the order reads, the Germans drove a column of French prisoners in front of them. This action is to be brought to the notice of all our troops, (1) in order to put them on their guard against such a dastardly ruse, (2) in order that every soldier may know how the Germans treat their prisoners. Our troops must not forget that if they allow themselves to be taken prisoners the Germans will not hesitate to expose civilians to French bullets."

[illegible] of the white flag now been [illegible] and other signs of surrender.

BATTLE OF AISNE UNSU

Armies of Allies And Germans in Desperate Struggle For Supremacy—Many Kille

In all history there is no battle rivaling in importance the great struggle that is now between the allied armies of France and Great Britain against the Germans north of the Aisne river in the northern part of France. It has been more than two weeks since the reports received daily indicate that neither side has gained a decisive advantage. To obtain an idea of the losses sustained by the allies and the Germans is an impossibility.

Troops To East Prussia.

The German kaiser, as head of the army of the empire, is said to be in desperate straits. On the one hand he is [illegible] to strengthen his soldiers are [illegible] of the world's greatest importance. At the same time there is an apparent danger looming up on the east Prussia, where the Russian hordes are coming steadily and seriously threatening that part of Germany with invasion. The czar is said to have dispatched hundreds of soldiers to East Prussia to effectively stop the Russian advance.

Germany May Face Famine.

Another peril facing the German people, that of hunger, is the question as to how long the food supply of Germany and Austria-Hungary will last. Great Britain is determined to starve Germany from food supplies from the outside world. Austria-Hungary has none to spare. England is [illegible] supplying food to the Belgians in Belgium, Holland, Denmark and Sweden have all announced intentions not to ship foodstuffs or contraband articles for Germany during their neutrality. With the German fleet bottled up in the North sea it would be almost impossible for Germans to land food supplies on the North sea or on the coast of Italy.

Italy Prepares for War.

Turkey is still defiant and [illegible] warlike move in that country. Little has been heard from Servia during the past few days, although rumors have it that the Servians have announced their allegiance to Germany and Austria, and that in the event they become engaged in the European war it will be [illegible] with the allied armies. It is said that Italy has massed a large number of troops along the Austrian frontier. The Belgians are doing considerable harassing the German forces in Belgium.

Victory For Turkey.

The Japanese have defeated their forces around the German settlements in China. Reports from Tokio say that the Japanese have captured the German solid fortifications on the heights of Tsing-Tau. The battle lasted several hours the Germans being forced to retreat within the walls of the city, which is the capital of the German provinces. Great excitement is being manifested in Tokio over the Japs against the Germans in China. Although the Japanese are waging their warfare against the Germans in China for the purpose of driving this territory from them and turning it to China, it is claimed the Japs have designs on China in view.

Servians Suffer Defeat.

Little Servia is having a hard time to hold her own against her powerful enemy, Austria. For [illegible] weeks the Servian army and the Austrians have been battling for supremacy. The result of the battles is not known, but it is reported that the Austrians have suffered defeat. There has been very little fighting since the Austrians captured Belgrade, the capital, from the Austrians. The city in which Archduke Ferdinand, heir apparent to the Austrian throne, and his wife were assassinated, was one of the first cities captured by the Austrians in the present campaign.

German Fleet Reported Sunk.

colossal expenditure of ammu... which has been wasted.

"By this it is not implied that ... artillery fire is not good. It is ... than good—it is excellent. ... British soldier is a difficult person to impress or depress, even by ... shells filled with a high explosive ... which detonate with terrific violence ... and form craters large enough to ... as graves for five horses.

Scoff at German Shells.

"The German howitzer shells are ... from eight to nine inches in calibre ... and on impact they send up columns ... of greasy black smoke. On account ... of this they are irreverently dubbed ... 'coal boxes,' 'black Marias,' or 'Yeat... Johnsons' by the soldiers.

"Men who take things in this spirit ... are, it seems, likely to throw out the ... calculations based on loss of morale ... so carefully framed by the German ... military philosophers.

"A considerable amount of information has been gleaned from prisoners. It has been gathered that our bombardment on the fifteenth produced a great impression. The opinion also is reported that our infantry makes such good use of the ground that the German companies are decimated by our rifle fire before the soldier can be seen.

"From an official diary captured by the First army corps it appears that one of the German corps contains an extraordinary mixture of units. If the composition of the other corps is similar it may be assumed that the present efficiency of the enemy's forces is in no way comparable with what it was when the war commenced.

Germans Lose Many Officers.

"The losses in officers are noted as having been especially severe. A brigade is stated to be commanded by a major; some companies of foot guards by one-year volunteers, while after the battle of Montmirail one regiment lost fifty-five out of sixty officers.

"The prisoners recently captured appreciate the fact that the march on Paris has failed, and that their forces are retreating, but state that the object of this movement is explained by the officers as being to withdraw into closer touch with the supports which have stayed too far in the rear.

"The officers are also endeavoring to encourage the troops by telling them that they will be at home by Christmas. A large number of the men believe that they are beaten.

"Among the items of news are the following: Recently a pilot and observer of the Royal Flying corps were forced by a breakage in their aeroplane to descend in the enemy's lines. The pilot managed to pancake his machine down to earth and the two escaped into some thick undergrowth in the woods.

"The enemy came up and seized and smashed the machine, but did not search for our men with much zeal. The latter lay hid till dark and then found their way to the Aisne, across which they swam, reaching camp in safety but barefooted.

"Numerous floating bridges have by now been thrown across the Aisne and some of the permanent bridges have been repaired under fire. On the twentieth Lieutenant (name deleted) of Third signal corps, Royal Engineers, was unfortunately drowned while attempting to swim across the river with a cable in order to open up fresh telegraph communication on the north.

Telephone Aid to Spies.

"Espionage is still carried on by the enemy to a considerable extent. Recently the suspicions of some of the French troops were aroused by coming across a farm from which the horses had been removed. After some search they discovered a telephone which was connected by an underground cable with the German lines, and the owner of the farm paid the penalty in the usual way in war for his treachery.

"After some cases of village fighting, which occurred earlier in the war, it was reported by some of our officers that the Germans had attempted to approach to close quarters by forcing prisoners to march in front of them. The Germans have recently repeated the same trick on a larger scale against the French, as is shown by the copy of an order issued by the French officials. It is therein referred to as a ruse, but if that term can be accepted it is a distinctly illegal ruse.

Charges Tricks to Germans.

"'During a recent night attack,' the order reads, 'the Germans drove a column of French prisoners in front of them. This action is to be brought to the notice of all our troops, (3) in order to put them on their guard against such a dastardly ruse, (4) in order that every soldier may know how the Germans treat their prisoners. Our troops must not forget that if they allow themselves to be taken prisoners the Germans will not hesitate to expose them to French bullets.'

"Further evidence has now been collected of the misuse of the Red Cross and other signs of neutrality.

"During recent fighting a German ambulance wagon was ordered to collect the wounded under the cease fire, but continued on to our guns, which were in this particular section. The German battery commander took advantage of the situation to climb up the ... and order to ... our guns, which ... came under a ... them say to which ... jected up to ...

Kaiser Orders Great Number Of Soldiers To Strengthen Forces Guarding East Prussia

BATTLE OF AISNE UNSETTLED

Armies Of Allies And Germans In a Desperate Struggle For Supremacy—Many Killed

In all history there is no record of a battle rivaling in importance the great struggle that is now going on between the allied armies of France and Great Britain against the Germans north of the Aisne river in the northern part of France. It has lasted for more than two weeks and from the reports received daily it appears that neither side has gained an appreciable advantage. To obtain even an idea of the losses sustained by both the allies and the Germans is an utter impossibility.

Troops To East Prussia

The German kaiser, as the head of the army of the empire, is indeed in desperate straits. On the French frontier his soldiers are fighting one of the world's greatest battles. At the same time there is another grave danger looming up on the frontier of East Prussia, where the Russian hordes are coming steadily onward, seriously threatening that portion of Germany with invasion. The kaiser is said to have dispatched thousands of soldiers to East Prussia to effectively stop the Russians.

Germany May Face Hunger

Another peril facing the German people, that of hunger. It is only a question as to how long the present food supply of Germany will hold out. Great Britain is determined to cut off Germany from food supplies from the outside world. Austria-Hungary has none to spare. England is already supplying food to the Belgians, Switzerland, Holland, Denmark, Norway and Sweden have all announced their intentions not to ship foodstuffs or other contraband articles for fear of violating their neutrality. With the German fleet bottled up in the Kiel canal it would be almost impossible for the Germans to land food supplies either on the North sea or on the Baltic sea.

Italy Prepares for war

Turkey is still defiant, but has made no warlike move in the past week. Little has been heard from Italy during the past few days, but persistent rumors have it that the Italians have renounced their alliance with Germany and Austria, and in the event they become engaged in the present European war it will be in sympathy with the allied armies. It is reported that Italy has massed a great number of troops along the Austrian frontier. The Belgians are doing their part in harassing the German soldiers in Belgium.

Victory For The Japs

The Japanese have been gathering their forces around the German provinces in China. Recent dispatches from Tokio say that the Japs engaged the German soldiers on the outskirts of Tsing-Tau. After a skirmish of several hours the Germans were forced to retreat within the walls of the city, which is the capital of the German provinces. Much interest is being manifested in the campaign of the Japs against the Germans in China. Although the Japs claim they are waging their warfare against the Germans in China for the purpose of taking this territory from them and returning it to China, the Germans claim the Japs have a more selfish motive in view.

Servians Suffer Heavy Losses

Little Servia is having all she can do to hold her own with her powerful enemy, Austria. For more than two weeks the Servian and Austrian troops have been battling along the Drina river. The result of these battles is unknown, but it is reported that the Servians have suffered heavy losses. There has been very little news from Bosnia since the Servians and Montenegrins captured Sarajevo, the capital, from the Austrians. This is the city in which Archduke Ferdinand, heir apparent to the Austrian throne, and his wife were murdered, which was one of the principal factors in causing the present European war.

German People Are Isolated

Berlin.—The cutting of German submarine cables, the censorship and the exclusion of foreign newspapers from the empire have resulted in shutting out from Germany virtually all news of the outside world. For the past three days the Berlin newspapers have been carrying full descriptions of the architectural details of the Rheims cathedral, while in the last sixteen days only three places have been specifically mentioned in the government war bulletin. These are Noyon, Rheims and Chauteau Brimond.

Poincare's Home Is Shelled

Bordeaux.—The Germans are paying marked attention to the homes of President Raymond Poincare and the members of his family. The president's country home at Sampigny, in the department of Meuse, 23 miles south of Verdun, was bombarded with special violence, according to news received here by the French government. The Germans apparently have followed the itinerary of the president's movements at Nubecourt and the home of his cousin, Lucien Poincare, at Bras-sur-Meuse.

RUSSIAN-AUSTRIAN-GERMAN CAMPAIGN

London.—For three long days, without cessation, the Germans have hurled their masses against the French and English along the entire front in northern France. The French official view is that these operations, the fiercest that yet have taken place, are, by high command, meaning possibly direct instructions from the emperor himself.

Their purpose has been to break through the allied lines, but both the French and British official reports say they have failed. From Paris it is announced that not only have the Germans been unable to achieve their object, but they have lost a flag, guns and men in the attempt.

The British, as usual, are laconic. "The situation is satisfactory," the report reads, "and the counter attacks on the British front have been beaten back with heavy losses to the enemy.

Attack Allies Night and Day

On the Battle Front.—Desperate attempts made by the Germans on the western end of the long line of battle to break through the allies' forces that are engaged in a turning movement, have resulted in the most furious fighting that has taken place since the beginning of the campaign.

After fighting without respite night and day, corps after corps of Germans was hurled against the flower of the French and English armies only to be thrown back.

The infantry bore the brunt of the incessant fighting, but the artillery of both armies continued throughout 24 hours to bombard each other's position. Hand-to-hand combats occurred at many points, and bayonets were used freely.

Scots Greys Dyed Their Steeds

The French colonial infantry, most of whose men wear many medals for bravery in colonial campaigns, was to the fore, and beside these men fought the Black Sengalese troops, while British troops held an important point with the greatest determination.

The French troops showed more than their accustomed dash in attacks, and everywhere acts of wonderful courage were performed. The cavalry also participated in the engagements at many points, the allies' horses having enjoyed a long rest, which enabled this arm of the service to distinguish itself. The famous Scots Greys, finding the color of their horses offered a prominent mark for the German riflemen, dyed their mounts brown.

The French General Marquet has met death on the field.

Germans Gain Slight Advance

Berlin.—The following statement on the situation in northern France was received from the head quarters of the German general staff:

"The enemy are using their railroads in a general attack on the extreme end of the right flank of the German army.

"At Bapaume (in Pas de Calais, 14 miles southeast of Arras) an advanced French division was repulsed by a smaller German force.

"The forts under bombardment south of Verdun have withdrawn their fire and our artillery is engaged with forces the enemy brought up on the west bank of the Meuse.

"Elsewhere the situation remains unchanged."

Irish Volunteers Called

Dublin.—Premier Asquith appeared at his massive home here for the purpose, as he expressed it in the opening of his speech, "as head of the king's government to summon loyal and patriotic Ireland to take her place in defense of our common cause." The prime minister received a tremendous welcome. He appeared at the mansion house with John E. Redmond, the Irish Nationalist leader, and the earl of Aberdeen, lord lieutenant of Ireland. His opening words aroused the greatest enthusiasm.

Canadian Troops to the War.

St. Johns, N. B.—T. W. Crothers, minister of labor of the Dominion of Canada, announced that 32,000 Canadian volunteers "had gone to the front a day or two ago."

Mr. Crothers made the announcement in a speech before the Canadian trades and labor congress in convention here.

Mr. Crothers extolled the patriotic spirit of the Canadian volunteers.

The foregoing brief dispatch is the only announcement the Canadian censor has permitted to go over the wires regarding the disposition of the Canadian volunteers for more than a week.

Persons reaching the United States from Canadian ports have told of active preparations there for the transportation of Canada's first contingent of troops to the theater of war; a month ago the prophecy was made that the volunteers would sail about September 15; one by one trans-Atlantic liners have been called for undisclosed missions to Canadian ports; but no information has been permitted to reach the outside world as to when the troops would sail from or what port would be their destination.

Beyond the bare announcement that the Canadian volunteers had sailed, no other news of their departure was permitted to get past the censor.

Japs Defeat the Germans

Tokio.—It is officially announced that the Japanese have defeated the Germans in a fourteen-hour battle on the outskirts of Tsing-Tau, seat of government on the German leased possession of Kiao-Chow, China. Japanese casualties are given as three killed and twelve wounded.

German gunboats bombarded the Japanese troops. Japanese aeroplanes proved effective in reconnoitering expeditions, and are reported to have escaped unharmed.

Servian Losses Are Heavy

Paris.—A dispatch to the Havas agency from Nish, Servia, says:

"The Servians have lost heavily during the battle with the Austrians, which has been progressing for a fortnight. The Austrians have brought five army corps into action. With several brigades of fresh troops, they crossed the river Drina and attacked the Servians, whose numbers were inferior.

Germany Announces Losses

Berlin.—The total German casualties in dead, wounded and missing, as officially reported to date, are 104,689.

The casualty list announced adds a total of 10,257 casualties to those previously announced.

The total casualty list is made up as follows: Dead 15,674, wounded 65,908, missing 23,007.

Closing In On Austrians

London.—"The Russians occupied the greater part of the city of Premsyl (Galicia), according to a message from Vienna," says the Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph. His dispatch continues:

"The Russians approached the city from the southwest, forcing the Austrians to take shelter in the eastern forts, where the entire garrison is preparing to make a final resistance. The situation of the garrison is critical; it is entirely surrounded."

British Disaster Pleases Berlin

Berlin.—The sinking of the three British armored cruisers, the Aboukir, Hogue and Cressy, of 12,000 tons each, is "the big news feature in Berlin's newspapers. Details of the battle are not yet available.

The news was received with particular pleasure, as it served to reconcile the German sailors with the policy imposed upon them of higher strategy, under which the officers and men of the fleet are chafing, despite all admonitions of patience from the newspapers and public orators.

Austrians Are Repulsed

Nish, Servia.—The battle which has been in progress for several days near Kovanji on the Servian frontier has ended in a victory for the Servians. The Austrians have been driven back with heavy losses.

FIREWORKS AT ALABAMA STATE FAIR WILL SHOW PANAMA CANAL IN WARTIME

Prominent Figures Are Shown In Vivid Display by Pyrotechnic Effects Never Before Seen at a Southern Fair. Real Baseball Game Will Be Shown in Fireworks.

The spectacle opens amid the ringing of bells, blowing of whistles, and the band plays the national air of each county as its respective dignatary is presented at the Court of Honor and is received by officials of the United States.

Now the official representative of President Wilson and Master of Ceremonies arrive with Colonel Goethals, governor of the Isthmus. They are attended by heads of departments of state and by the diplomatic corps. All proceed slowly to the wireless station on the broad walls of the canal, where short exercises are held, then Colonel Goethals is seen to give a signal, a flash is seen and then a terrific detonation is heard and the audience witnesses a great upheaval in the distance. The last obstacle dividing the great oceans has disappeared and the waters of the Atlantic and Pacific have kissed.

Messages are flashed to the great "men of war" tugging at their anchors in the Pacific and the first ship is seen to enter the locks. She is gaily dressed in bunting and the Stars and Stripes fly from her mast-head. Slowly she rises through the different levels of the locks and as she reaches the top and slowly moves into the canal proper, her guns boom out a national salute.

A French "man of war" is given the next position of honor in the locks, due to her country's share in the canal construction; then comes England's dreadnaught, Germany's fighting monster, etc. As the ships line up along the canal and the sailor boys crowd the walls, there is great cheering by the assembled visitors, citizens, etc.

one of the victories of peace that is better far than any other triumph could have been under arms. It is the bloodless success of the President's Mexican policy which has appealed to the people of all political parties in the border States in a very direct and compelling way, and by this one achievement alone the President has established himself firmly in the confidence of those who were most nearly affected by the intollerable conditions in Mexico.

IF ROOSEVELT WERE THERE.

"What would have happened had Col. Roosevelt been in the White House during this Mexican embroglio it is really shocking even to imagine. We should have our nation under arms and the air would have been filled with the pomp and circumstance of war. There would have been the rattle of druffi and the shouting of the captains and the Man on Horseback. Instead, we have had a gentleman at the head of affairs quietly going about his business in an unobtrusive way, thinking out each step before it was taken, and with a full sense of his awful responsibility striving to establish justice, insure domestic tranquility and promote the general welfare.

"The country is tired of the insanity of Taft and the hysterics of Roosevelt, and rejoices that the honor and dignity and repose of the nation are in the keeping of the strong self-poised, just man at the head of its affairs. Having kept the peace with Mexico and assured friendly relations with Japan, the people are confident that the President will keep peace with the warring nations of Europe, and in the end will be the instrument in restoring peace to the world.

"You ask me what it is that has wrought so noticeable a change in the general public sentiment towards Mr. Wilson, which any one with eyes to see and ears to hear, must have observed. Well, the settlement of the Mexican disturbances is one of the things that has caught the favor of the country. It seemed to the shallow thinking, who are as easily inflamed as punk when a spark is applied, that what they described as 'the piffle policy' could not possibly succeed in dealing with so important a matter involving so many and serious issues; but nothing succeeds like success, and the one thing that even the most thoughtful can appreciate is that Mexico is at peace. To have compelled the confidence of reasonable men of all parties in his good faith is, in my opinion, not in any sense the least of the President's achievements, and this he has done. How? I cannot tell, except that he went into office with a very definite program of constructive legislation and administration clearly in mind. He did not know a great many of the men with whom he would have to deal in his official work; he probably had never seen a Congress in session; he was wholly unfamiliar with the methods of legislation at the Capitol, but he assumed that his 'colleagues' of the House and Senate were as sincere in their wishes to build for the future as himself, and by sheer intellectual force, he has gradually but surely brought the Congress to his way of thinking out great problems, not the men of his own party, of which he is the acknowledged and undisputed leader alone, but the strongest men of the opposition also. Congress believes in him almost as [illegible] and this confidence [illegible] of Congress [illegible] been shown, [illegible] for his [illegible] along [illegible] ing men [illegible]

President in all his policies, because I believed he was right and the country, whatever the differences caused by party spirit and sectional interests, is coming to his support. There was much criticisms of the tariff bill, the treatment of sugar and wool and other matters in which special interests were involved. I believed that it would be well to retain a reasonable duty on sugar and wool, sugar having been always regarded as a proper revenue-producing article; but the President's view prevailed. As a matter of fact, wool has been helped rather than hurt by the new tariff, the price being higher now than for a generation or so, and it will be found that the perils which men have feared will pass away as the new tariff is developed. It was expected that there would be a decrease in the revenue from customs under the new law of about $100,000,000 annually, and it was intended to supply this increase by the tax on incomes. This law would have worked out precisely as designed but for the war in Europe, and it will work out yet to the advantage of the whole country, once the world has returned to its normal condition.

"It was insisted that the new currency and banking system would ruin the country, but no sooner was the law passed than the people who opposed it declared that it was 90 per cent good. The old system was 50 per cent bad; so that the President has won in finance as well as in statesmanship, and all because he has known what he was doing. With him it has been the ultimate and not the penultimate, and the ultimate invariably wins." — Birmingham News.

VOL. 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY OCTOBER 8, 1914 NO. 26.

MR. POUNDS' LETTER

Pletcher, Ala., Oct. 6, 1914

Editor Clanton Press:

After waiting two weeks or, re for Reynolds and the County missioners to answer my stions about who it was that ndered and mis-spent all that ney that Reynolds and his nch of sneezers are running r the county and howling mselves hoarse about, swear- it was the "darn" Democrats, l everybody with an ounce of ption knows is not so, for the darn" Democrats have not had four or five men in office in county in twenty years (un- Will Shaw, Moses Robinson Tom Herrod are Democrats), the offices which those few mocrats have had, had little nothing to do in saying how the ple's money should be spent.

Yes, I have waited for two eks and no answer yet. The ason is they do not dare to ans- er, for if they tell the truth, they st acknowledge that whatever wrong, that they are the bucks at are responsible.

Well, I said there was no ans- er to my questions, and there is ne unless you should take Mr. errod's letter in last week's nion-Banner, as an answer hich it really is not, nor do I ke it that he meant it as such.)

But since that is the only intima- n of answer, we will just notice hat Mr. Herrod said:

1st. That he is opposed to ther bonds or county warrants. So am I, and have been all the hile.

2nd. That he opposes the so- alled speedway as against a gen- ral system of road working. do I.

3rd. That he opposes the ap- propriation of the county's money the special benefit of any ecial locality or class of people, ile the great majority get but ttle if any benefit. So do I.

Well, now, Herrod is my neigh- or, and personally I like him and believe his intentions are good. o I am going to ask him some ersonal questions, as follows:

1st is, how did you vote on the estion of COUNTY WARRANTS uild said speedway?

2nd. How did you vote on the propriation of $4,000.00 to the unty High School, of which not ore than 10 per cent of the chil- ren of the county will ever be ble to attend, and if the people of e county had had a chance to te on the matter, they would oubtless have snowed it under to 1.

3rd. Do you not know that the unty cannot have a bond issue til the question is submitted to vote of the people? Then why much "hullabaloo" over this ond proposition?

4th. Is it not a fact that there re some Bull Moosers wanting a ond issue, notably W. L. Pop- well, the county's present Repre- entative in the Legislature? (See hat great danger we are in if opwell could have his way?)

Now, as for myself, I am and ave been opposed to issuing ounty bonds for any purpose, and think with good and sufficient eason. But I also recognize the act that others have just as much ght to advocate bonds as I have oppose them. I would be glad any suitable time to publicly iscuss the question at length with ny bond advocate, but this is not e question just now at issue.

What the people want is the ruth, unvarnished truth about Who hit Billy Patterson? Who really spent the $4000 and what did they spend it for and what have why in thunder did you let him do it?

What are you Commissioners for, (or fit for) if not for the very specific purpose of handling the finance of the county? Will you tell us that Judge Deason is stronger and more powerful than all you Commissioners combined, and him without a vote in the matter? Well, this is exactly the position and attitude that Reynolds and the Union-Banner is placing you, wherever he speaks and wherever that paper is read. Can't you see that it makes you fellows appear as weaklings and is holding you fellows up as veritable ASSES? Now, honest John, I for one am both sorry for and ashamed of the whole bunch of you. I am sorry for you because you do not seem able to defend yourselves; ashamed of you because you have not the courage to try, but you just wag along and let Reynolds and his crowd go on lying, when they say that the "darn" Democrats are responsible for all the ills we suffer. So come, now, just unlimber and tell us the whole truth and we will be satisfied.

I see the Union-Banner keeps howling about the "issue" that is now before the people of this county.

Well, alright, he seems to want the people to have a vote on whether the County Commissioners should ISSUE county warrants to build speedways. And so do I.

Well sir, this is one ISSUE, and your party or the men you elected did not submit it to the people. Moreover, you are too cowardly to admit it, but go on packing it on the Democrats.

Now the main "issue," after the WARRANT ISSUE, is for you fellows to tell the truth about all public ISSUES so that the common people may be able to know the truth on all public questions [and cast their votes accordingly.

MR. GULLEDGE URGES ATTENDANCE AT GOOD ROADS MEETING

Verbena, Oct. 6, 1914

Editor Press:

By authority vested in me as member of official board of Good Roads Association of Alabama, and by special request of Hons. John Craft and J. A. Rountree, President and Secretary of our Alabama Association, I extend to all who can a hearty invitation to attend our State meeting to be held in Montgomery on Oct. 21st to 23rd, and urge a good attendance. There will be in attendance at said meeting a number of the ablest speakers on the subject of good roads in the United States.

Those who are unposted on the proper methods of building and keeping up highways should attend by all means. Many who are narrow in their views can have their views broadened and be greatly enlightened by going and attending each session. Great pleasures are in store for all who attend.

The last day will be given to the entertainment of those in attendance. The citizens of Montgomery and its municipal board are making great preparations for us. Montgomery people are known far and wide for their hospitality.

The general [illegible] of our Association [illegible]

A VISIT TO CLAY COUNTY.

Verbena, Ala., Oct. 7, 1914.

Editor Clanton Press:—Please allow me space in your paper for a few remarks. I have just returned from a visit to Clay county, my old home, and was very much delighted to see the modern improvements in so many ways.

The farmers have taken advantage of the modern farming methods and hand in hand with the new road system they are stepping forward to the front. With the great improvements of the highway goes the increase in value of their property.

I was very much gratified to see the improvements and especially in such a short time. It proves to me that the new system is far superior to the old one and I feel it to our interest as citizens of the county to adopt the modern methods of road working when we see the success is far greater than under the old road system.

Yours respectfully,

T. J. GRIFFIN.

OTTIS ROBINSON SERIOUSLY SHOT

Ottis Robinson, the 17-year-old son of Mr. John M. Robinson, was shot and seriously wounded at Clanton on Tuesday afternoon by Ben Kendrick, a young man about the same age.

The shooting took place on the railroad just below the planing mill of the Robinson Lumber Co., about two o'clock.

The young men, it is said, had been having trouble for several days past.

An eye witness to the shooting states that Kendrick was going down the railroad track when young Robinson began to chunk him with rocks from the mill. The boy did not retaliate, but kept proceeding on his journey. Robinson then left the mill and advanced upon Kendrick, hitting him with slag. Kendrick kept backing off all the while. When within eight or ten feet of him, Kendrick drew a .38 calibre revolver and fired twice at his assailant, the first shot going wild, but the second entered the pit of the stomach, and lodged near the back bone, inflicting a very dangerous wound.

The young man was carried to Montgomery on the afternoon train, and the bullet extracted Tuesday night. Latest reports are that while his condition is still critical, he has a chance to recover.

Kendrick was arrested and placed in jail by Night Marshal Roper on a charge of assault to murder. He had been in Clanton only a few weeks and claimed Kentucky as his home.

REPORT OF COUNTY HEALTH OFFICER

Dr. V. J. Gragg, County Health Officer, Makes Report as to Conditions in the Eastern Part of the County, Along the Coosa River, As They Now Exist.

(Dated) Clanton, Ala., Sept. 25, 1914.

To Dr. W. H. Sanders, State Health Officer, Montgomery, Ala.

Dear Doctor:

It gives me pleasure to herewith submit my report of the investigation made in regard to malaria in the neighborhood of the reservoir above dam of Alabama Power Co. at Lock 12.

First I wish to state that I did not attempt to cover the entire territory adjacent to this reservoir, but am submitting a map which shows just what territory was covered, and what condition was found in that part covered by me, and I wish to say that I tried to make a thorough investigation so far as I went.

The dotted lines on the map show my route. Leaving Clanton I went via Thomby in my car. Arriving at Beaver School House, Beat 1, I left my car and walked about a mile to the bridge across Waxahatchie Creek. Here I entered a canoe and rowed down the creek about three miles to where it flows into the Coosa river, [illegible] about one and [illegible] this map.

years. I obtained data by sending the word two days before that I wished to meet the people on the afternoon of the 23rd, inst. at their school, and the result was that enough people met me to report ninety-four cases of chills for this year, where there had only been two cases in six years.

There are many, I am informed, who failed to meet me. I know of my own knowledge that the teacher of the school at this place abandoned his school before it was out because of his being confined to his bed with malaria, and he is not included in this survey.

It is needless for me to say that I did not try to account for all cases of malarial infection in those cases seen. I counted only those who suffered marked chills.

Before the rising of the water this section found an outlet by crossing the Waxahatchie creek into Shelby, but now the creek has been converted into an unfordable river.

The main stream contains some standing and thousands of sunken trees, cut before inundation, and some floating logs. The same conditions prevail, to less extent, along the Coosa river, but the worst element of danger seems to be in the small streams and flat hollows tributary to both the river and creek. Here thousands of logs are found floating and thousands of trees, some dead, some dying and others still living, are partially submerged.

In conclusion I will say that I can tell much of the timber was cut. Little of that cut was destroyed and much was left standing. There being thousands of trees with the water half way up to their tops.

I saw no ditches for draining pools that would be filled at high water. The water at some places has a very offensive odor.

Respectively submitted

(Signed) V. J. GRAGG, M. D.,

County Health Officer.

ADDRESS OF CHAIRMAN NESBITT

Before the Democratic Campaign Committee on Sept. 28, 1914.

"Our present work seems one of publicity rather than argument. When every voter in Alabama fully knows what democracy has done, is doing and proposes to do, I firmly believe that they will make the election of democratic nominees unanimous.

"There never was a time when policies of government so vitally and immediately affected the business of our citizens. On account of a great European war we are passing through a period of tremendous financial strain.

"Under great provocation a Democratic President and cabinet have maintained friendly relations with our American sister republics, thus furnishing opportunity for great trade expansion at a time when we most need it.

"What a contrast in now presented between Europe and America. There, blighting, fearful war. Here, dignified, fearless peace. A democratic government not afraid to fight but fearless enough not to [illegible]

"Fortunate it is that new insurance companies out of business.

"A democratic Congress promptly gave powers to the administration which resulted in American made ideas to supply these necessities of the country's commerce.

"A democratic government has quickly appreciated the need of the individual cotton producer.

"Within 30 days of the declaration of this European war the decline in the selling price of cotton from 13 cents to 6 cents a pound levied a war tax of $25 per bale, aggregating to the South $525,000,000. Let's see what a democratic administration is doing to prevent the collection of this tax.

"Through the treasury department it has immediately used all the discretion that the constitution and the statutes allow, and for the first time in the history of this country has made a bale of cotton a basis of value for the issue of bank currency exactly the same as bonds.

THE WORLD REASSURED.

"This prompt action gave the world confidence in the value of cotton and the holder an opportunity to borrow on it rather than be compelled to part with it; the consequence has been an advance in its selling price from 6 cents to 8 1-2 cents. In order to make this temporary relief permanent the government, as represented in the democratic party of this state, must quickly acquaint our farmers and merchants with the real conditions in Europe; that war there, even if stopped before Christmas, has so destroyed the spinning industry that a crop of cotton next year exceeding one-half of this year's crop may be a burden and sell at very low prices; that the same facts which send cotton down will make all grain and food-stuff in demand at high prices next spring and summer; the land planted in grain this fall cannot be planted in cotton next spring, and if the South plants NOW in grain and food crops one-half of last year's cotton acreage it is assured of profitable returns in 1915, and the world knowing NOW that cotton cannot be produced next year will gladly buy at good prices or lend on our present surplus cotton.

"Every democratic paper and speaker should say now what a democratic government is doing and what a watchful administration is saying must be done by the planter in order to best protect his interests.

"The individual producer has not been too small to have the thought and care of a democratic administration; neither has it overlooked big business.

THE GUBERNATORIAL CANDIDATE

"In Alabama it is time for all democrats to enthusiastically get behind our candidate for governor and give him a solid democratic legislature. We can do it if we work hard enough. Those of us who know him personally recognize his high integrity and unusual business ability. His expressed determination to give much time to improving our methods of assessment and taxation and to reducing the cost of state administration, mean accomplishment in these lines. Our people need, and the democratic party, proposes to give them, a system of taxation less annoying and more in keeping with the state's advancement than the present one, outgrown.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE
Author of "The Fighting Fool" "Hidden Waters" "The Tenderfoot," Etc.

CHAPTER XXII—Continued.

"Let the Mexicans fight it out," he said. "They might resent it if you took sides, and that would make it bad for us. Just wait a while—you never can tell what will happen. Perhaps the rurales and federals will stand them off."

"What, that little bunch?" demanded Bud, pointing scornfully at the handful of defenders who were cowering behind their rock piles. "Why half of them peloneS don't know what a gun was made for, and the rurales—"

"Well, the rebels are the same," suggested the superintendent pacifically. "Let them fight it out—we need every American we can get, so just forget about being a Mexican."

"All right," agreed Bud, as he yielded reluctantly to reason. "It ain't because I'm a Mexican citizen—I just want to stop that rush."

He walked back to the house, juggling his useless gun and keeping his eye on the distant ridges. And then, in a chorus of defiant yells, the men in the federal trenches began to shoot.

In an airline the distance was something over a mile, but at the first scattering volley the rebels halted and fired a volley in return. With a vicious spang a few stray bullets smashed against the reverberating steel tank, but no one was hurt, and the defenders, drunk with valor, began to shoot and yell like mad.

The bullets of the rebels, fired at random, struck up dust-jets in every direction, and from the lower part of the town came the shouting of the noncombatant Mexicans as they ran here and there for shelter. But by the trenches and in the rear of the black tank, the great crowd of onlookers persisted, ducking as each successive bullet hit the tank and shouting encouragement as the defenders emptied their rifles and reloaded with clip after clip.

The rifles rattled a continuous volley; spent bullets leaped like locusts across the flat; men ran to and fro, now crouching behind the tank, now stepping boldly into the open; and the defiant shouts of the defenders almost drowned the wails of the women. Except for one thing it was a battle—there was nobody hurt.

For the first half-hour the Americans stayed prudently under cover, busying themselves at the suggestion of a few American women in providing a first-aid hospital on the sheltered porch. Then, as no wounded came to fill it and the rebels delayed their charge, one man after another climbed up to the trenches, ostensibly to bring down the injured.

As soldiers and bystanders reported no one hit, and the bullets flew harmlessly past, their solicitude turned rapidly to disgust and then to scorn. Strange as it may seem, they were disappointed at the results, and their remarks were derogatory as they commented on the bravery of pelones and Mexicans in general.

From a dread of imminent attack, of charging rebels and retreating defenders, and a fight to the death by the house, they came suddenly to a desire for blood and battle, for dead men and the cries of the wounded; and all fear of the insurrectos left them.

"Come away, boys," grunted the burly roadmaster, who up to then had had in the work; "we wasted our time on that hospital—there'll be no wounded. Let's take ourselves back to the house and have a quiet smoke."

"Right you are, Ed," agreed the master mechanic, as he turned upon his heel in disgust. "This ain't war—them Mexicans think they're working for a moving-picture show!"

"I bet you I can go up on that ridge," announced Hooker, "and clean out the whole bunch with my six-shooter before you could bat your eye."

But the superintendent was not so sure.

"Never mind, boys," he said. "We're worth a lot of ransom money to those rebels and they won't give up so quick. And look at this now—my miners coming back! These are the boys that will fight! Wait till Chico and Ramon Mendoza get after them!"

He pointed as he spoke to a straggling band of Sonorans, led by the much-vaunted Mendoza brothers, as they hurried to save the town, and a cheer went up from the trenches as the federals beheld reinforcements. But a change had come over the fire-eating miners, and they brought other rebels in their wake.

As they trudged wearily into town and sought shelter among the houses a great hurt it was appeared on the opposite ridge, firing down at them as they retreated. The battle slightly altered now, a long-distance meeting contest, with the rebels on the ridges and the defenders in the valley, and deadly, as the day grew on and shots commenced to come in, it died out altogether and the rebels carried back to their camp.

Except for one hope-ruined she had said little all afternoon, but a single thought burned in her mind. Her husband, who had suffered torture at the hands of the rebels, had taken the part of the Mexicans against the Americans, and he had done it deliberately, knowing that it would estrange her from him. Even when the fight was on and the bullets were flying he had refused to take a hand, and when the rebels had come on in force he had gone out to talk with them, leaving her to take care of the wounded.

Now, as she sat on the porch, with the sun sinking behind the mountains, she could see him in the distance, walking to and fro with the rebel officers, and the more she thought of it the more she felt that he had deserted her. Not that she was afraid of the rebels, for she knew that Mexicans never harmed women, but that he had chosen to go with them rather than stay with her.

"Oh!" breathed Gracia, and then, after a pause, she came nearer and leaned against the low wall beside him.

"If I would speak from my heart," she asked, "if I would talk plain, as you Americans do, would you like me better than? Would you talk to me instead of standing silent? Listen, Bud—for that is your name—I want you to be my friend the way you were a friend to Phil. I know what you did for him, and how you bore with his love-madness—and that was my fault, too. But partly it was also your fault, for you made me angry by not coming.

"Yes, I will be honest now—it was you that I wanted to know at first, but you would not come, and now I am promised to Phil. He was brave when you were careful, and my heart went out to him. You know how it is with us Mexicans—we do not love by reason. We love like children—suddenly—from the heart! And now all I wish in life is to run away to Phil. But every time I speak of it you shut your jaws or tell me I am a fool."

"Ump-um," protested Bud, turning stubborn again. "I tell you you don't know what you're talking about. These rebels don't amount to nothing around the town, but on a trail they're awful. They shoot from behind rocks and all that, and a woman ain't noways safe. You must know what they're like—these old women don't think about nothing else—so what's the use of talking! And besides," he added grimly, "I've had some trouble with your old man and don't want to have any more."

"What trouble have you had?" she demanded promptly, but Hooker would not answer in words. He only shrugged his shoulders and turned away, crumpling his hat in his hand.

"But no!" she cried as she sensed the meaning of his concealment, "you must tell me! I want to know. Was it over your mine? Then you must not blame me, for he never has told me a word!"

"No?" inquired Bud, rousing suddenly at the memory of his wrongs. "Then maybe you will tell me how he got this"—he fetched a worn piece of ore from his pocket—"when my partner gave it to you! It was right there I lost my partner—and he was a good kid, too—and all because of that rock. Here, take a look at it—I took that away from your father!"

"Then he stole it from me!" flashed back Gracia as she gazed at the specimen. "Oh, have you thought all the time that I betrayed Phil? But didn't I tell you—didn't I tell you at the hotel, when you promised to be my friend? Ah, I see that you are a hard man, Mr. Hooker—quick to suspect, slow to forget—and yet I told you before! But listen, and I will tell you again. I remember well when dear Phil showed me this rock—he was so happy because he had found the gold! And just to make it lucky he let me hold it while we were talking through a hole in the wall. Then my father saw me and started to come near—I could not hand it back without betraying Phil—and in the night, when I was asleep, some one took it from under my pillow. That is the truth, and I will ask you to believe me; and if you have other things against me you must say what they are and see if I cannot explain.

"No!" she ran on, her voice vibrant with the memory of past quarrels, "I have nothing to do with my father! He does not love me, but tries to make me marry first one man and then another. But I am an American girl—you, at least—I do not want to sell myself; I want to marry for love! Can you understand that? Yes? No? Then why do you look away? Have you something that you hold against me? Ah, you shake your head—but you will not speak to me? When I was at school in Los Angeles I saw the cowboys in the wild show, and they wear different—they were unafraid of any danger, but they would talk. See, I have always wished to know you, but you will not let me. If Orozco and you were brave—like these cowboys—

How Europeans Get Our Gold

Do you know just how Europe recently got that $125,000,000 in American gold. Well, here is the way it was done. Europeans hold great amounts of American securities, which is to say they have bought bonds issued in this country. When the war crisis came they saw the need of actual money in place of these bonds. They cabled to their American brokers to sell at the market price. They took whatever they could get, but there was always something offered, so the sales were heavy.

The purchasers of these bonds gave their checks. These the brokers cashed at their banks and got currency. The currency of the United States is made good by the deposit of gold in the treasuries. For every gold certificate in existence there is the actual metal in the treasury. So the brokers, getting the currency from the banks, went to the sub-treasury in New York and asked for the actual gold. They received it and sent the gold to their customers abroad.

Fashion Note.

"One blessing, at least, will come to us from this dreadful war. We shan't be inundated with absurd French fashions."

The speaker was a leading woman. She resumed:

"At a club dinner the other night a man fashion writer—man fashion writers are the best—said to me: 'A truce to these foreign models. They are caricatures.'

PICKED OUT THE RIGHT TIME

Boy a Good Deal More Thoughtful Than Most Youngsters We Ever Heard Of.

A popular member of a certain school board tells a good story of a bright schoolboy who enjoys the unique distinction of having attended school for 11 years without being absent or late. In evidence of the youth is the proud owner of medals. When the eleventh medal was conferred the boy's mother was asked whether her son ever had any [illegible].

"Oh, yes," she replied.

"Measles?"

"Yes."

"Whooping cough?"

"Yes."

"How is it, then, that he has been able to make so remarkable a record at school?"

"Well, he generally had 'em in the holidays," was the proud mother's interesting reply.

Escapes in Heat of Battle.

Reports indicate it sometimes takes a lot to kill the modern soldier, the New York World states. Sergeant Lefevre of France received eight bullet wounds, a broken arm and other injuries, and although shot in the calf, thigh and ankle, escaped being captured by Germans and limped ten miles to his regiment. Another French soldier received six bullets and three bayonet wounds and is recovering. The French war office estimates only two men are killed out of every one hundred hit. The peneration is so clean one soldier did not know he had been hit for three hours, and another bullet went through two soldiers and lodged in a cavalryman's saddle.

Old Charon Must Explain.

The boat made fast after the last row of the night, Charon, homeward bound, encountered a stranger in one of the ill-lighted streets along the water front.

"What's the idea?" asked the old boatman.

"Summons," the stranger replied, producing the papers. "The interstate commerce commission wants to know how you killed off all competition. Also public-service corporations are in for a hard winter."

Heavy Cost of Bad Weather

It has been figured that a day's continued frost or snow in England results in the idleness of 1,000,000 workmen.

LIGHT BOOZE.
Do You Drink It?

A minister's wife had quite a battle with coffee and her experience is interesting. She says:

"During the two years of my training as a nurse, while on night duty, I became addicted to coffee drinking. Between midnight and four in the morning, when the patients were asleep, there was little to do except make the rounds, and it was quite natural that I should want a hot cup of coffee about that time. I could keep awake better.

"After three or four years of coffee drinking, I became a nervous wreck and thought that I simply could not live without my coffee. All this time I was subject to frequent bilious attacks, sometimes so severe as to keep me in bed for several days.

"After being married, Husband begged me to leave off coffee for he feared that it had already hurt me almost beyond repair, so I resolved to make an effort to release myself from the hurtful habit.

"I began taking Postum, and for a few days felt the languid, tired feeling from the lack of the coffee drug, but I liked the taste of Postum, and that answered for the breakfast beverage all right.

"Finally I began to feel clearer headed and had steadier nerves. After a year's use of Postum I now feel like a new woman—have not had many bilious attacks since I left off coffee." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich. Read "The Road to Wellville," in pkgs.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum—must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum—is a soluble powder. A teaspoonful dissolves quickly in a cup of hot water, and with cream and sugar, makes a delightful beverage instantly. 30c and 50c tins.

The cost per cup of both forms is about the same.

FIFTEEN KILLED SIXTEEN INJURED

Explosion in Mulga Mine Near Birmingham, Owned by Woodward Iron Company.

MINER'S LAMP IGNITES GAS

Two Hundred and Seventy Miners at Work in the Mines When Explosion Occurred.

Birmingham, Ala.—An explosion of a pocket of gas in the 9th and 10th entries of the Mulga Mines located at Mulga, and operated by the Woodward Iron Company, resulted in the loss of fifteen lives and the injury of sixteen others. Two hundred and seventy were at work in the mines when the explosion occurred.

Mulga Mine has an output of about 1,250 tons of coal a day. It employs about 325 men and on the day of the accident 270 mine workers were checked in.

A few minutes before 9 o'clock on the morning of October 5, between the right ninth and tenth entries on the north haulage, about three-quarters of a mile from the mine shaft, an explosion occurred, the exact cause of which is yet undetermined. There were between 120 and 135 employes in the immediate vicinity of the explosion, and that any of them were rescued alive is said to have been due to the excellent sprinkling system maintained at Mulga Mine by the Woodward Iron Company.

State Mine Inspector Nesbitt stated that it was a purely local explosion. He said:

"It was an explosion that would be likely to happen in any mine no matter how well maintained in regard to safety as wherever human hands go a certain amount of carelessness follows. However, if the mine had not such an excellent sprinkling system none of the men within would have come out alive. The explosion was purely local and confined to two entries. Only two of the men were disfigured and burned by the explosion so that it could not have been very heavy. The deadly afterdamp killed the rest. I will make my report on this accident in a few days.

"Another matter which I would like noted is that an electric miner's lamp which was being demonstrated was responsible for saving lives. A negro named Harry Jackson, equipped with one of these electric lamps, managed to bring several men out, and others with the lamps tell the same tale. Mr. Norris Campbell, the demonstrator of the lamps, deserves great credit."

An official account of the disaster from the lips of one of the miners who was near the scene of the explosion was to the effect that it was caused by a short circuit of air brought about by a broken trap door. This accumulated an amount of gas and when two foreign miners entered the entry after crossing over a danger sign the flame from their miners' lamps caused the explosion. It is these two bodies that showed signs of burns and of being blown back, as their bodies were slightly mangled. It was known that the trap door was broken and workers had been so warned.

NO CHANGE IN WAR SITUATION.

Action on Left Wing Continues, Says French Report.

Paris.—The following official communication was issued by the French war office:

"The general situation is stationary. On our left wing the action still continues.

"In the region of the Argonne and on the heights of the Meuse we have repulsed night and day attacks.

"Grand Duke Nicholas has addressed to the ministry of war, to be transmitted to General Joffre, a telegram announcing the victory of Austerlitz. General Joffre has sent, in his name and in the name of the French army, his warmest congratulations to the commander in chief of the friendly and allied army on the battle won, which is a guarantee of future successes."

London.—A Reuter dispatch from Amsterdam says:

"In a long and optimistic review of the situation in both the eastern and western theatres of the war the military correspondent of the Berliner Tageblatt, Major Moraht, though apparently not very well pleased with the secrecy of news from German headquarters, says the German general staff has sufficient fresh troops at its disposal to oppose any French and British tactical attempts to outflank the German right wing and to attack the German flank.

"It is Major Moraht's opinion that the long drawn out line of the allied forces will be the weakest point for defeat.

IN STERLING LIVES A GIRL

Who Suffered As Many Girls Do—Tells How She Found Relief.

Sterling, Conn.—"I am a girl of 22 years and I used to faint away every month and was very weak. I was also bothered a lot with female weakness. I read your little book 'Wisdom for Women,' and I saw how others had been helped by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, and decided to try it, and it has made me feel like a new girl and I am now relieved of all these troubles. I hope all young girls will get relief as I have. I never felt better in my life."—Miss BERTHA A. PELOQUIN, Box 116, Sterling, Conn.

Massena, N. Y.—"I have taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I highly recommend it. If anyone wants to write to me I will gladly tell her about my case. I was certainly in a bad condition as my blood was all turning to water. I had pimples on my face and a bad color, and for five years I had been troubled with suppression. The doctors called it 'Anemia and Exhaustion,' and said I was all run down, but Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound brought me out all right."—Miss LAVISA MYERS, Box 74, Massena, N. Y.

Young Girls, Heed This Advice.

Girls who are troubled with painful or irregular periods, backache, headache, dragging-down sensations, fainting spells or indigestion, should immediately seek restoration to health by taking Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Both Valenciennes and Malines, two of the latest towns to come into prominence in the western theater of war, have now little association with the production of lace beyond giving their names to the famous varieties. At Valenciennes, indeed, the manufacture has been discontinued, but the place has an alternate fame as the birthplace of Froissart, the historian (nearly six centuries ago) and of Watteau, the artist (230 years ago).

SMALL WARS MEAN BIG POEMS

Greatest Battle Hymns Have Not Been Inspired by Titanic Struggles Like the Present One.

The greatest poems have been written about little wars. The Iliad was written around a siege carried on by a handful of barbarian chieftains against a city of the second class. The battle of Chevy Chase was a border skirmish following upon a cattle-stealing expedition. And Kipling's imperial muse is at her best when she sings of petty wars with colored tribesmen. Britain's far-flung battle line was far flung against Dervishers and Afrids; it was seldom brought into collision with field intrenchments and siege artillery. Little war, or else big wars in anticipation of retrospect, these are the rich soil for the poet.

A great war in the actual, the fate of an empire truly at stake, may make poets out of the common crowd, but subdues the poet to the level of the common crowd. There is a solemn tone about Kipling's latest verse which has its effect. Only it is not exhortation we wanted, but exultation; not an appeal, but a clarion call. When an entire nation is aflame the poet is apt to find his mission rather perfunctory.

ALMOST BALD WITH ECZEMA

R. F. D. No. 2, Johnson City, Tenn.—"Some time ago my head became covered with small sores which they said was eczema. They were red and inflamed and when I would comb my head they would break and run a yellowish matter. My hair was coming out by handfuls until I was getting almost bald. My hair was so dead and dry it seemed as if it would break off.

"I put on —— and —— and several other remedies without getting any help. I got a cake of Cuticura Soap and some Cuticura Ointment and used them. In a short time the pimples dried up and my hair stopped falling out and is thick and glossy. I am cured." (Signed) J. W. Fisher, Jan. 1, 1914.

"Przemysl."

"Przemysl" is one of the few really simple proper names that have secured notoriety in the Russian invasion of Galicia. It is pronounced "Pshem-is-l," with the accent on the "shem." Just how easy this is one may appreciate by considering Przemyslany, in the first syllable of which the "r" is sounded, thus: "Prshe," with the Austro-Hungarian variation of "miscellany" following. In pronouncing "Przemysl" you should carefully hold a "p" between your teeth while pronouncing "shem" (which is a soft, mushroom, damdum variety of "shem") and just as you are about to eject it deftly insert the "p" in the outer hook of the "z," thus: "Pshem." Nothing can be simpler.

Approaching, but Not Close.

"When I left Havre on my way back to England," says Representative Gardner of Massachusetts, "600 French soldiers lined up on the dock and sang 'God save the King' in English. By the nine gods of war! as our own General Bingham would say, this incident, taken in connection with the Belgians stepping to the front chanting 'It's a Long Way to Tipperary,' seems to indicate the approach of the much-touted brotherhood of man."

Girl Made Victim of Hoax by Mischievous Friends Went Home in a Fury.

One day several of my girl friends called to see me. We started to make some candy when I discovered that we didn't have any chocolate in the house and said that I couldn't possibly make it without "a speck of chocolate."

Mary, one of the girls, said: "Why, what kind of chocolate is that—couldn't you use any other kind?"

One of the girls gave me a pinch and I said: "Oh, no, I couldn't use any other kind. It's a new kind. You telephone the grocery and order some, Mary, and we'll start the candy. Now be sure and order 'Aspecka.'"

"So we filed to the kitchen and left Mary to telephone. We sat in the kitchen holding our sides with suppressed laughter while she called up one store after another trying to get "Aspecka chocolate." She finally gave up in despair and then we told her. Needless to say, she went home in a fury, as mad as a wet hen. She barely spoke to us for weeks after that.—Chicago Tribune.

Strong Man's Weakness.

Speaking of great feats of strength Franklin H. Lane, secretary of the interior, recalled an incident that happened in a western state.

One afternoon an elderly woman visited the penitentiary, and on passing before a certain cell was told that the inmate had been imprisoned for stealing a piano.

"I am very sorry to see you here," remarked the woman turning to the convict. "Is it true that you stole a piano?"

"Yes, ma'am," was the frank admission of the convict. Then he added: "I did it in a moment of weakness."

"In a moment of weakness!" gasped the elderly visitor. "Mercy me! I presume that had you your usual strength you would have walked away with the whole house!"

Found He Was Mistaken.

A man from the country, in charge one will say from the country, although he may have been a Bostonese, entered a New York restaurant the other evening, and while waiting to be served, gave his attention to an electric fan revolving just above his head. It was a high pressure fan, noiseless, and almost, if not quite, invisible because of its rapid motion. The stranger gazed at it for some considerable time and was heard to mutter: "I don't believe there is anything there at all." With that he put up his hand to confirm his belief. Immediately there was a yell that almost threw the place into a panic. The man sprang into the air, rushed out of the door and, as he disappeared, was heard to say: "I monkeyed with the buzz-saw, all right."

Four men in Georgia wanted to marry one woman. We'll bet that woman was from Alabama.—Andalusia Star.

Yes, and from Chilton county.

"Why is cotton 12 cents in Liverpool and 7 cents in Alabama? And why are business conditions much better in Germany than in the United States? Will some free trade Democrat kindly explain?"

The Union-Banner prints the above in its issue of Oct. 1st, evidently for the purpose of misleading the people of Chilton county and by this kind of deception to get a few Progressive votes. Cotton is quoted at 5 d. on the Liverpool Exchange, which is equal to about 10 cents per pound American money, and the young editor of the Union-Banner should be able to figure this out correctly as he says he has only recently come out of school. Now, we hardly think there is a man in Chilton county, and we didn't think there was a school boy, who would think that cotton raised in Alabama could be shipped to the compress, from the compress to the seaport and from there across the Atlantic ocean with all of the charges for compressing, handling, foreign exchange, etc., and be sold in Liverpool for the same price as it sells for in Alabama.

We doubt if the editor of the Union-Banner or any farmer in Chilton county would be willing to haul his cotton, to New York or even to Birmingham and sell it for the price he would take at Clanton.

As for business conditions in Germany being better than in the United States this is too absurd to call for reply, for our people are well enough informed to know that a great war is raging in Germany and that all business is paralyzed except such as the women and children can carry on while the men are in arms. And the Democrats did not bring on the European war either, no matter who tells you they did.

Cut Cotton to the Bone, Or Pay the Penalty!

Whether your stake in the south, its present and future, is one cent, or one million dollars, let this fact sink indelibly into your mind:

No solution of present stress or future menace is worth the paper on which it is written, nor the breath with which it is uttered, unless with it goes the definite assurance that the cotton crop of next year will be cut at least one-half!

To resist this ultimatum is to hypnotize the south along the high road to disaster. To ignore it, is to assure that conditions next fall will make conditions this fall resemble a summer day in the lap of plenty. To acknowledge it, and make it effectual will be to make present troubles vanish like the mist and underwrite an ironclad insurance policy of bounteous prosperity for 1915 and the years that follow.

The crop of next year must be cut at the least one-half.

To cut it two-thirds, or three-fourths, will be better.

The logic of this statement is mathematically irresistible.

In September of 1915 there will be on hand, in all human probability, almost enough cotton to run the factories of the world, those of this country included—this regardless of a single bale of next year's crop.

If the south piles on that condition anything remotely approaching a normal crop, imagination is not required to prefigure the result.

The Constitution is not an alarmist. But it has the courage to face facts. And the facts are that a normal crop next year will be an invitation to disaster.

This is not an attractive picture. It is just a true one.

A more attractive picture is this:

The south out of debt; the south with its banks bulging with the deposits of farmer and business man; the south collecting revenue from practically every nation in the world; the south with its trade and financial relations extended to the horizons of civilization; the south with an impetus to prosperity infallibly founded, that will make it in a few swift years the industrial empire of the United States and of this hemisphere.

The government may, which we take liberty to doubt, slather millions down here within the next ten days, the states may individually or collectively valorize every bale of distress cotton; the buy-a-bale movement may expand to the heathen Chinee.

But you can bet your last dollar that if the south presents the world with anything but a very, very scant crop of cotton next year, all these other movements will go down as monumental futilities.

That's as sure as sunrise tomorrow morning.

Reduction to the bone! That's first!

The next and indispensable twin to the formula for prosperity is the raising upon southern soil of every penny's worth of food the south expects to consume next year; with enough over to levy tribute upon the rest of civilization.

We have the acreage, the soil, the climate, the time to materialize that program.

Have we the nerve and foresight?

The answer is that if we haven't we are going to crush our heels into the face of opportunity, and issue a smiling and fatuous invitation to trouble.

Reduction to the bone!

Diversification, with the skies the limit! That's the south's sure salvation!

The man or men who overlook or ignore these facts are the south's cruelest enemies; for if these facts are overlooked or ignored, the south bids fair to chloroform its prosperity and progress for the next twenty years—perhaps longer—by entering a period of cheap cotton from which it will take it years to emerge.

The above editorial from the Atlanta Constitution is, we think, the best solution of the cotton problem that we have yet noticed, and we gladly reproduce it in our columns. Aside from the European trouble which has wrecked the cotton market, we have the boll weevil with us. A gentleman informed us a few days ago that the pest has made his appearance at Maplesville and has already wrought injury to the present crop.

As the Constitution says, a normal crop next season means nothing less than disaster to the southern farmer, and we may as well face the issue squarely. Let diversification be the battle cry next year; wheat and other money crops can be grown more successfully than cotton, and every farmer should raise more [illegible]

FARMING IN CHINA

These as you know feed on the leaf of the mulberry tree. Little sprouts are set out in large fields and cultivated. When they get up two or three feet high the new shoots are cut down and the leaves given to the silk worms, which leaves room for more young shoots and leaves to grow. China is noted for her silk. I think she produces more silk than any other country in the world.

You may have heard that there is nothing to eat in China but rice, but from reading the above you see there is something else. Also we have beef, pork, mutton, chicken, duck, goose, fish. In the villages nearly every family has a few pigs, chickens, and ducks. These meats are eaten a great deal by the well-to-do Chinese, but the very poor do not eat much meat. Rice is their principle diet. Two or three cents worth of Chinese vegetables will likely be a meal for a family of five or six. They have enough vegetables or meat to flavor their rice a little. In our home we have practically the same thing to eat that we did in America, and the prices are about the same.

The Chinese are very skillful farmers in their way. With their way of farming and living all the people in Alabama could live in Chilton county and make their living there. Not only in China but in all the world the man who tills the soil makes the world move.

A couple of negro prisoners, being carried to the state penitentiary, jumped out of the car window of a south bound passenger train just south of town, Wednesday morning and made their escape through the swamp. Sheriff Jones and a posse are making a thorough search for the prisoners. The negroes were sent up from a north Alabama county.

We sell the Columbia phone battery, the long-life kind. Alred Drug Company.

An unknown negro man was found dead on the place of Mr. Ed Smitherman, two miles north of Maplesville, on Tuesday morning. Apparently the negro had been dead for several days. Nothing is known as to how he came to his death, the supposition being that he was murdered.

Jumps on Rusty Sidewalk Nail

While working on a well digging machine a Minnesota man jumped upon a rusty sidewalk spike. The nail drove part of his black woolen sock far up into his foot. He removed as much of the sock as he could, put on Allen's Ulcerine Salve, and kept right on with his work. The salve drew out part of the sock and all other poisons and in a week his foot was healed up.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

An article by Wm. M. Adams, on Senator Bankhead's plan to relieve the cotton situation, was crowded out of this week's issue. It will appear in next week's issue.

Last Sunday's Montgomery Advertiser contained the following announcement:

Engagement of Mr. Roper and Miss Shelby.

Mr. and Mrs. Fort Hilliard Shelby announce the engagement of their daughter, Lillian Moore, to Mr. Royal Marvin Roper, the marriage to take place at half after 8 o'clock on the morning of Monday, the 26th day of October, at their home on Holcombe Street.

This announcement will be of interest to many friends. Miss Shelby is both pretty and attractive and has a large circle of friends who wish her every happiness.

Mr. Roper has made his home in Montgomery for several years, coming here from Clanton, Ala. He has a host of friends who congratulate him heartily.

FOR STRENGTH AND GRACE

Proper Training of Boy's Muscles is Something Worth Highest Degree of Consideration.

In the American Magazine Dr. Charles K. Taylor of Philadelphia writes an interesting and practically helpful article entitled "Your Boy and His Muscles," in which he gives suggestions as to proper exercises for young boys. Following is an extract from his article:

"First of all, when a child is in a poor condition of which the basic cause is some remediable physical defect there is little use in giving special exercises until the defect is removed. For instance, breathing exercises cannot be nearly as effective as they should be for a child suffering from large adenoids, nor can you expect good results when a child has some physical irritation inducing nervous effects of different kinds. Above all, you should always know the state of the child's heart. If the heart is good, and if there are no serious remediable defects to interfere with your obtaining good results, then you can take up the matter of special exercises with some degree of confidence.

"When you find just where your boy is lacking, whether in chest expansion, shoulder girth, spine, and so on, or perhaps in posture, if he is hollow-chested with shoulders bent forward, then you can take up the exercise suggested for that difficulty. And right here is a word of caution, which will be repeated over and over: Never [illegible]

NATION OBSERVES PEACE SUNDAY

Prayers For Peace In Europe Are Offered Up In Churches Over the Entire Country.

ALLIES ARE SLOWLY GAINING

At Aisne—Rulers Of Three Warring Nations With Their Troops At The Front

While the voices of thousands of people assembled in the churches throughout the United States was lifted in prayer on Sunday for peace among the warring nations of Europe, the titanic struggle on the European continent continued with all its fury. It is reported that the rulers of the three nations at war have gone to the front. Kaiser William of Germany is said to be with his troops attempting to stem the progress of the Russians in East Prussia; King Albert, the Belgian king, is leading his troops against the German armies, and President Poincare of France has gone to join his soldiers in the north of France.

It was announced from Paris that President Poincare's mission to his soldiers was not to direct the fighting or to interfere with General Joffre's plans, but to deliver to the soldiers his personal appreciation for their heroic efforts in repulsing the German invaders from French soil. Kaiser William is much alarmed over the continued successes of the Russians in East Prussia, German Poland and Galicia. Vienna fears that the Russians will endeavor to take the Austrian capital. The Germans up to the present time have been unable to check the progress of the czar's armies in German territory.

Slowly but surely the allied armies of France and Great Britain have been pushing the Germans backward out of France into Belgium. The battle line is now close to the Belgian border. The fortunes of war have been playing fickle with the contesting armies in the north of France. In some places the Germans gain an advantage, while at other points along the 150-mile battle line the allies have the better of the argument.

Belgians Reinforced At Antwerp

The little Belgian army is again bearing its share of the attack of the German armies. For the past week the kaiser's soldiers have been doing their utmost to crush the defenses at Antwerp and capture the city. Antwerp is one of the strongest fortified cities in the world. The British are watching the attack on Antwerp with much anxiety, as the capture of this important city would render possible an opening to the North sea and a future campaign in England. The British have hurried their artillery to aid the Belgians in the defense of the city.

Austria Agrees To Italy's Demands

For a time it appeared that Austria and Italy would become entangled in a diplomatic struggle which might end in the declaration of war by Italy on Austria, but this was happily averted when Austria agreed to the demands of Italy to remove the floating mines in the Adriatic sea and to pay an indemnity to the families of Italian fishermen who were killed by the destruction of a fishing boat by an Austrian mine. It is expected that shipping on the Adriatic sea will be resumed as soon as Austria gives notice that all of the mines have been removed.

German Victory For Africa

In China the Japanese troops have been extremely active in their campaign against the German colony in China, but they have done little fighting so far. It is said that China complained of the Japanese violating their neutrality, but the Japanese have paid little attention to these complaints and have moved their troops by the most direct routes. They were not molested by the Chinese soldiers. There has been somewhat of a lull in the fighting between the British and Germans in South Africa with the exception of one small skirmish in which the Germans were the victors.

In an earnest desire for a hasty culmination of the war in Europe, President Wilson issued a proclamation setting aside Sunday, October 4, as peace day and requested that prayers be offered up by the American people all over the United States for peace.

Germans Routed By Russians

Petrograd.—The official statement from general staff headquarters issued reads:

"The battle of Augustowo ended October 3, in a victory for the Russian arms. The German defeat is complete.

"The enemy is in a disordered retreat toward the east Prussian frontier. The valiant Russian troops are in close pursuit, the Germans abandoning in their desperate march trains, cannon and munitions, not having even time to gather up their wounded."

Irish Loyal To British

Dublin.—The number of new recruits for the British army obtained in Ireland is about 36,000. More than 5,000 of these are from the Dublin district, 4,000 from Cork district and the remainder from Belfast. Not all the Belfast recruits are enlisted, nor are all the applicants for enlistment Protestants. The Belfast contingent is said to have furnished 5,000 of the 36,000 recruits, while Connaught, which is overwhelmingly Catholic, has furnished 1,000.

Washington.—Prayers for peace in Europe arose from all parts of the United States Sunday. Clergymen of all denominations read President Wilson's proclamation, made a fervent peace prayer, and congregations gathered to sing peace hymns and take part in peace services.

The president attended the Central Presbyterian church here and heard Rev. James H. Taylor pray that the United States might be instrumental in restoring peace to Europe and that Mr. Wilson might be given wisdom and strength in his mediation proposals. The church was packed. After the services a large crowd waited until the president had taken communion, to watch him ride away in his automobile.

May Bring Lasting Peace

New York.—Hope that the European war will be the last object lesson of the horrors of strife and that after it the efforts of man will be devoted to production rather, than destruction, was expressed Sunday by Secretary of State Bryan and Oscar S. Straus, former secretary of commerce and labor, at a special peace day service at Carnegie Hall. The meeting was one of many held in this city in accordance with President Wilson's recent proclamation, designating Sunday as a day of prayer for peace.

"Today, when a number of nations, all our friends, have been drawn into the vortex of war," said Secretary Bryan, "our first duty is to use such influence as we may have to hasten the return of peace. There will be ample time afterward to discuss ways and means for preventing future appeals to arms.

"Our interests are so entwined with the interests of other lands that no nation can live or die unto itself alone. If we had no higher reason for encouraging conditions conducive to peace, we should find ample justification in the fact that the burdens of war no longer are borne entirely by its direct participants."

Success For Allies At Aisne

Paris.—The official announcement issued by the French war office reports progress in the region of Soissons, where several German trenches have been taken.

The battle on the left wing is in full swing without decisive result. The text of the communication follows:

"First—On our left wing the struggle is in full swing in the region of Arras, without decision having been reached. The action has been less violent between the upper valley of the Ancre and the Somme, and between the Somme and the Oise. We have made progress in the region of Soissons, where some of the enemy's trenches have been captured.

"Second—On almost all the remainder of the front, the lull already noted, persists. In the Woevre region we have made some progress between Apremont and the Meuse and on the Rupt de Mad."

Vienna Hospitals Are Crowded

Venice.—Vienna hospitals and all temporary asylums for sick and wounded soldiers are fearfully crowded. The city council has decided to build additional wooden barrack hospitals, which will be furnished with ten thousand beds. Buildings of the University of Vienna have been given over to the wounded soldiers.

The army of destitute and unemployed in the Austrian capital is increasing daily.

Thousands are threatened with starvation.

The authorities estimate that it will be necessary to provide free meals for 100,000 persons daily.

Owing to the rapid advance in the price of meat and the shortage of live stock, the city council has asked the government to permit the importation of 1,000 tons of Argentine beef.

French President With Soldiers

Bordeaux.—President Poincare, accompanied by Premier Viviani and Minister of War Alexandre Millerand, left for the battle front. The president goes to the battle line not to take part in the strategy, but to congratulate the troops personally upon the bravery they have displayed in the long and stubborn fighting.

German Victory In Prussia

London.—A dispatch from Amsterdam says: "The German commander at Koenigsberg, East Prussia, has announced officially that the Russian armies in the battles of October 1 and 2 lost 5,000 prisoners, eighteen big guns and many machine guns.

German Women Give Gold

Rome.—The women of Germany, according to reports received here, are busily at work preparing woolen garments for the soldiers in the battle line. The reports also state that a committee of women has been formed for the purpose of inducing the women of Germany to give up their gold ornaments with the idea of transforming them into money with which to buy arms. Each woman receives in exchange for her gold ornaments an iron ring inscribed with the words "I gave gold for this."

British Buy Two "Americas"

New York.—Under cover of darkness the America, said to be the world's most powerful hydroplane, was loaded on the steamship Minnetonka and now is flying taken across the Atlantic by her builder for the British Government, and two torpedo boats of the America type, also built by the Curtiss Aeroplane company, have been purchased by the British Government.

GENERAL VICTOR DANKL

General Victor Dankl is the Austrian commander whose army has been unsuccessfully opposing the advance of the Russians in Galicia.

Germans Claim Victories

Berlin.—The following official announcement was made:

"In the siege of Antwerp forts Wavre, St. Catherine and Dorpweld have been taken and Fort Waelhem invested. Termonde, an important strategical point, has been occupied.

"On our western wing a new French attempt to encircle our forces has been repulsed. The French have been ejected from their positions south of Roye.

"Sorties from Toul were repulsed with heavy losses."

Mine Sinks Dutch Ship

London.—A dispatch from Amsterdam says the Dutch steamer Nieuwland, from Goole, England, to Rotterdam, struck a mine in the North sea and sank.

Servians Repulse Austrians

Paris.—The Servians on the front from Zvornik, Bosnia, to Losnitsa, Servia, along the river Drina, have repulsed violent attacks and inflicted heavy losses on the Austrians.

Japs Disregard Chinese

Pekin.—Without further diplomatic controversy the Japanese are proceeding along the railway to Tsinan. Their troops at Wei-Hsien, who occupied the station there, have been reinforced.

Roumania Remains Neutral

London.—The Rome correspondent of the Exchange Telegraph has sent the following dispatch:

"A message from Bucharest, Rumania, announces that the president of the council of the crown and the conservative and democratic leaders have decided to ask King Charles not to hold the council meeting fixed for this week, saying there is no need for Roumania to change her policy of neutrality."

Gen Von Kluck's Army Outnumbered

London.—The Daily Mail's correspondent in France reports fighting in and around Douval, department of Nord, eighteen miles south of Lille, and considers that if the French have reached Douval in force, the situation of the German general, Von Kluck, must be desperate.

"General Von Kluck," the correspondent adds, "has had all the reinforcements which can be spared him and yet finds himself outnumbered at every point. There are many indications from German prisoners, from French officers and from members of the British transport service, the combined testimony of whom it is difficult to disbelieve, that the German army is becoming demoralized.

"The German prisoners are dirty and hungry and suffering from the effects of bad food, bad atmosphere and bad sanitation. Their trenches are too deep to make the lifting out of the dead an easy matter and in some cases no attempt has been made to remove bodies.

Invaders Have Trying Time

London.—A picture of the sufferings of the German troops, cramped in underground trenches and galleries along the Aisne river, is given by the Paris correspondent of the Daily Mail. He says that the autumnal weather with its damp nights and bitterly cold dawns is extremely trying. If the men step from their trenches to the level ground they do so at the risk of their lives, as nightwatchers German soldier must be at his post in the narrow ditch, sleeping as best he may with his rifle at his side.

Passage of Panama Canal

London.—The British and German governments have begun exchanging lists of protected ships to prevent the American [illegible] from [illegible] the Panama canal [illegible]

FURTHER INQUIRY IN COAL RATE CASE

Railroad Commission Holds Monthly Session and Makes Further Inquiry Into Coal Rates.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Further inquiry into coal rates was conducted before the state railroad commission, at its regular monthly session, at which time the commission heard petitions for a revision of rates to and from places not considered in the recent coal rate hearings.

In the main, the petitions which were presented to the commission are somewhat similar to those already considered. One case on the docket is that of the Commercial Club of Eufaula, which has petitioned for a reduction of rates on the Central of Georgia railway. Other cases have been brought by the railroads, one of them being a petition of the Southern railway to advance rates on coal from Leeds; another petition being that of the Central of Georgia railway, which asks permission to withdraw the special rate of 50 cents per ton on coal to Sylacauga and Childersburg. The Central of Georgia railway is also the petitioner in another case, in which that road seeks to advance rates from the Birmingham mines to Birmingham, Leeds and points intermediate 10 cents per ton.

The Birmingham and Southeastern Railway company has petitioned the commission for a revision of rates during the period of construction. The last case on the commission's docket is styled the Citizen's League of Washington and Choctaw counties against the Alabama, Tennessee and Northern Railroad company and the Tombigbee Valley Railroad company, growing out of a complaint relative to unreasonable freight and passenger rates and inadequate facilities.

Financial Report Normal School.

Disbursements of the state normal school at Florence for the past scholastic year amounted to $60,843.33 with receipts of $311.99 in excess of that amount, according to Examiner of Public Accounts Charles L. Townes, who has rendered the governor a report on his examination of the books of E. A. Henry, secretary of the school. Examiner Townes reported that he found Mr. Henry's books correct in every detail. In addition to making a careful and complete examination of all the books, records and vouchers touching the receipts and expenditures of the school, Examiner Townes declared that he had made a careful inspection of all the state's property and "observed the scope of this institution as it was being conducted."

Ask Mill Men to Meet.

Cotton mill owners of every section of the country will be asked to meet in Alabama during the next few weeks for the purpose of agreeing upon some uniform and standard price of the fleecy staple. This announcement was made by the Governor of Alabama, who declares that he will at once issue a call to the spinners of this state to co-operate with him in bringing together for a conference the leading mill operators of the entire country.

It is the opinion of the Governor that if the cotton spinners of the South and East will pledge themselves to purchase cotton at a uniform price—say at the cost of production—that it will have a strong tendency to relieve the present crises in the cotton market, and that it will also serve to improve business conditions generally throughout the country. According to the plan proposed, an effort will be made to induce the manufacturers to purchase cotton at 10 cents a pound, the price which is declared to be equal to that of the cost of production.

The Governor stated that this plan was favored by William G. McAdoo, Secretary of the Treasury.

Lee Cowart, Commissioner of Immigration, announced that arrangements have been made for the placing of a plaster cast of the late Senator John T. Morgan in the Alabama building at the Panama-Pacific Exposition, which will be held next year at San Francisco. Mr. Cowart says that this cast will be twice life size and will be placed in the Alabama building as a tribute to the efforts put forward by Senator Morgan in the construction of a canal between the Atlantic and Pacific oceans.

The completion of the construction of the Alabama building will be [illegible] October [illegible]

Warrants for $200,000 Issued.

Pension warrants aggregating approximately $190,000, covering the first quarter of the fiscal year 1914-15, have been sent out by State Auditor C. Brooks Smith. These warrants were paid on October 1.

Because of the large number of illegal pensioners removed from the pension rolls of the State, the amount paid out for pensions during the first quarter of the fiscal year of 1914-15, beginning October 1, was $35,422 less than the amount paid for pensions during the same quarter last year, according to a statement issued at the office of C. Brooks Smith, State Auditor.

The total sum paid to pensioners for the first quarter of the new fiscal year was $271,533. The amount paid out during the first quarter last year was $306,955. The total number of pensioners on the roll this year is 15,322 as compared to 17,442 last year.

Following is the statement issued by Auditor Smith:

October 1, 1914:
On roll first class	1,101
On roll, second class	4,118
On roll, third class	10,103
Total on roll	15,322
Total amount disbursed	$271,533
October 1, 1913:
On roll, first class	1,211
On roll, second class	4,246
On roll, third class	11,985
Total on roll	17,442
Total amount disbursed	$306,955

Showing $35.42 less disbursed on October 1, 1914.

Illiteracy Alarming.

Illiteracy in Alabama is alarmingly excessive and is due to a lack of adequate school facilities according to a pamphlet issued by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. There are at present 306,857 white children in Alabama between the ages of 10 and 20 years, and of this number 26,259 are unable to read or write. This means that one child out of every twelve in the state is illiterate. These figures were compiled by Superintendent Feagin from figures gathered when the school census was taken last summer.

Randolph county has a larger percentage of illiterate white children than any other county in the state, according to the figures compiled by Superintendent Feagin. These figures include children between 10 and 20 years of age. Lowndes county has the smallest number of illiterate white children. Montgomery county ranks third.

Considering white and negro children, Jefferson county ranks first as far as the smallest percentage of illiteracy is concerned. Wilcox county ranks last. Montgomery ranks as the forty-sixth county when white and negro children are considered.

Rutland Succeeds Hobdy.

Prof. J. B. Rutland, of Auburn, was appointed State High School Inspector to succeed Prof. J. B. Hobdy, resigned, according to announcement made by W. F. Feagin, State Superintendent of Education. Professor Rutland assumed his duties at once and is making an inspection tour of the county high schools of the state. Prof. Hobdy, whom Prof. Rutland succeeds, was recently appointed rural school agent to succeed Prof. N. R. Baker, resigned.

Superintendent Feagin stated that all of the high schools of the state will be inspected by Professor Rutland during the next thirty days. Professor Rutland will be assisted in the inspection work by Prof. J. S. Thomas of the University of Alabama.

Still's Books Are Correct.

The books and accounts of Probate Judge M. D. Still, of Elmore County, are correctly and accurately kept, according to a report filed in the office of Governor O'Neal by G. F. Sedberry, Examiner of Public Accounts. Examiner Sedberry discovered that Judge Still had not paid over to the State Auditor $875, collected from a sewing machine company, which has been withheld pending a decision of the Supreme court. When informed that the Supreme Court had ruled that this money should be paid to the state, Judge Still immediately settled.

Warrants to Sheriffs.

State Auditor Brooks Smith mailed warrants to sheriffs of Alabama aggregating $85,000, which represents one-half of the amount due them for feeding prisoners for the past nine months.

Pitts Succeeds Shivers.

William L. Pitts, Jr., of Uniontown, was appointed by the Governor to the office of Probate Judge of Perry County, to succeed the late Judge J. R. Shivers. The new Probate Judge is a warm personal friend of the Governor, and has been the recipient of other honors during the present administration. He was a member of the Governor's staff and was tendered a place on the supreme court bench several months ago. Another office who was mentioned for the vacant judgeship was William Parsons.

MOBILE'S EXPORT BUSINESS PICKS UP

Cotton Movement Begun Last Week, and Coal is Expected to Increase Shipments Soon.

LUMBER BUSINESS REVIVED

Indications Are That There Will Be an Early Revival of in Exportation of Lumber.

Mobile.—Engagements of space in outgoing vessels, both for South American and European ports indicate that there will be an early revival in the exportation of lumber through the port of Mobile. This fact has produced a more hopeful feeling in all branches of trade and industry, overcoming the depression that has existed since the beginning of the European war.

The export movement of cotton was begun last week, when engagement was made for several hundred bales of the staple from a North Mississippi point to Liverpool, through Mobile. That this was the first engagement of the season was shown by the fact that it was No. 1 for the Frisco line, also for the New Orleans, Mobile and Chicago Railroad and the Mobile Line, inc., the new season number being September 1.

It is also stated in railroad circles that there would be an extensive movement of Alabama coal through Mobile this time if there was the necessary facilities to handle coal at this port. The facilities for handling bunker coal here with dispatch are said to be insufficient for the growing needs of the port.

WALKER FEDERAL JUDGE.

President Wilson Appoints Huntsville Man to Succeed Shelby.

Washington. — The nomination of Judge Richard W. Walker, of Huntsville, to be judge of the Fifth Federal Circuit to succeed the late Judge Shelby, was sent to the Senate by President Wilson and was referred to the judiciary committee.

As far as can be gathered, no objection will be made to the confirmation of the nomination, or is any obstacle likely to be placed in the way of early and favorable action by the judiciary committee and by the senate. Although Alabama has no member on this committee and the chairman, Senator Culberson, hails from Texas, which also had a candidate, it is understood that the high character of the nomination will preclude any objection on sectional or similar grounds. Florida, which presented a very strong candidate in the person of Senator Bryan, is represented on the committee by Senator Fletcher, but the supporters in congress of Senator Bryan were informed by the President that Judge Walker was his choice and were reconciled to their disappointment.

The appointment of Judge Richard Walker, chief justice of the Alabama court of appeals, as United States judge of the court of appeals of the Fifth circuit, leaves a vacancy on the Alabama court of appeals which will have to be filled by Governor O'Neal. It was predicted that Judge Pelham will be elevated to the chief justiceship of the court and that Judge Perry Thomas, who will be succeeded by Judge J. B. Brown in November, will be named to the associate justiceship.

WILL MOVE 20,000 BALES.

Eastern and Northern Commercial Bodies to Buy Staple.

Montgomery. — Twenty thousand bales of 10-cent cotton will be moved from the Montgomery market within the next few days, according to Duncan May and Bruce Kennedy, president and secretary, respectively, of the Montgomery Chamber of Commerce, who returned from the convention of commercial executives at Cincinnati. A great amount of the cotton will be bought under the "buy-a-bale" plan.

NEGROES MUST STRETCH HEMP.

Luther Sims and Henry Weight Are Found Guilty of Murder.

Dadeville.—In the case of the State against Luther Sims and Henry Weight, the two negroes who murdered J. Fletcher Turner, September 5, which was tried in Circuit Court, the jury returned a verdict fixing the punishment of both negroes at death, and Judge Brewer sentenced them to hang on October 30.

GREEKS BUY 1,000,000 TONS COAL.

Greek Government Agent Says It Was Ordered Through Mobile.

Kansas City.—Contracts for 25,000 cavalry horses were signed by George Pesmazoglous, a contractor for the Greek government. The purchaser said that contracts had been let through Mobile for 1,000,000 tons of coal and that several [illegible] would be spent in America. He [illegible] a plan to [illegible] army and navy.

MONEY TO MOVE CROPS.

Alabama Gets $200,000 of Government Fund.

Washington.—The treasury department has deposited $12,029,746 in 22 states for fall crop moving purposes up to September 28, according to an announcement by Secretary McAdoo. Of this sum Missouri has taken the largest amount, $1,550,000, with Maryland second, $1,450,000. The other states and amounts follow:

Alabama, $300,000; Arkansas, $175,000; Florida, $81,250; Georgia, $263,750; Kentucky, $1,375,000; Louisiana, $700,000; Mississippi, $150,000; North Carolina, $456,250; South Carolina, $525,000; Tennessee, $625,000; Texas, $758,530; Virginia, $798,750; Colorado $449,996; Illinois, $1,200,000; Indiana, $150,000; Iowa, $250,000; Kansas, $25,000; Nebraska, $325,000; Oklahoma, $93,500; Washington, $87,500; New York, $11,000,000.

DELEGATES TO FARMERS' MEET.

Governor Also Names Delegation to Appalachian Good Roads Meet.

Montgomery.—Delegates to represent Alabama at the thirty-fourth annual meeting of the Farmers' National Congress, which will be held at Fort Worth, Tex., were appointed by the governor. The list is as follows: Sol D. Bloch, Camden; J. A. Rogers, Gainesville; J. M. Granade, Chatom; M. F. McWhorter, Fruithurst; F. A. Gulliege, Verbena; Charles Rattray, Jamestown; P. J. Gantt, Andalusia; D. O. Dyson, Goodwater; Henry Ligon, Spring Valley; W. N. Bentley, Brantley; J. L. Floyd, Cusseta; C. D. Bowling, Hanceville; W. W. White, Clinton, Travis Hughes, Malvin; A. L. Phillips, Livingston; Capt. F. B. Gurley, Gurley.

The governor also announced the following delegates to represent Alabama at the Southern Appalachian Roads Association, which will be held at Bristol, Tenn.: Capt. John Craft, Mobile; J. Asa Rountree, Birmingham; R. E. Spraggins, Huntsville; Ambrose Camper, Florence; John L. Rogers, Livingston; W. W. Hardy, Alexander City; A. B. Hester, Russellville; W. L. Simmons, Gadsden; J. B. Miller, Ashland; J. R. Porterfield, Greenville, and Daniel Pratt, Prattville.

CHARGE DECATUR TOOK PART.

Grand Jury Ordered to Investigate Anonymous Circular.

Decatur.—An anonymous circular which was scattered over New Decatur on the day of the city election there, September 21, has been the subject of much comment, and in his charge to the grand jury of the law and equity court, Judge Thomas W. Wert instructed that body to inquire into the matter.

The circular, which was unsigned, charged that Bank street (Decatur) merchants paid Decatur lawyers $2,000 to make speeches against the change of name of New Decatur to Morgan City.

$20,000 FIRE AT RED BAY.

Entire Block Destroyed by Flames—Six Buildings Burned.

Red Bay.—Fire of unknown origin here caused damage estimated at $20,000, burned six business buildings and several residences. Of the $20,000 loss half was covered by insurance. An entire block was destroyed before the fire was controlled. Among the business houses to suffer were: Red Bay Mercantile company, James L. McTeesly, Howell Bros., Oswalt and A. A. Nabors.

WAR

And Its Effect on Business

As a direct consequence of the war in Europe, Southern farmers and business men have found it expedient to co-operate, and call on the federal government, to safeguard the interests of the South.

Patriotic business men have pulled shoulder to shoulder with the cotton growing farmer. Representatives in Congress, and high government officials, have signified a willingness to do all in their power to bring about stable conditions.

There is now every indication that our people have risen to the occasion and that they have the situation well in hand.

For which the L. & N. rejoices.

The L. & N. hopes the lesson will not be lost on the people. The L. & N. has suffered from the loss of revenue, due to the war. But we have continued to operate trains and supply the same high class service as was supplied in times of prosperity.

The people found it necessary to band together, to call for federal aid, for the common good. No individual firm or corporation objects.

In times like these the demagogue and detractor are silent. They are impotent. They do not rise to the emergency.

It is the brains of the South, the business ability, the conservatism, the true patriotism, that is exerting itself.

The L. & N. knows that the memory of the people is short. But we indulge the hope that the next time the L. & N. is attacked, is forced to appeal to the courts for protection, and to the people for fair treatment, that the people will not forget.

Our service is unexcelled. Our disposition is to co-operate. Our effort is for mutual prosperity.

FARMING IN CHINA

It has been some time since I wrote for the Press and if there are those who enjoy reading what I have to say from China they may be wondering why I have not written for so long a time. People are very busy on the mission field and often find it hard to get time to write. Since I wrote last I have passed my first examination on the Chinese language and have a little breathing spell now.

Farming is the oldest and next to the most honorable profession in China. To be a scholar is considered to be the highest thing a man can do and next to this the farmer is the most honorable. It was carried on in China in pretty much its present form many centuries before America was ever dreamed of by the people of Europe.

THE LAND.

You often hear in America that every available foot of land in China is in cultivation. This is pretty largely true, but not altogether so. All of the best land is in cultivation and one might say all the level land and all that can be made level is in cultivation. There are vast areas of hill and mountainous land that is not in cultivation. This could be made to support large herds of cattle with the proper care. Some of the land is quite fertile and some of it would not make much without fertilizer, but with their methods of manuring they make good crops. I have never seen a sloping place in cultivation. Most of their land is irrigated and it must be level for this purpose. From the little bottoms they cultivate a little way up on the hillsides, but they terrace it, that is, they dig out above and level off a place and go higher up and level another little "field," and so on as high as they want to go. They have a kind of little trough with cups running up it which they turn by hand to get the water from the pond below up to the first level. Then they move the "machine" up and draw the water up to the next level and so on.

PREPARATION OF THE LAND.

This is where the American farmer would stop. The land is prepared almost entirely by hand. They use heavy hoes and bed up the ground in beds about four feet wide with about two feet space between each one. At times this is partly done with a plow by the well-to-do-farmer. They bed up with the plow and rake up and level off the dirt with the hoe. On each one of these they have two or more rows of what ever it is they are raising. A plow is something like the fork of a tree, having but one handle and a piece of iron on the point to make it go in the ground, and most of them have a kind of iron wing to make the dirt turn. It would amuse you to see it. They work a water buffalo to it on which they have one line. The ploughman holds his plow with one hand and the line with the other.

PLANTING.

The Chinese do not plant as we do at home. Everything is planted in beds and transplanted at the proper time. Even rice they sow very thick in beds and set it out. This takes lots of time, but to the Chinaman time is not of much consequence. By this method they can raise more crops on the same land. The young plants can be getting ready to set out while one crop is being gathered. Oftentimes the very day they finish thining one crop off they begin preparing the ground for the next crop. One might think the land would soon wear out, but they manage it very skilfully. [illegible] nearly everything you do in Chilton and a great many things that you do not raise there. Rice is the staple crop like corn is at home. Also a large amount of wheat is grown. A farmer may raise a crop of wheat and two crops of rice on the same ground in one year. You understand that the climate here is so mild that crops are growing all the year round. Though in North China it gets very cold like it does in the Northern states. Some of the other crops are peas, beans, peanuts, potatoes, sugar-cane, cabbage, cucumbers, turnips, onions, bananas, oranges, peaches, plums and quite a number of other delicate fruits and vegetables that are not seen in Chilton. Raising silk worms is also very important.

four years ago and tell the people that I have turned Democrat and gone back on the people, etc., which they know to be infernally false. Everybody knows that I am not now, nor ever have been, in accord with the Democratic National or State policies of government; the Democrats all know this, and no body knows it better than Lewis Reynolds and Osmond Middleton.

By the way, you ought to have heard Middleton's private opinion of Reynolds as he has expressed it to me. Yet he has the gall to get up in an audience and introduce Reynolds as the great apostle of the people's salvation. Why such rot is enough to make a chicken eating hog sick.

Now just a word to the Republicans of the county. I want to ask you how in the name of decency and self respect can you, after what occurred two years ago, when you nominated a county ticket in regular order, and this same set of "cuttle fish," called a mass meeting and totally repudiated the republican party. I say how can you support any such set of mountebanks who change color over night?

Now I am not, nor do I intend to try to dictate to any man how he should vote; that is or should be every free man's privilege, to vote as he thinks right and best. As for myself, I am standing for what I think is right and best. Tell the whole truth and take the consequences. I am a Socialist and believe wholly in the Socialist proposition and idea of government, but as we have no local ticket, if I vote at all it will be solely for individuals who I know personally, regardless of party. This is a privilege that Socialists exercise everywhere when they have no ticket of their own in the field.

But understand one thing, that no set of political "Bunco steerers" like Lewis Reynolds and his henchmen can scare or intimidate me, although I have heard that he was going to whip me the first opportunity. I do not know whether he said such thing or not, but from recent occurences, it is very probable that he said it. But I want him to answer my questions first, and then try the other job if he feels like it.

L. B. POUNDS.

SENATOR BANKHEAD'S PLAN

To the Chilton County Farmer and Business Man:

This business crisis is no time for the crimination and re-crimination ordinarily practiced in local and state politics.

It is incumbent upon the farmer, merchant and banker to look well to the future and to study carefully the succinct, practical plan submitted to his people by Senator John H. Bankhead in the Birmingham News of October 5th, whereby the Senator proposes, through a special session of the Legislature immediately called for the purpose, to place forthwith an amendment to our Constitution, upon which the people, by their vote, will have previous opportunity to pass, providing a system of exchange for the purchase of one-half of the State's cotton crop, by the issuance of forty millions in bonds, in denominations ranging from [illegible] in lieu of the actual money; the system should have a tendency, in practical operation, as I view it, to steady and standardize the price of cotton, and to afford a system of credit to the State, to the individual farmer, the merchant and the banker. The bonds would be absolute security, for the reason that they would be backed by the substantial commodity—cotton—as well as the State's credit in the commercial world. The bond, therefore, viewed from this standpoint, would be worth dollar for dollar, and should, after business conditions assume a steady formation as a result of the standardizing of the price of the cotton crop, be worth a premium.

It is not for the hesitating and vacillating local or state-wide politician to place his ear to the ground and wait, look and listen for the direction of the popular straw. It is time for the practical farmer and the business man to take the situation in hand, looking well to the future, the time when, after the first of the year 1915, the farmer will go to his merchant to arrange for advances to make the 1915 crop. What then if the present conditions confront us? Providence only can determine when the present conflict in Europe will terminate. By if we are bound hand and foot, unless by some remedy as suggested by Senator Bankhead, we take a grip on our destiny.

Placing in execution this or some similar plan, will steady the business conditions for the year, 1915, when the farmer necessarily will be compelled to make his arrangements for the year.

Would it not be well for the advance merchant and the farmer, in making the "advance contract" (the mortgage), for 1915, to have the said mortgage to stipulate and provide for that planting by the farmer, of a certain percentage of his acreage in ready-money Spring crops, which will be marketable for cash? Would not this be a practical diversification, for there has [illegible] other members of the state campaign committee are waging a strenuous campaign—as strenuous in fact, as if shadows, obscure and ominous of impending disaster, were hovering nigh.

The chairman and other members of the committee are acting wisely. The time is propitious for Alabama to surge to the front with a solid Democratic vote in the Fall, not only that Democrats might fill all offices, state, county and congressional, but that a message might be sent to the American people; a message expressing in ringing tone the appreciation of this state of those good things in matters of government which a democratic Congress and a democratic President have achieved.

The European war, with its dismal effect on the business situation of America, has given to the republicans a straw at which to grasp. They are taking advantage of their opportunity to attribute to democratic legislation all the evils which the titanic struggle across the sea has directly produced. This political trickery on the part of the party under whose administration of public affairs, predatory wealth was fostered and developed, should and will be exposed. In this programme, Alabama should play its part nobly. Every man in this state should cast his vote in the general election. No individual is at stake; a principle is.

good roads, as the corporations are paying 75 per cent of the cost; I am in favor of a county high school; I am in favor of more and better rural school; I am looking to the interest of future generation having a better chance than we have had, thereby not having a few old prejudiced politicians trying to fool the people; I am in favor of a man's sins finding him out, I am in favor of a man reaping what he sows and I hope to see the day when all men shall know the truth, when Satan shall gather all his own and be separated to his own dominion forever. Now I do not claim that all the Dems. are without sin, but we are being slandered by the opposite party, but truth is mighty and will prevail.

Now, about county warrants. Yes, we will issue them to pay for building roads and paying our debts of all kinds. Why not, as corporations do and carry on their business, why not us? L. H. Reynolds did it, why not the Commissioners' Court?

Hurrah for Pounds! He will hit somebody if he keeps on pounding away. Go it, Lewis, you will hit Billy Patterson or some old thing; so keep hitting.

Well, fellow citizens, I ask you to study out the matter quietly and vote accordingly. What is good for you is good for me. You know some things; study the career of these howlers and if they are without blemish, heed them; if not, do not.

If I am elected I shall do all I can for all the people regardless of party affiliations.

Yours for good roads and 14 cent cotton.

Fraternally,
W. Y. ATCHISON.

STUMPS HILLS.

Editor Clanton Press:

Cotton picking is progressing slowly on account of so much rain.

One of our Stump Hill boys was in Clanton on last Saturday and reported he saw some men in town trying to get men to go to the war. Our people are very much excited over the matter. What he really saw was the Salvation Army.

By the way, I was up at the surprise party at Mineral Springs the other night. First came Thomas, the nominee for Representative on the Bull Moose ticket. I was surprised to hear him say he had never stooped low enough to vote the Democratic ticket. Then came Lewis, the Big Injun. I was surprised to hear him pay his respects to the Democratic party for the condition of affairs today; also surprised to hear him pay his respects to Commissioners Shaw for helping Denson and Atchison squander the dear peoples money. I was also surprised at him not telling the people how much of the dear peopul's money he spent when he hired the detectives to come down and spy on the dear peopul of this county.

Last, and also least, came J. Osmond. I was so sorry for poor little Osmond. I could have shed tears of blood to see him standing up there so full of that Bull Moose gas-[illegible]

HAPPY ROOSEVELT DAYS

Editor Press:

A few lines to the voters and oblige. First thing, I want to call the calamity howler's attention to the 755,700 people who were knocked out of work during tne last year of their great leader.

Roosevelt's administration, 1908:

More than 2,000 men march to City Hall at Detroit and demand work.—Jan. 28, 1908.

Chicago Federation of Labor estimates total number of unemployed men in Chicago at 100,000, and issues a warning to all craftsmen to keep away from the city.—Feb. 11, 1908.

New York City government urged by Central Labor Union to let subway contracts to furnish work for 500,000 unemployed men.—March 15, 1908.

100,000 men march through the streets of New York; singing the Marseillaise; speakers preach revolution and demand work. A bomb thrown at police by anarchists.—March 23, 1908.

More than 200 Bulgarians petition governor of Colorado for employment or for aid to return to Bulgaria.—March 20, 1908.

1000 foreigners march toward Philadelphia City Hall, demanding work; a riot; four policemen shot; fourteen marchers arrested; hundreds beaten by mounted police.—Feb. 20, 1908.

Labor unions report fifty thousand idle men in the Kensington, (Pa.) district.—Feb. 10, 1908.

Unemployed in San Francisco form a league and demand the issue of $23,000 in bonds to aid unemployed.—March 23, 1908.

1000 Hungarians march through the rain to receive a loaf of bread each at Toledo.—March 23, 1908.

At Camden, N. J., a riot follows application of 1500 men for three hundred jobs advertised by the Joseph Campbell Company.—August 10, 1908.

Loan of $9,000,000 to provide funds for public work asked for by city of Philadelphia for unemployed; Italians attacked by other nationalities.—March 15, 1908.

Yes, these were happy Roosevelt days! Listen, if this had happened during this Democratic administration, the Bull Moose calamity howlers would have blowed the skies out of existence. Now, some of you remember also that when Roosevelt was President that you could not get your own money out of the Banks, only $5 a day. You don't hear the bull rushers say anything about those great calamities.

Listen, Mr. Reader, I have made some of the disgruntled acknowledge that the President and Congress were doing everything that they could for the people and especially for the farmer. Then I would ask them who was to blame and they would say the Democrats. So you see they will will do or say any old thing to keep up strife and confusion.

Well, one fellow said they had lost Moses. Yes, and that is what has given them the belly ache and causes them to grunt and complain so much, they know that he is bombarding their camps; another one said Killgore runs the Democratic campaign. He knows that is a falsehood with no other purpose but to try to create strife among his little band of office-seekers, then he refers to Gant Riggins and Frank Goodgame in a very slight manner. Now, I want to ask those howlers if those men didn't use to help elect you to office. Yes, they were O. K. then of course, but when they see and know that they are following a gang that will say or do anything just for the sake of a little county office and want to cast their ballot for principle and where it will amount to something then the same would do anything to try to [illegible]

WITHHOLDS CALL; NO PRACTICAL PLAN

Governor Explains Why He Thinks It Would Be Unwise to Assemble Lawmakers.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Declaring it his belief that as yet no practical plan of relief from conditions of financial depression had been suggested, Governor Emmet O'Neal, in a signed statement issued, expressed the opinion that it would be unwise to call the legislature in extraordinary session at this time.

The governor makes the statement following conferences with the governors of the Southern states and says that a special session until some practical plan has been submitted would only encourage a mass of impracticable suggestions which would intensify the present chaotic conditions and put the state to heavy expense without benefit accruing.

May Not Name Appellate Judge.

G. W. Winn, of Clayton, is an applicant for the position of associate justice of the appellate court to succeed Judge E. Perry Thomas, who was recently appointed to succeed Judge Richard E. Walker.

Governor O'Neal, in acknowledging receipt of the application, stated that he probably would not fill the office as Judge Thomas had only one month to serve when his appointment to the unexpired term of Judge Walker was made.

The salary of a judge of the court of appeals for one month is $416.66.

Thomas Succeeds Walker.

Judge E. Perry Thomas of Eufaula was appointed by the governor as Judge Richard W. Walker's successor on the court of appeals. Judge Thomas has been on the court court of appeals since 1912, but in the April primary was defeated for renomination by J. B. Brown of Cullman, who will probably succeed Judge Thomas following the November election.

The vacancy on the court of appeals, caused by the promotion of Judge Walker to the office of United States circuit judge, was sought by three applicants in addition to Judge Thomas, Judge Edward deGraffenreid of the supreme court, whose term will expire in January, being the closest contestant in the race. Other applicants were Judge J. H. Ballentine of Huntsville, judge of the Madison law and equity court, and Judge W. H. Taylor of Uniontown, formerly a chancellor of his district.

Judge Thomas has been a conspicuous figure in the political and civil life of Alabama for years. He has been engaged in the practice of law since 1892, was mayor of Clayton from 1899 to 1902, and was a member of the state senate from 1902 until 1910. He made a race for lieutenant governor on the ticket on which the present governor was elected. Judge Thomas' appointment is expected to give general satisfaction among the lawyers of the state.

Make Bold Escape.

Two negro convicts from Jefferson county picked the locks which secured their handcuffs and jumped through the open windows of a passenger train a short distance below Clanton, Ala. The train was stopped, but the men made their escape.

The negroes were Archie Reese, sentenced to serve 20 years for murder in the first degree, and Will Brown, sentenced to serve 13 years for robbery.

Officials at the convict department were displaying a small pin, with which the negroes picked their locks. Mr. Austin said he had no intimation that there was about to be an escape until he heard a commotion and turned and saw the negroes' feet disappearing through the windows. He said the train was running about 10 miles an hour. He was en route to the state penitentiary from Birmingham. His endorsement for the office two years ago was signed by the leading members of the bar of the state.

Says "Squatters" Destructive.

The annual report of J. W. Martin, commissioner of state lands, submitted to the state printer, states that less than 100 acres of state lands remain unsatisfactorily settled owing to the property of squatters and others who have made their homes on these properties.

Existing laws before the occupant of 20 years standing on state property the owner of the property can redeem the state properties deed from the land, according to the report.

Receipts from Sale of Liquor.

Receipts from the sale of liquor licenses in eight counties of Alabama since the prohibition law became effective until September 1 last, were $3,021,247.04, according to a statement prepared by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman. These receipts accrued from the sale of licenses in Colbert, Cullman, Jefferson, Mobile, Montgomery, Pike, Russell and Madison counties, and have been apportioned among the State, and the counties and cities in which liquor has been sold.

Examiner Gorman's statement shows that Jefferson county yielded the largest returns from the sale of liquor licenses, the round sum of $929,422.36 having been collected in that county. Mobile county comes second in the list, with $438,119.86, and Montgomery third, with $316,140 collected.

In the apportionment of the fund since 1911, the state has received $297,123.8. The counties have received $653,455.55. In addition to these amounts, $19,130 has been paid out in commissions to probate judges and $89,612.58 in salaries to excise commissioners.

To Promote School Legislation.

With a view to collecting data to be used in the promotion of advanced school legislation in Alabama at the coming session of the legislature, Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin has addressed a letter to the various county superintendents asking them to lend their best efforts toward filing their annual reports as soon as possible. By sending in the reports promptly the department of education will be enabled to issue its annual report earlier than usual this year, and will thereby be able to place fresh material in the hands of the lawmakers, according to a circular letter sent out by Superintendent Feagin.

That a determined fight for the passage of new laws that will better educational conditions in this state will be waged at the next session of the legislature is indicated by the letter sent out.

Two important measures will have the active support of the department during the next session. One of these will be a measure providing for local taxation for school purposes while the other measure will provide for compulsory education under certain conditions. These will be the two most important measures urged, but there will be much other legislation which it is believed will improve conditions.

Reduced Acreage Urged.

Capt. R. F. Kolb, state commissioner of agriculture, who returned from Washington, where he attended the Southern Food Congress, stated emphatically that the plans of forcing cotton upon the market in payment of debts will further demoralize the market in this commodity and that the only solution of the problem is the reduction, compulsory if necessary, of the cotton acreage in Alabama for 1915.

He states that the probable loss to Alabama alone in forced selling of cotton at from $15 to $25 below the actual price of production amounts to more than $20,000,000 per annum.

Captain Kolb could offer no plan of immediate relief. He stated that the congress which he attended had drafted resolutions encouraging the calling of special sessions of the legislatures and the enactment of laws compelling the reduction of cotton acreages throughout the south that even if this were done the existing conditions would remain the same.

Clarke County Books O. K.

An examination of the books and records of Clarke county officials, conducted by Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, shows the following officials indebted to the county and state through technical errors to the following amounts:

C. A. Coater, sheriff, $135.82; B. Doyle, former tax assessor, $80.86; W. M. McKley, former tax commissioner, $266.96.

The examination disclosed the fact that H. C. Hawkins, the present collector, had drawn $1319 by error and that he has already returned upwards of $7.75 of the amount to the treasury.

Examination showed that the following amounts had been paid into the treasury upon discovery of error:

Clayton Fosine, probate judge, $5; Connie Garrett, clerk of court, $160.20; C. A. Coater, sheriff, $44.30; H. C. Howmins, tax commissioner, $72.85; T. L. Head, superintendent of education, $15.10. The books show further that former Tax Assessor J. B. Doyle owes the state $83.56.

Sponsors and Maids.

Commander John E. Wallace, jr., of the Fourth Brigade, U. S. C. V., dispatched a letter of John L. Moulton, commander of the Alabama Division of the Sons of Veterans, informing him that the following ladies had been appointed by him to represent the brigade at the annual reunion of Mobile, October 1st: Miss Elizabeth Cooper, Huntsville, sponsor; Miss Georgia Henry, first maid of honor; Miss Margaret Henry, both of Huntsville; Miss Dorothy Wallace, second maid of honor.

START CAMPAIGN FOR EXTRA SESSION

Movement Inaugurated by Southern Cotton Association to Have Next Year's Crop Restricted.

MANY TOWNS JOIN MOVEMENT

Meetings Held in Dadeville, Jasper, Red Bay and Several Other Cities In Support of Movement.

Montgomery.—Persons interested in the Alabama Division of the Southern Cotton Growers' Association have started a state-wide campaign with the intention of presenting to the people the necessity of an extra session of the legislature and the adoption of laws prohibiting the growing of cotton next year and levying a tax on all cotton sold for a certain period.

W. H. Seymour of Montgomery president of the division, is one of the leaders of the movement.

O. P. Ford, president of the Alabama Farmers Union, has called a state convention in Montgomery October 21, for the consideration of methods for the relief of the farmer. He has urged all persons from every section of the state to attend.

Meetings were held and resolutions adopted by citizens of Dadeville, Jasper and several other towns and cities, asking the governor to call the legislature together in extraordinary session. The point was stressed that something must be done to the end that relief be given the farmers in the state during the present stringency.

PROHIS TO HOLD MEETING.

Headquarters Committee To Gather in Magic City October 17.

Birmingham.—Headquarters committee of the Alabama Anti-Saloon league will meet in Birmingham Saturday, October 17, to consider and map out plans for the prohibition legislative campaign. League leaders say that no program for the coming session of the Alabama legislature will be announced until after this meeting of the committee.

It is probable that a special legislative committee will be appointed by the headquarters committee to take active charge of a legislative program.

On the following Sunday, October 18, Prohibition Field Day services will be held in 12 of the leading churches of Birmingham. The following well known ministers will preach two sermons each in the various churches to be designated later: Rev. H. H. McNeill of Dothan, Rev. E. L. Crawford of Enterprise, Rev. J. G. Dobbins of Hurtsboro, Rev. J. D. Ray of Birmingham, Rev. J. O. Colley of Birmingham and Brooks Lawrence, superintendent of the Alabama Anti-Saloon League.

Rev. H. H. McNeill is the Dothan minister whose parsonage was destroyed by fire a few weeks ago. It was charged by prohibitionists that the act was committed by persons who opposed the preacher's strong stand on prohibition.

STATE WATERWAYS GET $915,500.

Engineers of War Department Announce Allotments.

Washington.—Of the $20,000,000 recently appropriated by Congress for rivers and harbors, Alabama will receive approximately $915,500, according to the allotment made by the engineers of the war department and announced officially by Secretary Garrison.

Of this $750,000 is specified for "Black Warrior, Warrior and Tombigbee rivers." One hundred and sixty thousand dollars is allotted to Mississippi and $206,000 to southwest pass, in the Mississippi river.

The eight items for Alabama as apportioned by the engineers are as follows: Chocktawachee river, Florida and Alabama, $20,000; Escambia and Conecuh rivers, Florida and Alabama, $5000; Mobile harbor, $62,500; Mobile bar, $10,000; Alabama river, including Coosa river up to Wetumpka, $50,000; Black Warrior, Warrior and Tombigbee rivers, Alabama, and Tombigbee river, Alabama and Mississippi, $750,000; south to Demopolis, $9000; Demopolis, Ala., to Walker's Bridge, Miss., $9000.

The election will be held [illegible] the county. The bonds will be issued for [illegible] years at 5 per cent interest.

APPORTIONMENT FOR SCHOOL WORK.

Feagin Makes Apportionment of County School Fund.

Montgomery.—County apportionments of public school funds for the present scholastic year, has made by Superintendent of Education William F. Feagin. The amount available for all educational purposes is $2,263,515.48.

The amount to be spent for education purposes during the present year is $68,673.04 in excess of the amount spent last year, but represents a per capita decrease of 9 cents over last year, due to the increase of 47,619 in the number of children of school age in Alabama.

BRITISH DRAGOON SPEAKS BITTERLY OF AN INTERRUPTED BREAKF[illegible]

By GEORGE DUFRESNE.
International News Service.

Paris.—The stream of wounded from the battlefields of the Marne and the Ourcq is being directed past Paris to hospitals in the rear, for the obvious reason that until it is quite certain that Paris will not have to defend herself against attack it would be unwise to fill the ample hospital accommodation of the capital.

In the American hospital only 55 of those 500 beds are occupied. I came across a soldier of the Sixth dragoons, suffering from a bullet wound in the hip that he got at Compiegne. The night before the battle his squadron was on outpost duty. Some firing had been heard, and he rode ahead of the squadron to see what was happening, believing that French cavalry were engaged with the Germans close at hand. He cantered along a moonlit road until suddenly in the shadow of some trees he found himself in the midst of a group of German horsemen. He had his carbine across the neck of his horse and fired point blank into the breast of a German trooper with whose horse his own came into collision. The German was as quick with his weapon, and both men fell to the ground, the German dead, the British with a bullet through his hip. An instant later the squadron came clattering up and cut the German detachment, about thirty strong, to pieces.

Has Strong Prejudice.

The British dragoon has seen things which have given him a strong prejudice against the enemy. In a Belgian village he saw the yet warm corpse of peasant woman who had been struck down by a uhlan's lance. The uhlans were riding out of the village as the British rode in, and the man who killed the woman did so because she could not or would not give him some bread.

Once on patrol duty he came across a stationary motor car. In it were three French officers and a lady, all dead, all sitting in the position in which they were when they died. A volley had been poured into the car. The lady's hand hung carelessly over the side of the car, and the fingers showed marks of rings which had been roughly stripped off.

Our cavalrymen were, he added, a good deal pestered by the enemy's aeroplanes during the retreat from Mons. Whenever a German aeroplane appeared over a bivouac the order was given to change camp, and weary men and horses had to move further on. One man told in a voice from which the bitterness had not yet passed of a breakfast lost in this way. The meal almost assumed the proportions of a feast. Two geese and three hens he and his mates had prepared for themselves, and just when they were ready to take them from the fire the enemy appeared in force, and the breakfast had not only to be abandoned, but to be abandoned to the Germans.

Turcos Best Patients.

Of all the patients the best, say the doctors, are the Turcos. There is no limit to the pain they can endure.

Yesterday afternoon the parade of two standards captured from the enemy was accepted by Parisians as a good augury for the success of their arms.

The number of French priests serving with the colors is a good deal larger than has been imagined, and it is stated authoritatively today that as many as 12,000 priests are enrolled as combatants. The departure of the cardinal archbishop of Malines from the Gare St. Lazare gave rise last night to a picturesque scene. The archbishop was fully robed, and stood on the platform surrounded by a large crowd of priests and others who have sympathised keenly with the Belgians in their struggle. As the train left the station he stood in the carriage bowing to those on the platform—an ascetic figure of the Richelieu type, a man of dominant personality, with a charm of pose and expression that made one realise how keenly his work is appreciated by his countrymen in Belgium.

Loss of Horses Appalling.

The wastage of horses during the present war has admittedly been appalling. At the St. Lazare terminus today I met a general with some 500 men of the Ninth French dragoons. They had no horses left and had come to pick up some at present waiting in Paris. They were then taking up a westward-bound train as far as Chateau Thierry. Their purpose was to remount the regiment of the dismounted, who at this point in the firing line are said to be utterly exhausted. Whole sections of them are being carried [illegible] after three months of fighting. Sometimes entire men [illegible] every man capable of doing so [illegible]

GERMANS CAPTURE CITY OF ANTWERP

Temporary Capital of Belgium Falls Before Onslaughts of The Germans' Mighty Guns

BELGIAN ROYAL FAMILY FLEES

Garrison Defending The Forts Of Antwerp Escapes Before Entry Of The German Invaders

The past week in the European war has been one of very important developments. Antwerp, one of the strongest fortified cities on the world and the temporary capital of the Belgian government, was captured by the German invaders. A great patriotic demonstration has swept Germany over this victory of their armies. On the day following the fall of Antwerp the Germans on the Belgian border fighting the allied armies suffered reverses at several important places and in east Prussia on the same day the Russians captured Lyck, a German city.

It required only eleven days for the giant siege guns of the German invaders to reduce to ruins the strong forts of the Belgian port. The greater part of the garrison of British and Belgian troops who defended the forts of Antwerp escaped from the city before the entry of the Germans. King Albert and the royal family also escaped. The queen and other members of the royal family of Belgium are believed to have fled to England.

With the fall of Antwerp another phase of the war situation in Europe is being placed by military efforts. It is believed that the kaiser has abandoned his campaign against Paris and will center the energy of his fighting forces in an attack on the British Isles. Using Antwerp as a base of attack it will be possible for airship flights across the English channel to England. Some have ventured the assertion that the Germans will attempt to land forces on British soil for the purpose of invasion.

The fighting between the allied armies and the Germans in the north of France has developed into siege operations. It was hoped for a time that the allies would be able to turn the right wing of the Germans in time for the allies to go to the relief of Antwerp, but Gen. Von Kluck and his sturdy soldiers succeeded in holding the allies in check. Although the casualties have been very heavy on both sides during the fighting the ranks of the allies and Germans were filled with reinforcements as fast as they could be brought up from the rear.

During the past few weeks the allies have succeeded in forcing slowly but surely the Germans back close to the Belgian border. Every inch of ground was desperately contested and a terrible toll in lives was paid for every advantage gained. In their effort to encircle the lines of the Germans the allies stretched their battle line until it extended over a territory of more than a hundred and fifty miles. It has developed into one of the greatest battles in the history of the world.

German Defeat In Prussia

A veil has fallen over the operations of the Germans against the Russians in east Prussia and Russian Poland, while little has been heard from the Russian activities in Galicia against the Austrians with the exception of a laconic message that the Russians are continuing their attack on the Austrian forts at Przemsyl. The Russians claim a victory over the German armies in the vicinity of Suwalki, and the reports from Petrograd, the Russian capital, say that the city of Lyck in east Prussia has been taken. The German attempts to cross the river Niemen, it is said, has been repulsed.

Recruiting In England Slow

The conditions in Austria are reported to be growing worse daily. Most of the industries in that country have closed down. The hospitals are filled with the wounded. Conditions in Germany are believed to be better than in any of the other nations at war. Work is plentiful and the prices of food have advanced but little since the war started. England has retained its stolid disposition and the war office is having its difficulties in arousing the young men of the nation to enlist in the British army. France remains confident of ultimate victory.

Many Insane Belgians

London.—The correspondent of the Central News at Amsterdam, describing the wild flight of the people of Antwerp into Holland, says one of the most distressing features was the large number of insane persons released from the asylum. Many of these are now roaming the country, creating fear and exciting disorders. Many Dutch towns are filled with Belgian refugees, flooding Breda, Rotterdam, Roosendaal, The Hague, Amsterdam, Terneuzen, Maastricht and Dordrecht are crowded with fugitives.

"TAGGED"

(Copyright)

London.—Germany has imposed a fine of $100,000,000 on Antwerp as a war indemnity.

London.—Antwerp and the forts surrounding the city are in complete possession of the Germans, but the greater parts of the Belgian army has escaped.

It took the Germans just eleven days to capture the strongest fortress in the world.

The fall of Antwerp is evident that even the most powerful forts are no match for the colossal howitzers which the invaders have successfully employed against every fortified place that stood in their way. These huge open gaps through which the besiegers find an entrance for their field artillery and infantry.

The Germans, after shelling the city itself for many hours, making it untenable, entered the town through the suburb of Berchem, to the east. They had made a breach in the outer line of forts, some of which were destroyed by their big guns and others blown up by the defenders. The Germans followed similar plans in dealing with the inner belts of forts and at the same time threw shells into the city, which set fire to many places.

The inner forts, like those farther out, soon succumbed to the enormous shells, and on Friday morning several of these forts had fallen, opening the way for the Germans into the city. By midday they were in occupation of the town, and at 2:30 p. m. the war banner on the cathedral was replaced by a white flag.

King And Royal Family Escape

A few forts continued to hold out and it was not until Friday morning that the Germans, according to their own official report, were in complete possession of the city and fortress. When they arrived they found that the Belgian field army and at least part of the garrison had anticipated them, and, like the king and royal family, had escaped.

The death roll, resulting from the attack on and defense of Antwerp, has not been compiled and probably the full details never will be known, but all accounts describe it as being terribly heavy. The Germans, although their big guns cleared a path for them, had to sacrifice many lives in crossing the rivers and canals and in driving out the defenders who held the entrenchments until the last.

The stubbornness of the Belgians and of those who went to their assistance cost them dearly also, so that both sides will have long casualty lists. There is no reliable information as to the loss of life in the city.

King Of Roumania Is Dead

Amsterdam.—A telegram received here from Vienna says that King Charles of Roumania is dead.

Recent dispatches have described King Charles of Roumania as being seriously ill, but from other quarters his indisposition has been declared to be entirely political. It has been predicted lately that he was preparing to abdicate.

The succession to the throne of Roumania, in the event of the king remaining childless, was settled by the constitution upon his elder brother, Prince Leopold of Hohenzollern-Sigmaringen. Leopold renounced his rights in favor of his son, Prince Wilhelm, and Prince Wilhelm, in 1888, renounced his rights in his turn in favor of his brother, Prince Ferdinand, who was born in 1865.

Gen. Von Moltke Not Removed

Rome.—Inquiries made in German military circles with regard to reports that Gen. Von Moltke had been removed as chief of the general staff of the German army, brings forth the statement that the report is incorrect. The report, it is declared, probably was caused by the absence of General von Moltke from Germany on a visit to the German headquarters in Alsace. He returned to Berlin on Wednesday.

British Airships Raid Germany

London.—The following official statement was issued covering an attack by a British air squadron on a German airship shed at Dusseldorf.

"The secretary of the admiralty announces that Squadron Commander Grey reports that, as authorized, he carried out with Lieut. R. L. G. Marix and Lieut. S. V. Sippe, a successful attack on a Dusseldorf airship shed. Lieutenant Marix's bombs, dropped from a height of 500 feet, hit the shed, went through the roof and destroyed a Zeppelin.

"Flames were observed 600 feet high, the result of the igniting of the gas of an airship.

"All three officers are safe, but their aeroplanes have been lost.

"The feat would appear to be in every respect remarkable, having regard to the distance of over one hundred miles penetrated into country held by the enemy and to the fact that a previous attack had put the enemy on their guard and enabled them to mount anti-aircraft guns.

May Force Turkey Into War

Washington.—The alternative the Ottoman empire faces, as to whether the Dardanelles are to be swung open in answer to the demand of the triple entente or whether the key to the Black sea is to remain in Turkish possession promises to force the porte to join the European struggle, according to opinion expressed in diplomatic circles here. At the Turkish embassy it was admitted that it might prove highly embarrassing to the sultan to be forced to commit himself on such a request. Officials stated that unless no other course was open it was highly unlikely that Turkey would submit to a change in its policy because of outside influence.

Russians Repulse Germans

Petrograd.—The general staff has given out the following official communication.

"The Russian troops have continued to repulse the enemy from the boundaries of the governments of Suwalki and Lomza. The engagement has been very fierce west of Symno.

"The German troops that were attacking Ossowetz are retreating hastily to the north. Considerable forces of the enemy, of which the bulk arrived from the west, are concentrating in the districts west of the governments of Plotrkow and Kielce.

"The Russian cavalry and vanguard are reconnoitering energetically through all that region, impeding through vigorous attacks the movement of the enemy.

"An attack by the Russian cavalry against the German vanguard in front of Andrew, and marching on Kielce, was crowned with great success. The German infantry was caught unawares and is retreating in disorder, pursued by the Russian cavalry.

Lyck In Prussia Captured

Petrograd, Russia.—The following communication has been made public by the Russian general staff.

"The combat on the East Prussian frontier continues with the same obstinacy. The German troops are retiring from Lyck and are blowing up the bridges behind them.

"In several passes between Ivangorod and Sandomir artillery battles are occurring with the enemy, which is approaching the Vistula."

Sick Women Attention

Is it possible there is a woman in this country who continues to suffer without giving Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound a trial after all the evidence that is continually being published, which proves beyond contradiction that this grand old medicine has relieved more suffering among women than any other one medicine in the world?

We have published in the newspapers of the United States more genuine testimonial letters than have ever been published in the interest of any other medicine for women—and every year we publish many new testimonials, all genuine and true. Here are three never before published:

From Mrs. S. T. Richmond, Providence, R. I.

PROVIDENCE, R. I.—"For the benefit of women who suffer as I have done I wish to state what Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound has done for me. I did some heavy lifting and the doctor said it caused a displacement. I have always been weak and I overworked after my baby was born and inflammation set in, then nervous prostration, from which I did not recover until I had taken Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound. The Compound is my best friend and when I hear of a woman with troubles like mine I try to induce her to take your medicine."—Mrs. S. T. RICHMOND, 199 Waldo Street, Providence, R. I.

A Minister's Wife Writes:

CLOQUET, MINN.—"I have suffered very much with irregularities, pain and inflammation, but your wonderful medicine, Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, has made me well and I can recommend the same to all that are troubled with these complaints."—Mrs. JENNIE AKERMAN, c/o Rev. K. AKERMAN, Cloquet, Minnesota.

From Mrs. J. D. Murdoch, Quincy, Mass.

SOUTH QUINCY, MASS.—"The doctor said that I had organic trouble and he doctored me for a long time and I did not get any relief. I saw Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound advertised and I tried it and found relief before I had finished the first bottle. I continued taking it all through middle life and am now a strong, healthy woman and earn my own living."—Mrs. JANE D. MURDOCH, 25 Gordon St., South Quincy, Mass.

If the editor of the Union-Banner will deposit the $500.00 reward which he offers for a copy of the Democratic Platform in the hands of some responsible person to hold, we will deliver the goods. Put up or shut up.

Talking about issues what do you suppose the Floaters would do if they were to meet a full grown issue right in the middle of the public road on some dark night when they are around discussing "the issues before the deer peepul?"

The Democratic administration had as much to do with the present business conditions in the country and the low price of cotton as it had to do with the banishment of Diaz from Mexico and every fourth grade school boy in the country knows it.

About the sorriest thing on earth, after all, is the "Quitter." A man who has voted a Democratic ticket all his life and now goes to that organization in this county which calls itself the "Progressive Party" and headed by a gang of professional demagogues and office grabbers, is, in plain United States, a quitter.

There is a gang of floating—mark the word—politicians running around over the county and barking for a copy of the Democratic Platform. What would they do with the document if they had it? Would they accept its doctrines and preach them to the fellows with whom they make their political beds? Read their answer to this question "in the stars."

If the editor of the Union-Banner or any of his political brothers will deposit with some reliable person the $1000.00 he offers to the person who "will tell us when we ever had a prosperous year under full Democratic laws and a Democratic administration," he or they shall be furnished with the information, with pleasure. Now quit your wind jamming and get down to business.

In another column of [illegible] will be found a list of [illegible] men in this [illegible] tives of the Democratic party, and as the "Progressive Party" speakers and others of their political faith have been shouting it around that "the Democrats are afraid to meet us," the invitation has been extended to them to meet these Democrats in joint discussions. Our Democratic speakers are gentlemen in every sense of the word and every courtesy demanded by the rules of debate will be extended to the opposition.

Anyway, how much worse does 7 cents cotton hurt a "Progressive" than it does a Democrat? A ten year old school boy knows that there are five Democrats to one Republican or "Progressive" in the cotton growing states, and yet it is poured into the ears of the uninformed voter that that the Democratic administration would bankrupt five Democrats just to bankrupt one "Progressive" Nonsense—worse than nonsense.

To the poor fellow who hasn't any more sense than to honestly believe that the Democratic administration is responsible for the low price of cotton, let us have naught but pity, but for the political blatherskite who is running around over the county and charging the administration with our present financial ill, nothing but the toe of a number eight shoe well directed to the proper spot on his person and an invitation to him to leave the premises, seems to meet the demands of of the occasion.

We mean by "Floaters" in this campaign, fellows who float from place to place to mislead and deceive the uninformed voter by telling him that the Democratic administration is responsible for the low price of cotton; that Woodrow Wilson caused the war that is now raging in Europe; that the Nation, State and County are bankrupt and all other similar rot. They float from one party to an other; they float into the Populist party, then they float into the Republican party, first a "Lily white" and then the "Black and Tan," then they float into the Bull Moose party and then into the "Progressive Party" and if there happens along any other party in which they can float into some public office and thereby get their noses again into the public crib, they will float into that.

Brother Moses Robinson and Will Shaw, the present and efficient Republican members of the Commissioners court (and these two gentlemen were held up to the peepul in the last campaign as honest men and on "the side of the peepul") certainly "put one over" poor brother Herrod. Robinson and Shaw just went into the county treasury and got all the peepul's money and either spent or stole it and then went and issued county warrants and put the "peepul" in everlasting bankruptcy and brother Herrod right there looking at them all the time. Too bad.

From the Banner of November 13, 1901, cotton is quoted on the Clanton market at 6 3-4 cents, and on the same date 1902 at 7 cents. This was in the piping days of Republican prosperity(?) when the great Teddy was at the head of the Nation's affairs, and the people were enduring the burdens of a high protective tariff.

The Union-Banner has been very diligent in its efforts to get The Press to explain certain things, and now we want the Union-Banner to please explain why it was cotton "soared so high" in those days when there was no war in Europe to paralize business conditions in this country. Come on, Mr. Union-Banner, the people are anxious to know what reason you will put up.

THE DRAUGHON COLLEGES AID

The announcement was made Thursday by H. R. Todd, superintendent of the southeastern division, that Draughon's colleges would take 500 bales of cotton at 10 cents a pound on tuition—250 bales at Atlanta and 250 bales at Montgomery. Similar amounts will be taken at the other Draughon colleges in the cotton belt. Draughon managers and teachers have been boosters of the "buy-a-bale" movement from the beginning and the Atlanta college started the ball to rolling today by the purchase of two bales in South Georgia.

A DENIAL

Maplesville, Ala., Oct. 12, 1914.
Editor Clanton Press:—We note in your last issue, that a dead negro had been found on the Ed Smitherman place about two miles north of Maplesville. We wish to say that there is not one word of truth in this piece published. Will repeat that it is a gross falsehood. We are tenants on Mr. Smitherman's farm and we are not growing dead negroes. We hope you will correct this mistake or give your author. If any dead negro has been found it has been elsewhere—not here.

Respectfully yours,

COUNTY IMPROVEMENT ASSOCIATION.

An enthusiastic meeting was held in the Schoolhouse last Friday afternoon for the purpose of organizing and planning the work of the Clanton branch of the Chilton County Improvement Association. Mrs. Marshall, county nurse, acted as Chairman, and the following officers were nominated:

Mrs. E. M. Pinckard, President; Mrs. H. T. Pipes, Vice President; Mrs. Hugh Jones, Secretary; Mrs. W. M. Adams, Treasurer.

School improvement, sanitation, beautification of the town, etc., are the lines of work which will be adopted and it is hoped that every lady in Clanton will become a member of the association and lend her influence. Efforts will also be made to establish [illegible] here for the use of [illegible] who come in town.

VAST JUNGLES OF PANAMA

Described by Traveler as Dense and Mysterious as Are Those of Africa.

There are jungles in Panama, stretching away from the banks of Gatun lake, as dense and mysterious as those of Africa. The only canal men who know the jungles intimately are the surveyors who have charted the topography of the watershed, or who have made special investigations at various points. One of these men is Mr. O. E. Malmsbury, who is in charge of the land surveys under Colonel Goethals. In speaking of the jungle recently, in the New York Sun, he said:

When I try to become definite about the jungle, I realize how little even a man who has seen much of it knows about its life. There are strong impressions of beauty, mystery, and fear, a lure with a menace, a smile that only half covers a snarl—and everything else that I know about the jungle can be told in a few isolated incidents that have happened to pass under my notice.

An orchid beckons from the branch of a tree, a pair of wild pigs dash away into the brush, a tiger cat shows its bright eyes for a moment, and, in a flash, the heron balances daintily on a reed by the river, an alligator slides from a mud bank into the water, monkeys lark in the trees, a lion growls—such slight things sum up my jungle lore.

One hour the sun looks through trees and bushes, and traces a thousand patterns on the ground; the next, rattle of rain on the leaves is deafening. Night falls, and the parrakeets, crickets, frogs, lizards begin their unending chorus; then the howl of monkeys adds to the din, and now and again the cry of the wildcat and the growling bark of the mountain lion makes a man glad that he is beside a bright fire with his machete or gun close at hand.

The lion of the Panama jungle is of two kinds—black and tawny. Full grown, he stands 30 inches high. His breast is broad, like that of a bulldog; his legs are long; his head is square, but catlike. He growls like a lion, but ends with a bark. I never heard of his attacking a man, but the natives of the jungle fear him. He would be a dangerous adversary at close quarters. The only way to be certain that he will not attack a man is to try one out. Personally, I don't care enough for the knowledge to risk the experiment.—Youth's Companion.

LEARN TO SWIM CORRECTLY

Expert Will Not Tire Himself in Exercise Which Will Cause Exhaustion to Tyro.

The trouble with a good many swimmers is that they do not know how to swim. Most of the energy which would carry them along smoothly and rapidly, if properly applied, is wasted in faulty movements. Time and again have I seen men thrash away madly for a short space, misusing arms and legs, then stop suddenly, puffing hard and in distress. To such tyros swimming means a stubborn fight to keep going, and there is no doubt that if they tried to swim for exercise, frequently serious harm might come from it. But can this parody of watermanship be considered swimming? Hardly, according to the present-day standards.

Watch a skilled trudgeon or crawl exponent and note the difference. He will take a graceful dive, strike out unharried, move along without fuss or flurry, rolling gently from side to side and emerge from the water fresh and invigorated, barely breathing hard. Rest assured it is not he that will suffer, even from daily practice.—Outing.

American Coinage.

More than once the government has sought to obtain more artistic designs for our coinage. Why, they have asked, should we not have as beautiful coins as those of Greece in the fourth century before Christ? One reason is because we desire "low relief," that is, figures that will not come out higher than the edges, so that our coins will stack. Moreover, the modern coin loses less by abrasion than the ancient. Thus the interests of beauty and utility stand in conflict—and this is a practical age. Nevertheless, our mint has offered from time to time coins professing an artistic appearance, as witness the gold pieces designed by Saint Gaudens a few years ago. With reference to the new nickel piece, there seems to be a difference of opinion as to its beauty.—Popular Mechanics.

A very serious accident was narrowly averted when the horse of Mr. Ben Sessions became frightened Sunday afternoon in West Clanton and ran away. Mr. Sessions was accompanied by his wife and small child. The buggy was turned completely over and by a miraculous escape no one was injured except Mrs. Sessions who received several cuts about the face, which, though painful, will not prove serious. The buggy was almost completely demolished.

DEMAND IS FOR AN IDEAL

Woman Writer's Opinion of Needed Changes in the Relations Between the Sexes.

The usual use of the word "feminine," signifying smallness, softness, helplessness, inability, a certain kind of beauty, is deprecated by Mrs. Charlotte Perkins Gilman. These characteristics are not essentially feminine, Mrs. Gilman asserts, but have developed largely through the selection of women by men. Economic dependence of woman upon man has made anything but conforming to man's ideal impossible for her. "The trouble with women now is that they are too much females, too little human beings. A woman should be a competent human being." Mrs. Gilman, in a recent lecture, spoke of women's ability to adjust themselves to whatever ideal they set up for themselves, as shown in the different ways of dress and figure which they have taken up. "Now it is the sort of curled-up, slinky, slouchy figure which we have achieved. A while ago it was the flat-backed Gibson girl. Women should remember that they cannot change the female of the species too much without altering the male. Why are we so helpless in the face of arbitrary change? Simply because we have no ideal in our minds, no positive ideal of beauty and normality."

Town Is Awed by a Legacy.

A story is told of the canny burgomaster of Weida who gave his native town $100 on condition that it should be kept at compound interest for 350 years, when Weida would possess a snug municipal fortune of approximately $6,250,000.

Although the gift was at first thankfully accepted, the town council's sober judgment now is that the community ought to ponder well before taking on the long-distance burden. A meeting of citizens is to decide whether they are justified in foisting upon their posterity, three and one-half centuries hence, the responsibility of administering a fortune which would cause no terrors to a metropolis, but might quite overwhelm Weida, which has 8,000 souls and long ago attained its full stature.—Berlin Correspondence to the Portland Oregonian.

The Skeptic.

The following story is taken not from a French but a German paper, which printed it not many weeks ago. A tourist (so it runs) found himself in a little village in southern Alsace and paid a visit to the church. The sacristan showed him a silver mouse upon the altar. Four hundred years ago a plague of mice had devastated the countryside and the good folk had poured all their silver pieces into the melting-pot to make that pious offering. Immediately the plagues of mice had vanished from the land.

"And you really believe that story?" said the tourist to the sacristan.

"Not a bit of it," replied the fellow. "If we did believe it we'd have put in a silver Persian there long ago."

COMMUNITY FAIR.

The citizens of school district No. 46 have decided to hold a Community Fair at Collins Chapel school house, Saturday, Oct. 24, 1914. This is somewhat of a new move for old Chilton, but it is one that promises great things in the way of community development. It is intended to bring out all the community resources and to show what has been produced in the home, school, and on the farms without special effort. In other words it will be an exhibit of normal products instead of a display of things that have been specially prepared over a long period of time. One of the best things about this fair is that it costs nothing.

At a meeting of the citizens held in the schoolhouse on Sept. 28, a committee was appointed to outline plans which are as follows:

Every citizen of the district is expected to bring to the school house Friday afternoon or Saturday morning some products of the home or farm for exhibit. No one must get the idea that what he has is not good enough to exhibit, nor must (if he cares for the honor and good name of his community) fail to bring something.

There will be only honorary first and second prizes given. Committees will be in charge of the different departments to arrange and classify the exhibits. The departments are animals and poultry, agricultural, orchard and garden, domestic science, flower department, art and crafts, and historical relics.

Besides the judging and awarding of the prizes there will be speaking (speakers to be announced later), athletic contests, fire lighting and water boiling contest. Dinner will be served on the ground. See circulars for partial list of articles that may be used as exhibits.

"Now she strikes it!" he announced, as the rumble turned into a roar; but the roar grew louder, there was a crash as the trucks struck a curve, and then a great metal ore-car swung round the point, rode up high as it hit the reverse and, speeding by as if shot from a catapult, swept through the yard, smashed into a freight car, and leaped, car and all, into the creek.

"They've sneaked my derailer!" said the roadmaster, starting on a run for the shops. "Who'll go with me to put in another one? Or we'll loosen a rail on the curve—that'll call for no more than a clawbar and a wrench!"

"I'll go!" volunteered Bud and the man who stood guard, and as startled sleepers roused up on every side and ran toward the scene of the wreck they dashed down the hill together and threw a handcar on the track.

Then, with what tools they could get together, and a spare derailer on the front, they pumped madly up the canyon, holding their breaths at every curve for fear of what they might see. If there was one runaway car there was another, for the rebels were beginning an attack.

Already on the ridges above them they could hear the crack of rifles, and a jet or two of dust made it evident that they were the mark. But with three strong men at the handles they made the handcar jump. The low hills fled behind them. They rounded a point and the open track lay before them, with something—

"Jump!" shouted the roadmaster, and as they tumbled down the bank they heard a crash behind them and their handcar was knocked into kindling wood.

It was a close call for all three men, and there had been but an instant between them and death, a death by the most approved fighting methods of the revolutionists, methods which kept the fighters out of harm's way.

"Now up to the track!" the roadmaster panted, as the destroyer swept on down the line. "Find some tools—we'll take out a rail!"

With frantic eagerness he toiled up the fill and attacked a fish-plate, and Bud and the young guard searched the hillside for tools to help with the work. They fell to with sledge and clawbar, tapping off nuts, jerking out spikes, and heaving to loosen the rail—and then once more that swift-moving something loomed up suddenly on the track.

"Up the hill!" commanded the roadmaster, and as they scrambled into a gulch a wild locomotive, belching smoke and steam like a fire engine, went rushing past them, struck the loose rail, and leaped into the creek bed. A moment later, as it crashed its way down to the water, there was an explosion that shook the hills. They crouched behind the cut bank, and the trees above them bowed suddenly to the slash of an iron hail.

"Dynamite!" cried the roadmaster, grinning triumphantly as he looked up after the shock, and when the hail of fragments had ceased, and they had fled as if by instinct from the place, they struck hands on their narrow escape. But back at the big house, with everybody giving thanks for their delivery from the powder train, the master mechanic raised a single voice of protest. He knew that dynamite had no responsibility for the train that swept the ears of the anxious listeners.

"Dynamite not dynamite!" he roared. "Powder train be damned! It was [illegible] shot and sour [illegible] whisky [illegible] the crime."

So he hurried down to the fort again and was just making a sack of food fast to his saddle when he heard a noise behind him and turned to face Aragon. For two days the once-haughty Don Cipriano had skulk about like a sick cat, but now he was headed for Gracia's big room, and the look in his eyes betrayed his purpose.

"Where you going?" demanded Hooker in English, and at the gruff challenge the Spaniard stopped in his tracks. The old, hunted look came back into his eyes, he seemed to shrink before the stern gaze of the Texan; and, as the memory of his past misdeeds came over him, he turned as if to flee.

But there was a smile, an amused and tolerant smirk, about the American's mouth, and even for that look of understanding the harried hacendado seemed to thank him. He was broken now, thrown down from his pedestal of arrogance and conceit, and as Hooker did not offer to shoot him at sight he turned back to him like a lost dog that seeks but a kind word.

Bud knew that Aragon was entirely at his mercy, that fear had clutched the once arrogant Spaniard by the throat, and it was almost worth the anxiety he felt for this man's daughter to see the father cowed. Aragon crawled closer to Bud as if for the protection he could not get from his own people.

"I'm Going to Get Those Papers!"

"Ah, senor!" he whined, "your pardon! What?" as he sighted the sack of meat—"you are going, too? Ah, my friend"—his eyes lighted up suddenly at the thought—"let me ride with you! I will pay you—yes, anything—but if Bernardo Bravo takes me he will hang me! He has sworn it!"

"Well, you got it coming to you!" answered Hooker heartlessly.

"But I will pay you well!" pleaded Aragon. "I will pay you—" He paused as if to consider what would tempt him and then suddenly he raised his head.

"What is it you wish above everything?" he questioned eagerly. "Your title to the mine—no? Bien! Take me to the line—protect me from my enemies—and the papers are yours!"

"Have you got them with you?" inquired Hooker with businesslike directness.

"No, but I can get them!" cried Aragon, forgetful of everything but his desire to escape. "I can get them while you saddle my horse!"

"Where?" demanded Hooker craftily.

"From the agents mineral!" answered Aragon. "I have a great deal of influence with him, and—"

"Bastante!" exploded Bud in a voice which made Aragon jump. "Enough! If you can get them, I can! And we shall see, Senor Aragon, whether this pistol of mine will not give me some influence, too!"

"Then you will take them?" faltered Aragon as Hooker started to go. "You will take them and leave me for Bernardo Bravo to—"

"Listen, senor!" exclaimed Hooker, halting and advancing a threatening forefinger. "A man who can hire four men to do his dirty work needs no protection from me. You understand that—no? Then listen again. I am going to get those papers. If I hear a word from you I will send you to join your four men."

He touched his gun as he spoke and strode out into the open, where he beckoned the mineral agent from the crowd. A word in his ear and they went down the hill together, while Don Cipriano watched from above. Then as they turned into the office Aragon spat out a curse and went to seek Manuel del Rey.

CHAPTER XXIV.

In a land of class privilege and official graft it is often only in times of anarchy that a poor man can get his rights. For eight months Hooker had battled against the petty intrigue of Aragon and the mine owners, and then suddenly, when the world [illegible] to win [illegible] in your [illegible] fire out [illegible] control [illegible]

With his papers inside his shirt and a belt of gold around his waist there was nothing left in Mexico for him. Once on his horse and headed for the line and he could laugh at them all. In Gadsden he could show title to Kruger; he could give answer for his trust and look the world in the eye.

It had been a long and strenuous fight; a fight made against seemingly insurmountable odds; a fight that had cost him much, but he had won. He had proved the trust Kruger had placed in him, and it had been a fight worth winning.

Yes, he was a man now—but his work was not quite done. Up at the big house, with the screeching women around her, was Gracia Aragon, and he owed her something for his rough words. To pay her for that he would stay. Whatever she asked now he would grant it; and if worst came to worst he would take her with him and make good his promise to Phil. He had given his word and that was enough. Now he had only to wait.

It would not be long, for the parley would soon be over, and if the cowardly rurales surrendered the town to the bandits he would make a break for the line and civilization with the girl. It would be a hard ride, and alone he would have no fear of the results, but he would chance it even with the girl rather than leave her.

The boy lieutenant, the brothers Mendoza, the superintendent, and Manuel del Rey, all were out on the hillside talking terms with Bernardo Bravo and his chiefs. With the rebels it was largely a bluff, since field-glasses had shown them to be short of cartridges; but they had over a thousand men massed along the ridges and, with courage, could easily take the town.

Bud knew that courage was the one thing lacking. It was the one thing that was always lacking in these Mexican fights. The Mexican bandit takes but little chance when he goes to war.

As for the Mendozas and their Sonoran miners, they were properly chagrined at their waste of ammunition and swore by Santa Guadalupe to fight it out with hand grenades. Even as their leaders wrangled the Mexican powder men were busily manufacturing bombs, and all the while the superintendent was glancing to the south, for swift couriers had been sent to Alvares, the doughty Spanish hacendado of the hot country, to beg him to come to their relief.

Twice before Alvares had met the rebels. The first time he spoke them well and they ran off all his horses. The second time he armed his Yaquis and Yaqui Mayo rancheros against them and drove them from his domain, inflicting a sanguinary punishment.

Since then he had been itching to engage them in a pitched battle, and when the word reached him he would come. Two hundred and forty Yaquis, all armed with repeating rifles, would follow at his back, and even with his boasted thousands Bernardo Bravo could hardly withstand their valor. So, while the rebels parleyed, demanding a ransom of millions and threatening to destroy the town, the defenders argued and reasoned with them, hoping to kill the time until Alvares should arrive.

In the open space in front of the house the refugees gathered in an anxious group, waiting for messengers from the front, and as Hooker walked among them he was aware of the malignant glances of Aragon. There were other glances as well, for he had won great favor with the ladies by ditching the powder train, but none from Gracia or her mother.

Bud would not have admitted that he resented this lack of appreciation on the part of Gracia. In fact he hardly knew that he did resent it, but he watched anxiously for any sign of approval from this girl who was to be his pardner's bride should he conduct her safely to the border.

From the beginning the Senora Aragon had treated him as a stranger, according to the code of her class, and Hooker had never attempted to intrude. But if Gracia still remembered that she was an American girl at heart, she forgot to show it to him. To all she was now the proud Spanish lady, thrown with the common people by the stress of circumstances, but far away from them in her thoughts.

The conference between the leaders dragged on and messengers came and went with the news—then, after hours of debate, it broke up suddenly in a row and the emissaries came back on the run. Even at that they narrowly escaped, for the rebels opened fire upon them from the ridges, and before they could get back to cover the dandy, Manuel del Rey, received a bullet hole through the crown of his hat.

A grim smile flickered across Bud's face as he saw the damage it had wrought, for he knew that Amigo was in the hills—and a bullet shot down hill goes high! Some trace of what was in his mind must have come to Del Rey as he halted in the shelter of the house, for he regarded the American sternly as Aragon spoke rapidly in his ear. But if they planned vengeance between them the times were not right, for a rattle of arms came from the lower town and the captain was up and away to marshal his men to the defense.

So far in the siege Del Rey had kept under cover, patrolling the streets and plaza and letting the volunteers fight, but now the war had shifted to his territory and his rurales were running like mad. For, matching treachery against deceit, the rebel leaders had sent men around to slip up near the town and at the first fusillade from the hillside they came charging up the creek.

Then it was that the ever-watchful rurales proved their worth. As the rebels appeared in the open they ran to the outlying houses and, fighting from the flat roofs, checked the advance until the miners could come to their aid.

But in the confusion another party of rebels had rushed down the gulch from the west, and while the fight was going on in the lower town they found lodgment in a big adobe house. And now for the first time there was fighting in earnest—the house-to-house fighting that is seen at its worst in Mexico. While women screamed in the casa grande and the Americans paced to and fro on the hill, the boom of a dynamite bomb marked the beginning of hand-to-hand.

If there was to be a casualty list in this long-looked for battle of Fortuna, the time was at hand when they could begin counting the dead.

With a fearlessness born of long familiarity with explosives the Sonoran miners advanced valiantly with their hand grenades—baking powder cans filled with dynamite and studded with fulminating caps. Digging fiercely through wall after wall they approached unperceived by the enemy and the first bomb, flung from a roof, filled the adobe with wounded and dead.

A dense pall of yellowish smoke rose high above the town and, as bomb after bomb was exploded and the yells of the miners grew louder with each success, the stunned invaders broke from cover and rushed helter-skelter up the gulch. Then there was a prodigious shouting from the Sonorans and more than one triumphant grenadier swung his can of giant powder by the sling and let it smash against the hill in a terrific detonation.

In the big house all was confusion. Soon the cheers of the defenders heralded victory and, in spite of all efforts to restrain them, the wives of the miners rushed into the open to gaze upon the triumph of their menfolk.

On the hilltops the ineffective rebel riflemen rose up from behind their stone wall to stare, until suddenly they, too, were seized with a panic and ran to and fro like ants. Then, around the curve below the concentrator, a tall man came dashing up on a pure white horse, and behind him, charging as he charged, came the swarthy Yaquis of Alvares, their new rifles gleaming in the sun.

Heavy Pasturing Condemned.

Heavy pasturing of alfalfa is not advised. The number of animals per acre should be so regulated that two or three small cuttings of hay may be taken from the field. This is necessary to insure tender green growth for grazing. When little buds begin to shoot at the base of the stalk the alfalfa should be cut. In a very few days a fresh new growth makes its appearance. Overpasturing, without occasional cutting, also tends to injure the crowns of the plant and eventually destroys the stand.

good way to feed is to hollow oblong pieces of wood and fill warm sirup. Set at the hive ence at nightfall. Some people fill paper bags with a fine quality thick sirup and prick holes in the m with a pin. The bags are ed over the frames.
The bees that hatch between Au-

t constitute the winter force.
takes about fifty pounds of the t granulated sugar to feed a lthy stand of bees through the ter.
Have you noticed that many of your es are dead in the spring, although hives contained plenty of food?
is is because they were so cold t they could not move to the new es after they had consumed those hin their reach.
Bees seldom die from having too
h honey, but like people, they not live without eating.
If you winter bees in the cellar and do not have perfect ventilation they will die.
In the cellar, tilt the back part of the hive up about an inch, so that accumulated moisture can run out.
Never winter bees with the supers on. They leave an empty, cold space just over the bees and that is generally fatal.
Honey should be kept in a dry, warm, dark place with conditions as near like those in the natural hive, as possible.
If your bees are left out of doors all winter, you are gambling on the weather. Maybe they will come through all right, but more likely they will die.
Examine all the hives this fall, extract the honey from the upper stories, and requeen when necessary.
Bees will freeze more quickly in a cellar that is damp than they will outdoors where the temperature is much lower.
Some people try to teach bees their business. But as a rule bees know more about making honey than most people.
The average life of a working bee is only 45 labor days.

BENEFIT OF LEGUMES

Preventers of Erosions and Plant Food Conservers.

They Also Add to Supply of Humus in Soil and Improve Its Physical Condition—Valuable as Hay and Grazing Crop.

(By T. B. PARKER.)

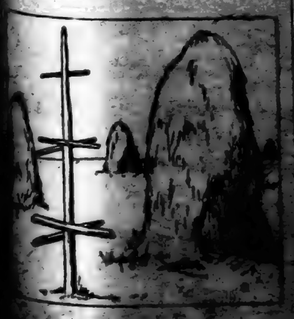
The aggressive campaign that has been waged for the past few years in the interest of better farming by the use of legumes has not been without its reward. As farmers have become better acquainted with these crops and as they have more fully understood their economy in crop production, the greater has grown the demand for information about them. And is this surprising, for when we recognize the value of cover crops, and the advantage of legumes as cover crops, as preventers of erosions, conservers of plant food which might otherwise be leached out of the soil; and also their power to add to the supply of plant food, deepen the soil and add to its supply the humus; to improve its physical condition, and, in addition, their value as hay and grazing crops, to the progressive farmer they become very interesting. And to properly perform the functions of a winter crop, those adapted to that purpose should be sowed sufficiently early to so cover the soil before their growth is stopped by cold weather as to protect it from erosion. And when they are sowed even too late for that, their root system may make enough growth to stop a large part of the waste of plant food that would be leached out of a bare soil. And it is a well-known fact that of the three essential elements to plant growth, nitrogen, phosphorus and potash, one or more of these is lacking in most of our cultivated soils, nitrogen is the most frequent, and, from experience, has proven to be the most important. Also it has been found that the legumes in Germany, a country that has been cropped for about 65 generations longer than we have been, are still maintaining their fertility, while we have established many farms that have practically become worthless.

The power of cultivated plants to gather nitrogen from the air through the agency of bacteria peculiar to the particular kind of legume grown. For instance, the cowpeas will thrive only when the bacteria peculiar to the cowpea is present; the soy bean requires the presence of bacteria adapted to that plant; crimson clover will thrive only when the bacteria peculiar to that plant is present; and so on throughout the entire list, with certain exceptions. Those now known are: Garden or English peas, and the vetches can become inoculated with the same bacteria. Alfalfa, sweet clover and burr clover will inoculate either plant.

Most of the legumes when cut at the proper time and well cured make a very fine quality of hay. When the hay can be used to advantage on the farm, it is much better to make the crop into hay and feed it to live stock; but if the land needs it more than the live stock does, then it may pay better to turn it under for soil improvement. Each farmer may decide this for himself. However, it may be well to remember that feeding hay to live stock does not add anything to its fertilizing value. Therefore the manure of a given quantity of hay fed to live stock and the manure returned to the land will not contain as much plant food as the grass would have furnished if it had been plowed under instead of having been made into hay and fed to the live stock.

GENERAL FARM NOTES

Too much ensilage is just enough.



Salt in whitewash makes it stick.

Water is cheap and plentiful. Cows eat feed it and should have all they want.

Hogs thrive best when clean, and they will always keep clean if given the chance.

Spraying to produce clean fruit is an art, and like any other may be governed by science.

The manure of cultivated plants will be worth more than any other plant or weed can compare from.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK! LISTEN! CLEAN LIVER AND BOWELS MY WAY

Just Once! Try "Dodson's Liver Tone" When Bilious, Constipated, Headachy—Don't Lose a Day's Work.

Liven up your sluggish liver! Feel fine and cheerful; make your work a pleasure; be vigorous and full of ambition. But take no nasty, dangerous calomel, because it makes you sick and you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver, which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel crashes into sour bile like dynamite, breaking it up. That's when you feel that awful nausea and cramping.

Listen to me! If you want to enjoy the nicest, gentlest liver and bowel cleansing you ever experienced just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone. Your druggist or dealer sells you a 50 cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone under my personal money-back guarantee that each spoonful will clean your sluggish liver better than a dose of nasty calomel and that it won't make you sick.

Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning, because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular.

Dodson's Liver Tone is entirely vegetable, therefore harmless and cannot salivate. Give it to your children. Millions of people are using Dodson's Liver Tone instead of dangerous calomel now. Your druggist will tell you that the sale of calomel is almost stopped entirely here.

WHAT HE REALLY DID SAY

Remark Might Almost Be Construed as a Slur on a Most Noble Profession.

One morning Gifford met his old friend Hall. After they had greeted they did under pretense of studying each other, Gifford said:

"Say, Will, I heard today that your son, Thomas, was an undertaker. I thought you told me he was a physician."

"Oh, no," replied Hall, positively, "I never told you that."

"I don't like to contradict you, old friend," insisted Gifford, "but, really, I'm positive you did say so."

"No, you probably misunderstood me," explained Hall, "I told you he followed the medical profession."—Exchange.

SKIN ITCHED AND BURNED

R. F. D. No. 1, Box 164, Bridgewater, N. C.—"I was suffering with a skin trouble which began after a spell of sickness six years ago. It was mostly on my body and I could not rest for the itching and burning. It began like a nettle rash, then it would break out in pimples all over me. I would sting and burn and itch all over and I scratched until I was almost raw. At times I could hardly bear anything to rub against the parts that were affected.

"I do not know how many remedies, soaps, etc., I tried, but none did me any good. Then I tried Cuticura Soap and Ointment and they seemed to be the very thing that I needed. I only used them four weeks and they completely healed me." (Signed) Mrs. H. L. Patton, Jan. 31, 1914.

Go to Jerusalem to Die.

That Jewish immigrants have so well adapted themselves to local conditions in Jerusalem as to "practically monopolize a greater part of such trade as exists" is stated in a consular report on Jerusalem. It is impossible to give an exact estimate of the population of Jerusalem, and although it is believed that it figures at 110,000, 85,000 might perhaps be a more correct estimate. It is roughly speaking, composed of 13,000 Christians, 25,000 Mohammedans and 70,000 Jews, many of whom are immigrants from Russia.

The immigration trend is toward the cessation of many Jews to avoid military service there has still been a marked increase in the section of the population of aliens of aged Jews, who come with the intention of ending their days in Palestine.

WANTED

NOT EVEN AN ACQUAINTANCE

American Girl Surely Had Reason for Complaint Against Impertinence of Acquaintance.

You remember how in the piping days of peace, when something simply had to be done to make talk, there was a hue and cry about American girls in Berlin and the dreadful things they did under pretense of studying music. Here is a story of one of them which the New York Evening Post Saturday Magazine's special war correspondent has sent over with the explanation that it was all he could get past the censor at this time. A Berlin paper reports that a quiet street in Charlottenburg was suddenly alarmed by shrill cries of "Police! Police!" A great crowd promptly collected about the person responsible for the disturbance, an excited young woman, obviously American.

"Arrest this man, officer," she said as soon as a policeman appeared. "I am Miss Ellington from Cincinnati, U. S. A., and he had the impertinence to speak to me."

The policeman, guided by the young woman's accusing finger, picked out the culprit.

"The man is a stranger to you?" he asked.

"An entire stranger," replied Miss Ellington. "I have only been taking violin lessons from him for six months."

Dangers to the Eye.

Mr. Louis Bell, the electrical illuminating expert, and Dr. F. H. Verhoeff, an eye specialist, have published in Science their opinion that the alleged dangers to the eye from ultra-violet radiation of sunlight and various artificial lights amount to nothing at all. They admit that there have been many "sensational attacks" upon modern illuminants as dangerous by reason of injurious effects of ultra-violet or actinic rays, but these have "entirely neglected any quantitative relation between the radiation and its supposed pathological effects." Very little of these rays can penetrate the cornea, and the crystalline lens cuts off completely those that struggle through toward the retina. Protective glasses are useful only, they conclude, in cutting off dazzling lights and undue heat.

The New Language.

Here is our esteemed contemporary World Speech again celebrating that accomplished international language, Ro, which is "easy easy for the Japanese, Chinese or Hindus as for the Latin or Teutonic peoples." No doubt, and as easy for us as Japanese, Chinese, Eurasian and Basque. But listen to a bit of no dialogue:

What a Cold Can Do

Many a fatal case of kidney disease starts from a simple cold or chill. Congestion clogs the tubes in the kidneys. Uric poisons collect, damage the kidneys and cause backache, rheumatic pain, headaches and urinary disorders.

When catching a cold, think of the kidneys. Drink water freely to help flush out the poisons. Take Doan's Kidney Pills to relieve congestion of the kidneys, give up a heavy meat diet and take plenty of rest. Nature will assist in the cure. Doan's Kidney Pills are used with success and are publicly recommended all over the civilized world.

An Alabama Case

B. M. Brown, Sr., 743 S. St. Andrew St., Dothan, Ala., says: "I was so bad with kidney disease that the doctors held out no hope of my recovery. I was confined to the house two months, hardly able to move. My body swelled terribly and I was so miserable that a few weeks have been welcome. I used Doan's Kidney Pills and improved in a week. In two months I was a well man and I have never had a sign of kidney trouble since."

Minneapolis Lady Badly Scalded While Cooking

While preparing dinner a young Minnesota wife had the misfortune to scald her hand so badly that over half the skin came off. She was alone at the time and rushed over to her neighbor's for help. This neighbor promptly applied Allan's Ulcerine Salve and in ten days the hand was completely healed without a scar.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

BIDS WANTED.

Notice is hereby given that at a regular meeting of the Commissioners Court of Chilton county, Alabama, held at Clanton, Alabama, on the 14th day of September, 1914, a resolution was adopted providing for building or constructing of a public highway from Clanton to the line of Chilton and Shelby counties near South Calera by way of Thornby and Jemison in Chilton county along or near the line of the present highway between said points.

Said road is to be built by grading, cherting or graveling, the work to be done by contract and said contract to be let to the lowest bidder under sealed bids to be deposited with the Judge of Probate on or before the 26th day of October, 1914.

Said bid shall set forth the number of miles in length and the kind of road, whether graded, cherted or graveled and the charge for each kind. Said bids shall be made upon plans or specifications to be provided by J. B. Converse, Civil Engineer, of Selma, Alabama.

The payment for the building of said highway to be made by the County by issuing County Warrants payable in annual installments from one to three years; all persons offering to bid upon said contract for the building of said road or any section or number of miles of same may deposit their bids in sealed envelopes marked "Bids for County Road Work," and addressed to Commissioners Court on or before 12 o'clock the 26th day of October, 1914, at which time said bids will be passed upon by the Court. The Court reserving the right to reject any or all bids. Contractors bidding will be required, as evidence of good faith in making bids, to deposit with said bid a certified check for $750.00, or to deposit same with the Judge of Probate on or before said bids are opened and passed upon by the Court.

Why Not Publish It?

When you want a fact to become generally known, the right way is to publish it. Mrs. Joseph Kallans, Peru, Ind., was troubled with belching, sour stomach and frequent headaches. She writes, "I feel it my duty to tell others what Chamberlain's Tablets have done for me. They have helped my digestion and regulated my bowels. Since using them I feel entirely well." Hurrah for Killgore, for he brings up a record of conditions that existed when old "Roosey" was President, and Killgore, barely touched the matter, yet they will never attempt to answer, for their cowardly tactics would be knocked into smithereens.

Well, Lincoln, said you may fool all the people part of the time, and fool part of the people all the time, but you can't fool all the people all the time.

Now don't loose sight of one thing, which is opening the people's eyes more than any one thing, and that is the failure of the Bull Moosers to answer my questions in regard to who has levied the tax, and spent the county's money. So just keep driving it home, it may get to be monotonous, but just keep rubbing it in, it will either kill or cure; they can't get away from it; they may try the silent contempt method, but the people are taking notice, and from the very fact that the Reynolds crowd do not try to answer, so the people are saying that they are guilty, or surely they would answer.

Well, all they can do is to try to keep up the same old time song to "Long Meter," (just look how the money goes, pop goes the weasel,) and "since the Democrats came unto power," is their doxology.

SHORT OF AMMUNITION

G. O. P. Has No Material For a Campaign Text Book.

Washington, D. C., Oct. 17, 1914

Democrats were amused at the report circulated today that the Republican Congressional Campaign Committee will not issue a text book this year because of the failure of the committee to agree on the line of attack.

The split occurred, it is stated, when one element sought to assail the Underwood-Simmons tariff law and the banking and currency act. Several members of the Republican organization voted for these two measures, as did many other Republicans, and they refused to condemn laws which they had approved.

Republicans secretly admit that they have absolutely no basis for criticising the Wilson administration or the record of the Democrats in Congress, and least of all the tariff and currency laws, both of which have been commended to the country.

Until the European war drove them off the front pages of even stand-pat Republican organs, a small coterie of Republicans in the House and Senate crowded the Congressional Record with "panic" speeches, plainly intended for use in their text books.

But the hoped-for panic did not materialize and the minority has been at a loss for campaign ammunition. Opposition to the war revenue measure is now being used as eleventh-hour "talking point."

"The country is with Wilson and any attempt to criticise him or his record would only make us ridiculous," said one Republican today. "The Democrats are apathetic, the Republicans are afraid to stay away from the polls for fear of overconfidence. It is only a repetition of two years ago."

THOS. A. CURRY, Chairman
Democratic Campaign Committee Chilton County.

SPEAKING AT BENSON

Senator Curry and Judge Reynolds spoke to the voters at Benson on last Monday night, and the audience was acknowledged to be by a great majority Democratic.

Senator Curry held the crowd spell bound in his argument for Democratic principles and for the Democratic party in Nation, State, and County. He showed where it was a party of the people, and read freely from the Democratic platform, which the Bull Moose leaders have declared to the voters of this county was not in existance.

After Judge Reynolds had taken forty-five minutes in condemning the actions of the Democratic party in Chilton county, without giving one method of relief which he could hold out to them, or providing one way for their safety; Senator Curry in his rejoinder completely to the entire satisfaction of those present, explained that Judge Reynolds' argument was without foundation from beginning to end.

We appreciate the audience the Democrats in that precinct gave us and it shows that on Nov. 3rd the Democrats will roll up a good vote in that section.

COUNTY FAIR JUDGES

The Fair management has secured Prof. E. S. Girton, of Auburn, as judge of live stock; Dr. Halstead will judge the poultry; Prof. S. L. Chesnut, of Montevallo, will judge the agricultural products, and the Misses Sarah Conway, of LaFayette, and Charlie Conway, of Birmingham, will judge in the ladies' department.

The athletic work will be in charge of Mr. J. Sterling Moran.

On Tuesday we will have the Fiddlers' contest and the judges will be selected by the fiddlers themselves.

Wednesday will be Live Stock day and all live stock will be judged on that day.

On Thursday the poultry and agricultural products will be judged; also the judging of the Ladies Department will begin on Thursday and continue till completed.

On Friday there will be the Better Baby contest and the Singing contests.

Saturday will be special school and athletic day, with special rates of admission for school children.

PROMINENT SPEAKERS TO STUMP STATE

Birmingham, Ala., Oct. 14, 1914.

The State Democratic Campaign Committee announces today that Oscar W. Underwood, Democratic Leader in the House and Democratic nominee for the senate from Alabama, will be ready to take the stump in this State October 26th, on which date he will deliver an address at Greenville, in Butler County. Mr. Underwood will also speak at Mobile and Troy, and during the last week of the campaign in various counties of the 7th Congressional District.

Walter D. Seed, Lieutenant Governor of Alabama, will take the stump beginning October 26th in the interest of nominees of the party, and will conclude his speaking tour to the end of the campaign. About twenty-five other prominent Alabamians will do likewise, and for the remaining two weeks of the campaign Democratic doctrine will be expounded and explained in every doubtful county in the State. Under this direc-

BAD AUTO ACCIDENT

On last Sunday afternoon about four o'clock, while Mrs. L. J. Duncan and a party of friends were returning to Clanton, from an automobile ride, the machine in which they were riding overturned and three of the party were painfully though not seriously injured.

The accident occurred on the B. and M. highway, one and a half miles south of town.

The car was driven by Mrs. Duncan, and the members of the party were Mrs. Duncan and two children, Misses Corita Wilson, Evelyn Waller, Ada Faircloth and little James Wade.

The machine, a five-passenger Ford, was rounding a sharp curve and proceeding at a high rate of speed, the weight of the car was thrown on the rear wheels, causing them to "skid" and the car turned a complete somersault, landing in a ditch by the roadside. That none of the occupants were killed is nothing less than miraculous.

Miss Faircloth was thrown several feet and was the most painfully injured, sustaining a severe body sprain and other bruises. Miss Wilson's injuries were a broken collar bone and bruises on the hands and arms. Mrs. Duncan was pitched against the wind shield and sustained a severe blow on the head and a bruised shoulder. The little Duncan children escaped with minor bruises and scratches. James Wade was asleep in the rear of the car and he and Miss Waller, while thrown a number of feet, remarkable to relate, they were uninjured.

As soon as the accident occurred, Drs. Arthur Johnson and V. J. Gragg were immediately summoned and rendered all possible relief to the sufferers.

Mrs Duncan and Miss Wilson were confined to their beds for three or four days, and Miss Faircloth will be able to be out again in a few days.

One wheel and the wind shield were demolished, though Mr. Duncan states that the damage to the machine was slight, amounting to about $10.

endeavoring to send Republicans to the Legislature, a body which is always made up of Democrats. It will be shown that in a Democratic body a Republican representative will have no opportunity of accomplishing anything for the county or section which commissions him.

MY REASONS FOR SUPPORTING DEMOCRATIC TICKET

Editor Clanton Press:

Please give me space to reply to what appeared in last week's issue of the Union-Banner about me.

It is, and has always been the true purpose of the so-called people's cause in this county since it left the principles of Populism to deceive the unwary. When they stated in the Union-Banner that I reported to Felix Dudley they told something that was not true, for I have not seen him in several days. If I should have seen him I have nothing to report as it is none of his business, what I do. Every person who knows anything about the Socialists knows that

Up along the hillside and after the fugitives they ran with vengeful eagerness, racing each other for the higher ground and the first shot at the rebels. First Alvarez on his white horse would be ahead, and then, as they encountered rocks, the Yaquis would surge to the front. It was a race and at the same time it was a rout, for, at the first glimpse of that oncoming body of warriors, the cowardly followers of Bernardo Bravo took to their heels and fled.

But over the rocks no Chihuahuan, no matter how scared, can hope to outdistance a Yaqui, and the pop, pop of rifles told the fate of the first luckless stragglers. For the Yaquis, after a hundred and sixty years of guerrilla warfare, never waste a shot; and as savage yells and the crash of a sudden volley drifted down from the rocky heights the men who had been besieged in Fortuna knew that death was abroad in the hills.

Fainter and fainter came the shots as the pursuit led on to the north and, as Hooker strained his eyes to follow a huge form that intuition told him was Amigo, he was wakened suddenly from his preoccupation by the touch of some unseen hand. He was in the open with people all about him—Spanish refugees, Americans, triumphant miners and their wives—but that touch made him forget the battle above him and instantly think of Gracia.

He turned and hurried back to the corral where Copper Bottom was kept, and there he found her waiting, with her roan all saddled, and she challenged him with her eyes. The sun gleamed from a pistol that she held in her hand, and again from her golden hair, but he saw only her eyes, so brave and daring, and the challenge to mount and ride.

Only for a moment did he stand before her gaze, and then he caught up his saddle and spoke soothingly to his horse. They rode out of the corral together, closing the gates behind them and passing down a gulch to the rear. All the town lay silent below them as they turned toward the western pass.

The time had come. Well he knew the dangers that lay between them and the American line. Dangers not for him but for her. In the hills and passes and on the cactus-covered plain were thousands of men with whom she would not be safe for an instant, and against whom he must guard her that she might be delivered safely to Phil. And he loved her then as he had not believed it possible to love a woman. He loved this woman that he was attempting to save for another man, a "pardner" who had at the best been reckless of every trust, who had been unfaithful to every promise. And across the border this man was waiting for the woman Bud Hooker loved. That he take her to him was a more severe test of his manhood than any to which he had before been subjected. That he be untrue to the trust she reposed in him never entered his mind for a moment. With a strong man's love for her he thought only of how he was to conduct her safely out of the dangers which surrounded her.

Soldiers, miners, and refugees, men, women, and children, every soul in Fortuna was on the hill to see the last of the battle. It had been a crude affair, but bravely ended, and something in the dramatic suddenness of this victory had held all eyes to the close. Bud and Gracia passed out of town unnoticed, and as soon as they had rounded the point they spurred on till they gained the pass.

"I knew you would come!" said Gracia, smiling radiantly as they paused at the fork.

"Sure!" answered Hooker with his good-humored smile. "Count me in on anything—which way does this trail go; do you know?"

"It goes west twelve miles toward Arispe," replied Gracia confidently, "and then it comes into the main road that leads north to Nogales and Gadsden."

"That sounds about right for us," replied Bud. "Gadsden's the place we want to head for, and we want to get there mighty quick, too, if them rebels will let us, an' I guess that's what they'll have to do whether they want to or not."

They rode on together for some distance, the girl seemingly oblivious of the dangers which surrounded her, and Hooker watching carefully for every sign of difficulty.

"What is there up here?" inquired Bud, pointing at a fainter trail that led off toward the north. "This country is new to me. Don't know, eh? Well, if we followed that trail we'd run into them rebels, anyway, so we might as well go to the west. Is your saddle all right? We'll hit it up then—I'd like to strike a road before dark."

They hurried on, following a well-marked trail that gradually climbed higher and higher, and Gracia, intuitively guessing that Hooker was worried, said nothing, but watched the trail behind them as they turned toward the western pass.

Fainter and fainter came the shots as the pursuit led on to the north and, as Hooker strained his eyes to follow a huge form that intuition told him was Amigo, he was wakened suddenly from his preoccupation by the touch of some unseen hand. He was in the open with people all about him—Spanish refugees, Americans, triumphant miners and their wives—but that touch made him forget the battle above him and instantly think of Gracia.

He turned and hurried back to the corral where Copper Bottom was kept, and there he found her waiting, with her roan all saddled, and she challenged him with her eyes. The sun gleamed from a pistol that she held in her hand, and again from her golden hair, but he saw only her eyes, so brave and daring, and the challenge to mount and ride.

Only for a moment did he stand before her gaze, and then he caught up his saddle and spoke soothingly to his horse. They rode out of the corral together, closing the gates behind them and passing down a gulch to the rear. All the town lay silent below them as they turned toward the western pass.

The time had come. Well he knew the dangers that lay between them and the American line. Dangers not for him but for her. In the hills and passes and on the cactus-covered plain were thousands of men with whom she would not be safe for an instant, and against whom he must guard her that she might be delivered safely to Phil. And he loved her then as he had not believed it possible to love a woman. He loved this woman that he was attempting to save for another man, a "pardner" who had at the best been reckless of every trust, who had been unfaithful to every promise. And across the border this man was waiting for the woman Bud Hooker loved. That he take her to him was a more severe test of his manhood than any to which he had before been subjected. That he be untrue to the trust she reposed in him never entered his mind for a moment. With a strong man's love for her he thought only of how he was to conduct her safely out of the dangers which surrounded her.

Soldiers, miners, and refugees, men, women, and children, every soul in Fortuna was on the hill to see the last of the battle. It had been a crude affair, but bravely ended, and something in the dramatic suddenness of this victory had held all eyes to the close. Bud and Gracia passed out of town unnoticed, and as soon as they had rounded the point they spurred on till they gained the pass.

"I knew you would come!" said Gracia, smiling radiantly as they paused at the fork.

"Sure!" answered Hooker with his good-humored smile. "Count me in on anything—which way does this trail go; do you know?"

"It goes west twelve miles toward Arispe," replied Gracia confidently, "and then it comes into the main road that leads north to Nogales and Gadsden."

"That sounds about right for us," replied Bud. "Gadsden's the place we want to head for, and we want to get there mighty quick, too, if them rebels will let us, an' I guess that's what they'll have to do whether they want to or not."

ROAD BUILDING

CONSTRUCTION OF A CULVERT

Consideration of Economy and Safety Demands Employment of Other Material Than Wood.

By far the greater number of culverts and bridges on our public roads have a span of less than fifty feet. In the past these structures have, in general, been built of wood, but lumber so exposed in this dry climate is subject to rapid decay, writes Walter Graham in Denver Field and Farm. Consequently these structures require a great deal of repair and frequent renewals. The ever-increasing price of lumber is making the further use of wood for this class of structures more and more indefensible. The loads which our highway structures are called upon to sustain are also increasing. In many of our agricultural localities the movement of steam road rollers and heavy traction engines is seriously hampered because of weak bridges and culverts. Consideration of economy and safety demands the use of other materials than wood in the construction of culverts and bridges.

Durability is of the greatest economic importance. In many sections a large proportion of the annual road levy is expended in repair and renewal of wooden culverts and minor bridges, and it is not unusual to find this practice defended on the ground that the county or district cannot afford to build the higher-priced permanent culverts. This notion is simply a false sense of economy. True, the first cost of the permanent structure is greater, but there the outlay ends, while with wooden culverts there is a large annual outlay for repair, as well as frequent renewals. Anyone interested in road improvement will find it most interesting to secure the following data for his own county or district: The number of culverts, cost of labor and material for repair and renewal each year, average life of wooden culverts and the ordinary life of wooden bridge floors. Then he could compute how long it would be before the actual present expenditure would pay for permanent culverts.

Later improvements in the manufacture of iron have made this material more generally available for use in culvert construction. A special quality of iron, very low in carbon, resists corrosion so well as to make its use advisable in many cases, and this is an important point for the irrigated districts. The cutting away of the soil by the water at the inlet or outlet of a clay or cement pipe is often responsible for its progressive break-down and partial exposures of this character are extremely dangerous in time of freshet to any form of construction. It is doubtful whether the majority of practical roadbuilders have given consideration to the fact that by building suitable wing walls for any bridge or pipe they can very largely increase its carrying capacity. A V-shaped entrance-way so increases the velocity of the water as to enable a given conduit to perform the work of one of much larger diameter which has an end wall at right angles to the flow.

BAD ROADS VERY EXPENSIVE

Value of Horses and Mules in One County in Missouri Deteriorated 3 Per Cent Annually.

From the 1910 United States census reports it is found that the value of horses and mules in one county in Missouri was $831,089. The value of farm vehicles, harness and other equipment was $375,000, making a total of $1,206,089. The present roads of the county cause all animals, vehicles and harness to deteriorate three per cent per annum faster than they would on improved roads. Three per cent of $1,206,089 is $36,182.

This is only one source of loss which the county must bear every year on account of bad roads. Again, the cost per ton mile for hauling on the roads in the county is 30 cents, while the cost on good roads is only 14 cents per ton mile, thus saving 16 cents per ton mile.

There are about one hundred thousand tons hauled an average of five miles in the county; 75 per cent of this amount would be over improved roads provided the present bond issue carries.

Seventy-five per cent of the 100,000 tons equal 75,000 tons.

This amount hauled five miles represents 375,000 ton miles; 375,000 tons multiplied by 16 cents equals $60,000 plus $36,182 equals $96,182 total annual loss on account of present roads as compared to improved roads. This annual loss would be eliminated if the main or heavily traveled roads of the county were improved.

A NURSE TAKES DOCTOR'S ADVICE

And is Restored to Health by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Euphemia, Ohio.—"Because of total ignorance of how to care for myself when verging into womanhood, and from taking cold when going to school, I suffered from a displacement, and each month I had severe pains and nausea which always meant a lay-off from work for two to four days from the time I was 16 years old.

"I went to Kansas to live with my sister and while there a doctor told me of the Pinkham remedies but I did not use them then as my faith in patent medicines was limited. After my sister died I came home to Ohio to live and that has been my home for the last 18 years.

"The Change of Life came when I was 47 years old and about this time I saw my physical condition plainly described in one of your advertisements. Then I began using Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound and I cannot tell you or any one the relief it gave me in the first three months. It put me right where I need not lay off every month and during the last 18 years I have not paid out two dollars to a doctor, and have been blest with excellent health for a woman of my age and I can thank Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for it.

"Since the Change of Life is over I have been a maternity nurse and being wholly self-supporting I cannot over estimate the value of good health. I have now earned a comfortable little home just by sewing and nursing. I have recommended the Compound to many with good results, as it is excellent to take before and after childbirth."—Miss EVELYN ADELIA STEWART, Euphemia, Ohio.

NOVEL IDEA IN WILL MAKING

French Farmer Had Little Money to Leave, but at Least He Could Show His Good Will.

Two New York business men were one day discussing the purchase by one of them of a certain mercantile concern with which, the buyer explained, had come the "good will."

"I hope this 'good will,'" said the friend, "is greater than that of the old French farmer."

"I never heard the story."

"Here it is: The farmer was dying and he sent for the notary to make out the will. Propped up in bed, he dictated:

"'To Jean Marcel, our superb coiffeur, 10,000 francs.

"'I bequeath 15,000 francs to the fearless Alphonse Bayard, that he may continue his valuable aeronautical experiments.

"'To Pierre Deschamps, chemist, 10,000 francs as a mark of affection.

"'To my physician, Monsieur Leclair, 15,000 francs.

"'To our eloquent pastor, 25,000 francs, to continue the restoration of—'

"'But, my dear sir,' interrupted the notary, 'I don't believe you have all that money to leave.'

"'I know very well I haven't,' said the farmer, calmly, 'but I want to show them my good will.'"—Youth's Companion.

Anecdotes.

Speaking of humorists brings us to the fact that no man living can look quite so solemn when producing humore as Irvin S. Cobb, the well known comedian of the Saturday Evening Post. When Cobb was on the staff of one of the big New York newspapers he did various news assignments, some of them mighty serious and others that gave him a chance for comedy. It was a standing joke about the office that anybody could look at Cobb as he bent over his typewriter and tell which kind of yarn he was writing. If his face was all wrinkled up with solemnity like a bloodhound's, with a sad look about the eyes such as one rarely sees except in an undertaker's hostler, Cobb was preparing something that would make hosts of people laugh.

ERUPTION ON BABY'S FACE

Duke, N. C.—"When my baby was two weeks old, behind his ears turned red and caused an irritation and from rubbing it became raw and stayed moistened all the time. At times it would get so bad as to bleed. He was fretful. At the time he was eight months old he was in a bad condition with sores behind his ears and on his face.

"Nothing seemed to do any good at all till I got Cuticura Soap and Ointment. I at once commenced to wash his ears and face three or four times during the day with the Cuticura Soap, dried them with a soft cloth, then applied the Cuticura Ointment. In ten days his ears and face were well and no scars were left." (Signed) Mrs. Lena Lee, Jan. 2, 1914.

New Conundrum.

Here is a conundrum which your greatgrandfathers asked each other when they were little boys:

"How many legs has a dog if you call his tail a leg?"

"Five!" shouted the little greatgranddad of Mr. A.

"Wrong," corrected the diminutive greatgranddad of Mr. B. "Because calling his tail a leg doesn't make it a leg."

I am reminded of this venerable brain twister of youth by the following lines in the Clayton anti-business bill:

"The District of Columbia shall be deemed a state within the meaning of this law."

So I shall modernize that ancient query by propounding the following: "How many states in the United States if you call the District of Columbia a state?"—Girard, In. Philadelphia Ledger.

Korea.

Korea has practically become a part of the Japanese empire. At any rate the Japanese control in that country is complete, and the chances are that that control will never be withdrawn—not, at least, until Russia dominates the whole Asian mainland, if that time ever comes. The population of Korea is 12,000,000, and the area 82,000 square miles; nearly twice that of the state of New York.

CALOMEL MAKES YOU SICK, UGH! IT'S MERCURY AND SALIVATES

Straighten Up! Don't Lose a Day's Work! Clean Your Sluggish Liver and Bowels With "Dodson's Liver Tone."

Ugh! Calomel makes you sick. Take a dose of the vile, dangerous drug tonight and tomorrow you may lose a day's work.

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you feel sluggish and "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour, just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store or dealer and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful tonight and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous by morning I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

LIED TO SAVE MEN'S LIVES

Death or Capture of Lost English Soldiers Averted by Boldness of French Village Priest.

G. H. Perris, in a message to the Chronicle, tells of a dramatic little episode that occurred in a French village.

Four lost "Tommies" turned up in village and asked for shelter. They had been chased by uhlans, and the cure probably realized the risks he ran in taking them into his little house.

Early in the morning, sure enough, a German patrol rode into the place, summoned the inhabitants together, and demanded the surrender of the Englishmen, threatening dire penalties. Every one knew where they were, and turned to their spiritual guide.

Instinct saves us from reason in such crises. The good cure lied boldly, in a loud voice, so that his flock should understand. He had not seen the Englishmen. No doubt they had gone on toward Paris. The German soldiers rode on.

What most struck my informant, says the correspondent, was the exceeding deliberation with which the Atkins four performed their toilet and brushed their hair and clothes before making their escape. The cure then left for a safer place.—Pall Mall Gazette.

Why He Objected.

A parson and a leading parishioner were not on good terms, and there was much speculation in the village as to the reason.

"It's all on account of parson refusing to christen master's youngest child," the housemaid confided to her friend of the dusting brush at the house across the way. "Master wanted her to be named Dora Ruby Inez North Kathleen, but the parson wouldn't do it."

"It was like parson's cheek," replied her friend, "even if he was asked to give the child a hundred names—"

"Oh, it wasn't the number of names which bothered him," returned the servant. "He objected to the initials, that's all. You see, master's name is Beer, and the girl's initials are D. R. I. N. K., and parson declined to be a party to her having to sign herself when she grows up, 'Drink Beer.'"—London Answers.

The Cause Laid Bare

Tea and coffee drinkers often notice backache, headache, rheumatic pain, dizziness, drowsy, tired feelings, disturbed urination and other signs of kidney weakness. The constant use of narcotic or alcoholic drinks is very apt to irritate the kidneys, and weak kidneys need prompt help to avert all danger of dropsy, gravel or fatal Bright's disease. Avoid the use of stimulants, drink more water, get more rest, fresh air and exercise. To tone and strengthen the tired kidneys, use Doan's Kidney Pills, the most successful and highly recommended kidney remedy.

An Alabama Case

Mrs. Frank Riemann, 205 S. Wilkinson St., Mobile, Ala., says: "I had disordered kidneys for years and was steadily getting worse. My back ached constantly and I got so dizzy I couldn't stand alone. I was nervous, had headaches and was almost sick abed. Two boxes of Doan's Kidney Pills restored me to good health. Whenever I have used this remedy since, it has given fine results."

Nervous Emotional Dizzy Depressed ?

WOMEN who are restless, with constant change of position, "fidgetiness," who are abnormally excitable or who experience fainting or dizzy spells, or nervous headache and wakefulness are usually sufferers from the weaknesses of their sex.

DR. PIERCE'S

is the soothing, strengthening, invigorating tonic that brings about an invigorating calm to the nervous system. Overcomes the weakness and the dragging pains which resemble the pains of approaching motherhood. Thousands of women in the past forty years can bear witness to its merits.

Mrs. Addie Goodheart of Cedar St., Cedro, N. writes Dr. R. V. Pierce of Buffalo:

Colonel Roosevelt complains that some of the papers say his speeches are incendiary.

Oh, no, Colonel, the fire is out.

We are not advised at this date that the Union-Banner has put up that $500. reward for a copy of the Democratic platform, which it so gumptiously offered in a past issue. Neither has it put up the $1000. it offered for the man who would tell the people of a prosperous Democratic administration. The nerve of some folks is beyond compare.

The Bull Moosers were there at the speaking on last Saturday. They heard again the oldtime worn and run down "saws" about the "bull frog in the well" and "Sallie kissing Johnnie," etc., etc. Of course they laughed and the usual bunch of "appointed cheerers" applauded and cheered. At the close of the meeting the "King Pin" of the vehicle called for "mourners" and all those who were lost, politically, "riz," as they had been previously instructed to do.

There was a joint discussion of the political issues between Senator Thos. A. Curry and Judge A. P. Longshore of Shelby county, at Fairview on last Saturday night. A splendid audience greeted the speakers and the occasion was greatly enjoyed by all. The Judge was an easy mark for the terrific onslaughts of Senator Curry's logic and sarcasm. To use the expression of one who was present, "the senator sewed Longshore up in a sack and then walked off with him, sack and all."

On last Saturday at the Court house, the voters had the pleasure of listening to one of the most able Democratic speakers it has been their privilege to hear. Hon. Ray Rushton of Montgomery held the attention of those present for about an hour in a masterly address. No honest, home-loving, peace-loving citizen who heard this speech could conclude otherwise than that the Democratic party is the only hope of the State and Nation. His tribute to Woodrow Wilson and his administration regardless of his political preferences.

The great Bull Mooser, the "Moose" of Populism, Republicanism, Bull Mooseism and every other "ism" that happens along, regaled the "deer peepul" with his usual cheap anecdotes, and tirades upon the Democratic party. In all his hour's harangue, he never offered any measure whatever, for the remedying of the multitude of evils he found in the Democratic way of doing things. His entire discourse was strung out in inaccurances and misrepresentations. One good citizen in the audience asked him one simple question and the only one asked him during his entire speech and of course the great Bull Mooser answered the question and answered it falsely and knew his answer was false when he made it. This was not surprising, however, as falsehood and deception is the stock in trade of these "floaters" and without which they could not travel.

In 1900, with four years of Republican rule, from 1896 to 1900, cotton sold here for $25.00 per bale; the necessaries of life selling equally as high as of today, the Federal Government offered no aid to the farmers of the South, the South was solid then; the Republican party would have given its "soul to the wild cats" to have broken it. Why then was it the farmers of the South received no Federal aid? Why did not the Government do something to redeem its pledge to the Southern farmer in the form of aid? If it can be done now, it could have been done then, the Constitution has not been changed. No aid came from Washington; moreover the farmers toiled and baked in the cotton fields of the South for four long years, receiving for their cotton the pitiful price of 5 to 6 cents per pound.

Alabama has been Democratic for the past forty odd years and will remain so for as many years longer. No party, Republican, Socialist, nor Progressive, has written a law in Alabama in forty odd years and will not write a law in Alabama for the next forty. Every school boy knows that a nomination in a Democratic primary election in Alabama means election. Every citizen who remains out of the Democratic party is cut off from voting in the primary election and thereby deprives himself of the privilege of having any voice whatever in the selection of those officers who administer the affairs of his state. He can have no voice in the selection of the Governor—the man who executes the laws; no voice in the selection of any of the Supreme, Circuit Court Judges or Chancellors—the men who interpret the laws; no voice in the selection of the man who is at the head of the Educational or Agricultural Departments of the State—those departments in which the people are most vitally interested and concerned, and which come into our very homes. Our young men, however, have too much sense than to allow a gang of professional "office grabbers" to harangue them out of their rights and privileges as citizens and are coming into the Democratic party as fast as they get old enough to vote. They propose to have a voice in things and do not propose to sacrifice their political privileges in order that other men may get into some little county office for a few years. And these young men are right.

If the [illegible] Editor of the Union-Banner [illegible] he should be aware of [illegible] as to enable [illegible] [illegible] the [illegible] [illegible] [illegible]

Iowa Man Stuck With Pitch Fork.

A farmer living in the Northern part of Iowa stuck himself in the leg with a pitchfork. The wound would not heal and for two years he had a running sore. He tried all the common salves and liniments, and sometimes the sore would heal, but it always broke open again. Finally he healed it to stay healed with Allan's Ulcerine Salve.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

ASKS LEGISLATURE TO RETIRE BONDS

Recommendation Contained in Annual Report of State Treasurer John Purifoy.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings in and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

The annual report of State Treasurer Judge John Purifoy submitted to the printer, contains the recommendation that the January legislature take action looking to the retiring of the state's outstanding funding bonds, which total $954,000, as no other regular session of this body will be held before maturity of the papers in January, 1919.

The report contains daily statements of the total receipts and disbursements of the office and lays particular stress on the disbursements for January and February, when the hypothecated warrants held by banks, amounting to $1,146,778.90 were taken up. This strain was so severe that the treasury has never since attained a strong standing.

At the beginning of the year, according to the report, the bond redemption fund on deposit in a New York institution was $35,600.

During the fiscal year bonds of 1906 maturity to the amount of $1,000 have been redeemed and returned to the treasury. The retirement of these "Class B" bonds leaves a balance in the New York banking institution of $24,600 in paper of like date and nature.

The interest paid on the state debt during the year amounted to $178,725. These expenses are in addition to the warrants issued for current expenses during this period.

Judge Purifoy takes occasion in this last report to thank the members of his office for faithful and efficient service rendered during his tenure of office.

Federal Court Convenes.

The United States Court of Appeals for the fifth judicial circuit convened at Montgomery to take up the Alabama cases now awaiting disposal. The session will probably last all the week.

The court is composed of Judge Don A. Pardee of Atlanta, Judge A. H. McCormick of Texas and Judge R. W. Woods of Huntsville, who was recently appointed to that bench to succeed the late Judge David B. Shelby. Frank H. Mortimer of New Orleans is clerk of the court.

Among the first cases to be called was the bankrupt case of T. S. Faulk of Samson, which has been in litigation several years. Congressman Oscar Mulkey of the Third District, is counsel in the case.

Creditors of Faulk several years ago filed proceedings in bankruptcy against him and he contested the case, winning a verdict at the hands of a jury at Dothan a few months ago. The case was then taken to the circuit court of appeals.

"Taxation Laws Archaic."

Declaring that the taxation laws of the state are archaic and unjust and asserting that no proper system of taxation can be devised without fundamental changes in the constitution, the governor of Alabama, in an eloquent speech here before the newly organized Tax Reform League, pledged his hearty support and co-operation to the league in the work it has undertaken and invited all suggestions looking to a reform of the present system.

The governor asserted that the most paramount need of Alabama is a new constitution, declaring that not only to the taxation laws need revision but the educational system as well. He quoted figures to show that more than one-half of the money that is paid into the state treasury every year goes for the purpose of education and old soldiers.

Four Governors to Greenville.

Two former Governors, one Governor, and one Governor of the future will be at Greenville October 30 for "Governors' Day" at the farmers' institute and celebration. Governor O'Neal assured the committee that he would attend, unless pressing business called him, and it is practically certain that B. B. Comer and William D. Jelks, former Governors, and Charles Henderson, Democratic nominee for Governor, will be present. All State officials will be at Greenville during one day of the institute.

Convicts Mix Down Liquor.

Grady Sellers, serving a life term for the murder of Leander Feagin in Conecuh county eight years ago, was paroled by Governor O'Neal following the recommendation of the Board of Pardons. Legal technics and many citizens of the community in which the crime was committed, Wade Wilson was indicted for the same offense several years ago and before going to his death urged Sellers who had a part in the crime. Affidavits were presented to the governor to this effect.

Letter to Game Wardens.

State Game and Fish Commissioner John H. Wallace, Jr., has addressed a communication to the county game and fish wardens directing their attention to the fact that just before the closed season expires on quail many pre-sending to be sportsmen will seek to take these birds. He invokes in his letter of special instruction strict vigilance to the end that these men may be promptly apprehended and speedily convicted. He urges the game wardens to keep in close touch with their deputies in every part of their respective counties so that all violators of the game and fish laws in any regard may be brought to justice.

Mr. Wallace also addressed an urgent request to the various probate judges of the state in which he asked the active co-operation of the gentlemen to the end that the sale of hunters' licenses this year be largely increased. In his letter Mr. Wallace said as follows:

"I am sure that you are fully appreciative of the vast economic value of birds and game, and the imperative importance of their conservation. A hunter who has a license will observe the law and will report violators, while those who hunt without licenses, contrary to law, will violate the law and will likewise shield offenders."

Asks Curtailment of Demands.

L. E. Jeffries of Washington, general counsel of the Southern railway, appeared before the state railroad commission and, in a candid statement regarding the financial condition of his road, asked that there be a curtailment of the demands upon its revenues until such time as business conditions may warrant.

Mr. Jeffries, stated to the commission that as a result of the general business depression due to the European war the resources of the Southern railway had been greatly reduced, statements of the company showing that for the week ending September 21 last the gross revenues of the company, as compared with the same week of last year, had fallen off the sum of $139,356; that for the week ending September 30 such decrease amounted to $166,228, and that for the week ending October 7, the gross revenues of the company had decreased $245,868.

All the members of the commission were present at the meeting, and all signed the statement granting the temporary relief desired by the Southern railway.

Verdict Obtained by Chance.

Because the verdict of two years imprisonment imposed on him by a Randolph county jury was the result of the defendant's poor hand in a game of chance, Monroe Clifton was paroled by Governor O'Neal after serving twenty months of the sentences imposed.

Clifton was tried in Randolph county at the spring term of Circuit Court in 1913. The jury retired and on the first ballot eleven stood for acquittal and one for conviction. The one was obdurate and the jury decided to prepare two slips of paper bearing the words, "Guilty" and "Not guilty." Thes slips were put into a hat and a juror drew from the hat the one marked "Guilty." Clifton served twenty months of his sentence of two years when some friends secured affidavits telling of the lottery in which Clifton had lost.

Winston County Books O. K.

W. R. Foster, state examiner of accounts, reported to Governor O'Neal that an examination of the official books of Winston county shows them to be correct. Mr. Foster states in his report to the governor that the financial condition of this county is excellent, despite the fact that extensive road improvement has been made during the past year.

Insurance Agent Arrested.

State Fire Marshal Austin announced the indictment in Sumter county of C. F. Hislop, accused of defrauding citizens of that section out of $1000 in insurance premiums alleged to have been collected on fire policies of a fake Texas company, which were not delivered. Hislop was traced to Mississippi and arrested.

Warrants to Demonstration Agents.

Farm demonstration agents' warrants were mailed from the state department of agriculture offices. The state pays three-fifths of the salaries of these demonstrators and the amount released each month is in excess of $2,500. The national government pays the remaining two-fifths.

Lets Contract for Road.

State Highway Engineer Keller returned from Ozark and reports the letting of the contract for the construction of a State-aid highway between Ozark and Arlton. Work upon the project will be begun immediately.

Negro Convict Escapes.

Robert McKleroy, a negro, doing ten years from Jefferson county for robbery, escaped from the Monroe county turpentine camp. A reward of $50 is offered.

Plant Less Cotton.

W. H. Seymour, of Montgomery, president of the Alabama Division, Eastern Cotton Association, is planning with farmers in all counties of Alabama to make a plea that no cotton will be planted next year. Governor Glenn, during the session of the Legislature, and Governor-elect Henderson will be asked to call a meeting of the Legislature, and Governor-elect Henderson will be asked to call a meeting of the Legislature, and Governor-elect Henderson will be asked to call a meeting

AS A LITERARY GUIDE

London.—The official press bureau issued the following announcement:

"The British troops have made good progressed in the last four days. In the northern area the allies have driven the enemy back more than thirty miles."

The Bordeaux correspondent of The Times, in a dispatch, says:

"Opinion here continues satisfied with the military position. According to popular expression, General Joffre is thrusting the enemy out of doors without any unnecessary fuss.

"It is apparent, from the official communications, that the enemy is being superbly held along the immense front. The enemy's attempt to envelop the allies between Lille and the sea has failed. The Germans visibly are preparing to retreat by fortifying a line between Namur and Metz and a second line with a base at Air-la-Chappelle."

Two important successes in the battle for Dunkirk and Calais, for the possession of which the Germans are striving, are credited to the allies in the official communication issued in Paris.

The French are said to have re-occupied Armentieres, an important railway junction on the Belgian frontier northwest of Lille, and to have repulsed an attempt of the Germans to cross the river Yser, which flows through that little corner of West Flanders, which is all of Belgium that remains in Belgian hands. That would mean a check to the German attempt to reach Dunkirk by the coast route.

The French also are said to have pushed back still farther the German army which is advancing along the Belgian frontier to the coast.

The battle, which culminated in Armentieres, again coming under French influence, lasted for a week. The fighting was hard and continuous. The town was seized by the Germans last week, owing to its importance as a railway center. Besides, it is on the road to Lille, which the Germans still hold, despite reports to the contrary. The battle opened with cavalry fighting which gradually developed into a general battle, which indicates that the French are advancing in force toward Lille.

Four German Ships Sunk.

London.—The British navy has accounted for four more German destroyers, which were engaged and sunk off the Dutch coast by a British cruiser and four torpedo boat destroyers.

According to an announcement made by the secretary of the British admiralty, the British vessels in the action were the light cruiser Undaunted and the torpedo boat destroyers Lance, Lennon, Legion and Loyal.

The admiralty announces that the British loss in the engagement off the Dutch coast, in which four German torpedo boat destroyers were sunk, was one officer and four men wounded. The damage to the British destroyers was slight. The announcement adds:

"There are thirty-one German survivors, prisoners of war."

The sinking of the four warships makes six torpedo boat destroyers sent to the bottom by British gunfire since the beginning of the war and seven counting the torpedo boat destroyer sunk by the submarine E-9.

The Germans have sunk eight British and one Russian cruiser, while Austria has lost a submarine by accident.

German Fort Found In London

London.—The police have found at Willesden, a suburb to the northwest of London, a building occupied by Germans with foundations and roof of heavy concrete. They arrested twenty-two Germans on the premises. The premises were being used by C. G. Roeber, a German music publisher, as a factory. The site of this factory at Willesden commands several important railroad junctions. The Paris premises of this same firm were blown up recently on orders of the French government.

Khedive Of Egypt In Turkey

London.—That the khedive of Egypt, who is in Constantinople, has been forbidden by the British government to return to his dominion for the present is a belief current among the Egyptians who here in accord with Mohammedan affairs. The khedive was in Constantinople visiting the sultan when the war broke and first took up his residence in Switzerland.

Belgians Invited to Return

The Hague.—Burgomasters in the leading Dutch towns have issued proclamations announcing that the German government has granted permission for all Belgian refugees to return to their homes. The only reservation is that men liable for military service will be considered prisoners of war if they return. The Dutch burgomasters urge the Dutch to permit the Belgian refugees to return home as quickly as possible. Train service beteween Roosendaal and Antwerp has been resumed. The German delegation at The Hague has sent a communication to the Dutch press saying in effect that Germany had taken measures in August to spare Belgium a famine by asking Holland to allow the transportation of foodstuffs into Belgium over the Maas, the understanding being that the foodstuffs were intended for Belgium only.

Anti-German Riots In London

London.—Anti-German rioting in London seems to have been more general than first supposed. Twenty shops were wrecked. Damage was done in Deptford borough and in Old Kent road. In the former district several stores were attacked and one was fired. In Old Kent road meat markets were smashed and a confectionery store wrecked. Police were called out and twenty persons arrested. Great excitement prevails in Deptford and neighbornig boroughs. Crowds in the streets refused to move at orders of policemen and soldiers.

Another British Warship Sunk

London.—Another thrust from the German submarine service has robbed the British navy of the cruiser Hawke, and has raised the tally of British warships sunk by the Germans to seven. To this must be added the virtual destruction of the cruiser Pegasus by a German warship at Zanzibar.

The Hawke, a cruiser of 7,350 tons, under command of Capt. Hugh Williams, was sunk in the North sea, the graveyard of six other victims of German torpedoes.

Bad aim on the part of the German gunner saved the Hawke's sister ship, the Theseus, for that vessel, too, was attacked, but she escaped.

Boers Rallying To Botha

Capt Town, South Africa.—As a result of Colonel Maritz' rebellion in the northwest of the Cape provinces, Gen. Louis Botha, premier of the Union of South Africa, and commander of the troops of the Union, is taking the field earlier than he originally intended to. General Botha is placing himself at the head of several strong Dutch companies, organized on the old burgher line, which are affiliated with regiments trained by the Union defense force.

Commandants, field cornets and burghers who served under General Botha in the South African war are rallying to his call, irrespective of their political feeling, to fight alongside the English in defense of the empire against which they were in arms twelve years ago. This fact has had a marked effect on waverers, who are now flocking to General Botha's standard.

Germans Repulsed at Warsaw

Paris.—A Havas agency dispatch from Petrograd says that word is received there from Warsaw that the population of the city is returning and the banks are resuming business. A battle is being fought about thirty miles from Warsaw.

Servian Princes Are Wounded

London.—The Vossische Zeitung of Berlin reports that Crown Prince Alexander of Servia has been slightly wounded and that his brother, Prince George of Servia, has been mortally hurt in the fighting against Austrians.

Russian Prince Killed

Petrograd.—Prince Oleg, son of Grand Duke Constantine, died of the wounds received in action. An official dispatch from Petrograd said Prince Oleg had been wounded during a cavalry engagement at the front.

Argentine Consul Killed

London.—The Central News correspondent at Amsterdam reports that the Argentine consul at Antwerp, Mr. Lonquin, was killed during the bombardment. Shrapnel shell struck the roof of the consulate.

NEWS and GOSSIP of WASHINGTON

Why Uncle Sam Is Building a New Noah's Ark

WASHINGTON.—Uncle Sam is building a real Noah's Ark in the city of Washington. True, it is never expected to make a voyage, but it will be located on the banks of the Potomac, not far from the water, so that with a little structural modification it might be set afloat in case of necessity.

The ark will be 90 feet long and 35 feet wide—or "beam"—as navigators would say. It will be of two stories, or decks, and built expressly for the accommodation of animals, which will include monkeys, dogs, cats, mice, rats, rabbits, guineapigs, horses, chickens, calves and goats.

The affair will be in some respects very superior to Noah's celebrated craft, inasmuch as the plans require that it shall be ratproof, verminproof, fireproof and excellently ventilated and lighted. In short, it is to be as sanitary a structure as possible, in order that the animals may be kept healthy and comfortable.

This government ark is designed for scientific purposes. It is to be built in obedience to an act of congress which became law August 13, 1912, and which requires the public health service to "investigate the diseases of man." The contract for its construction has been let for $20,852.

If the ark were called a sanitarium for beasts and birds, such a term would not be much amiss, inasmuch as the inmates are to be subjected therein to hospital treatment.

There is to be no vivisection on board the ark—no operations of experimental surgery. The patients will be treated as kindly and carefully as if they were human. But only in some instances will they suffer from diseases. In other cases (as with many guineapigs and rabbits) they will be used merely for testing the potency and purity of antitoxins and vaccines sold in interstate traffic.

Here Is a Jolt for the Old-Fashioned Farmer

THE old-fashioned farmer who governed his planting by the movements of the moon will receive a jolt from a bulletin just issued by the department of agriculture declaring that neither the moon nor the planets have the slightest effect on weather conditions, and, therefore, cannot have any effect on planting. "Plant your corn in the full of the moon"—a rule regarded as little short of sacred in many rural communities, is entirely disproved, according to the department's bulletin.

"All weather changes depend on temperature differences," the bulletin says. "The temperature, as we know, constitutes of itself a most important weather factor. Another and equally important weather factor is rainfall. But to obtain rain it is necessary first to evaporate water from the surface of the earth, and this, as everyone knows, requires heat.

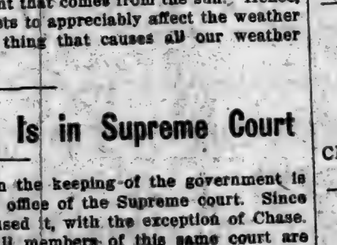
"Still another important weather factor is the direction and force of the wind, and this, too, requires heat, for the winds will not blow unless the temperature is different at one place from what it is at another any more than the air will draw up a chimney where there is no fire in it.

"Since, then, the heating of the earth and its atmosphere to different temperature is the real cause of the winds and of all weather changes, it follows that the moon and the planets can affect the weather only so far as they supply heat.

"The amount of heat sent to the earth by all the planets and by the moon is insignificant in comparison to the amount that comes from the sun. Hence, we could not expect the moon or the planets to appreciably affect the weather since they do not supply heat, the one thing that causes all our weather changes."

Government's Oldest Bible Is in Supreme Court

WHAT is known as the oldest Bible in the keeping of the government is the volume preserved in the clerk's office of the Supreme court. Since 1800 every chief justice who took oath used it, with the exception of Chase. All members of this same court are sworn in on it, as well as all lawyers who try cases before this august tribunal.



Daniel Webster, however, is said to be an exception to this rule, for when the time came for administering the oath to the great statesman, the clerk of that day, a Mr. Caldwell, was so much impressed by the fame of Webster and so anxious to hear him begin his speech, that he forgot the usual ceremony.

The book is a very small one, just five and a half inches long by three and a half inches wide. The binding is bright red morocco leather with the word "Bible" in tiny gold letters on the back, but this binding is preserved by the black leather covering, which has been fashioned to fit snugly and slipped over the original backs. So hard has been the wear of over a hundred years of use that 15 of these covers have been worn and discarded. Contrary to the belief of most people, the presidents do not take their oath on the Bible of the Supreme court. As a rule, they use one of their own, but as there is occasionally a time when the incoming executive forgets the needed volume, the clerk of the Supreme court always keeps a new Bible on hand. If this is used, it is immediately presented to the wife of the new president.

Forty Souls Were Lost for the Want of Straw

JUDGE W. A. WATSON, one of Virginia's new representatives, lives in a town called by the unique name of "Jeanlag's Ordinary." This odd title is derived from the fact that in colonial days it was customary to call a tavern or inn an "ordinary" when procuring a license for same, and the name of Jeanlag's Ordinary, or Jeanlag's Inn, has come down the years with its quaint old English sound.

Like other members from the Old Dominion, the Judge has a large constituency of colored people, and shows rather good stories of their peculiarities. Among the most popular institutions of this section of the country is the annual summer camp-meeting, at which religion and [illegible] are both [illegible].

What Would You Do?

There are many times when one man questions another's actions and motives. Men act differently under different circumstances. The question is, what would you do right now if you had a severe cold? Could you do better than to take Chamberlain's Cough Remedy? It is highly recommended by people who have used it for years and know its value. Mrs. O. E. Sargent, Peru, Ind., says, "Chamberlain's Cough Remedy is worth its weight in gold and I take pleasure in recommending it." For sale by all dealers.

WAGES

The American railways pay the highest wages in the world and of the lowest rates in the world, after having set down to capital account the lowest capitalization per mile of any of the great countries of the world.—James J. Hill.

The Government of the United States, and the Government of the several states, fixes the rates charged by railroads for service; fixes the earnings, and has indulged in much agitation of the minimum wage.

But neither the federal nor state government underwrites these earnings. The government takes steps to see that railroads shall not earn more than a certain amount, but it does not co-operate with the railroads to see that they do earn that amount.

Consequently, out of the small earnings, the railroads must pay, not only all fixed charges, but, in addition to other operating expenses, the very important item of wages.

Wages, while the highest of any country in the world, can not be increased. The income will not justify the outgo. We therefore have to secure the very best employes possible at the wages we can afford to pay.

The L. & N. calls attention to this fact in the hope that the people will realize one of the important handicaps under which we operate. Our employes are drilled in courtesy, trained in efficiency. We believe they are loyal to our interests, and as loyal employes endeavor to at all times give good service to the general public.

However, promotions are slow. Increases in wages are hard to secure. To the more ambitious the employment offers small inducement for continuous service. Therefore many changes are being constanly made in all departments. New men must be trained. This impairs the service, but the inconvenience suffered by the public is insignificant in comparison with [illegible] rangement in our organization.

We see many valued employes leave our service because our limited earnings prevent us from paying them salaries commensurate with their ability.

We trust, when you occasionally find cause for complaint, you will take these facts into consideration.

all this very nicely and was even manly enough to admit that these doctrines had all come from the Socialists, and were splendid. You see that the reason I quote these things is simply to remind the public that all the real meritorious principles that the "Moosers" advocate are those that they have stolen from Socialists, and parade it to the public as their own goods. They are like the stupid "Magpie;" they lay their eggs in somebody else's nest—or else they are wilfully trying to fool the folks.

Well there is only one more little feature to the Pletcher speaking worth mentioning, and that was some four or five grinners who were perched on front seats to snigger and grin when their man made a hit. But everybody felt sorry for them when Curry knocked all the grin off in his reply to the "soup house dope." Now we know we Socialists charge the soup house up to both old parties and it tickles us nearly to death when they get to flinging that old stale soup in each other's faces.

Well this is the last shot until election day. And no one can tell what the result will be, but let it go as it may, the fight is not over, as long as there is wrongs to right, as long as there are falsehood to fight, and if you Democrats did bring in the BOLL WEEVIL you had better look out, for we are coming after you.

So long,

NOTICE TO MANAGERS OF ELECTION

The law puts upon the Managers, Clerks and Returning Officers of election, the duty of taking care that the election is legally held and that none but qualified voters are allowed to vote. The undersigned desires that every qualified voter, regardless of party affiliation, be given every opportunity to cast his vote and that he receive much aid as the law provides shall be given him in the preparation of his ballot. But in no case shall any person be allowed to vote who is not qualified so to do so. The Managers, I feel sure will faithfully look after these matters. Any qualified voter has the right to challenge and unless the person who is challenged makes and signs the affidavit of qualification, he should not be permitted to vote, and the Managers have no right to accept his ballot. All such affidavits must be safely kept by the Managers so that they may be turned over to the Grand Jury if required to do so.

THOS. A. CURRY,
Chairman Chilton County
Campaign Committee.

FROM MR. SAWYER

Shelby, Ala., October 27, 1914.
Editor Clanton Press:—I wish to state through your columns that I have been physically unable to attend any of the joint discussions or do any canvassing otherwise for the past several days. I am sorry that it hasn't been my pleasure to meet all the voters of the county, however, I appeal to them again to give me a good support on November 3rd. And I again pledge myself to give the people a worthy representation for the trust they repose in me.

My campaign has been a clean one in every way. If I cannot get elected because of what I can accomplish for the good of the people of my county why, I do not want the office.

Yours truly,

L. B. SAWYER.

SAME OLD MOSES ON POLITICAL SITUATION

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 26, 1914
Editor Press:—Well, the Bull Moosers are making their death struggle, by using every dirty scheme possible to deceive the uneducated people and creating all the strife they can with the hope of electing their county ticket. Instead of trying to inform the people, they are trying to keep them blindfolded with prejudice; they know that the National administration is doing everything it can for the common people, and especially for the farmers. The cause of the present price of cotton is due to the war and speculation, and the leading calamity howlers know it, but they have no issue, consequently their only hope is to deceive the people by howling calamity under Democratic rule. As I stated in my former letter, I have made some of them acknowledge that this administration is doing everything it can for the farmers and still they say the Democratic party is responsible for the low price of cotton. So you see when you tree them they will jump out, and as they flee they will cry out calamity! calamity!

I saw a speech that ex-President Taft made in which he praised President's Wilson's administration, and he (Taft) said the nation was at Wilson's back. Why is that? There are two reasons: First, Taft is willing to give Wilson credit for what he is due. Second, Taft is not a candidate for office in Chilton nor does he have to vilify a party that is doing everything it can for the United States for the sake of a little county office.

Listen: If the Bull Moose leader, Roosevelt, had been elected President, we would have been in war today, for he tried to get Wilson to declare war against Mexico, and said he would go and lead the fight. That shows that if he had been President he would have declared war. So you calamity howlers had better thank your God that Teddy was defeated, for we are far better off than those people in Europe.

Now, a word to the young people of Chilton county: Don't follow off after a set of office-seekers that would have you to vote in a party that has no hope whatever of electing a single man on their ticket outside of Chilton county, and cause you to be disfranchised as to State and National politics. In other words, place you in a condition where you would have no voice in selecting the officers who govern this State and Nation just in order to elect some of them to a county office.

I notice the Bull Moose candidate for representative has some seed wheat advertised for sale at $1.50 per bushel, while the highest quotations on the market are $1.15 1-2. Now Mr. Thomas has the right to ask what he will for his wheat, but it does seem to me that if the Bull Moose crowd has the sympathy for the poor farmer that they would have them believe they had, that they would be willing to sell what they had to spare at the market price. I merely mention this to show that some people blow hot and cold out of the same mouth. But the people are mighty wise, mighty dear to them, when they mention office.

I notice that the New York Cotton Exchange is to open on Nov. 4 and 12 Federal reserve banks will begin business that day with and cotton is sure to go to 40 cents. The Bull Moose leaders, Mr. sake of a little county office.

WHAT HAVE THE PROGRESSIVES DONE?

Clanton, Ala., Oct. 24, 1914
Editor Press:—As offering rewards are all the go these days, I will offer one.

I will give $500.00 to the person that will tell me one thing the Progressive party has ever done for the good of this country. I am surprised to hear them presenting their claims on the merits of the Republican party, the very party two years ago they said they could help and would help defeat, and Woodrow Wilson would succeed President Taft in the White House. They did just what they said they would do. So if the democrats have ruined the country the Progressives are responsible for it.

Every man that voted the Progressive ticket two years ago got just what he voted for, and the leaders who boast of making their living by fooling the hill billies and yellow necks got some mighty fine clothes.

They say the Democrats have ruined this county. With three Progressives against one Democrat, when asked to explain, they say the Dems. always lay everything to the Probate Judge. Well, I know they didn't have sense enough to run a campaign without getting a pattern from the Dems, but I thought any old fool would know that pattern was wrong. Maybe they think the Commissioners can't do anything without getting a pattern from the Democrats is why they lay it all to the Dems.

Well, if the people are satisfied with the present prosperity, the way to keep it as it is now is to vote the Progressive ticket, for that is a near way to Democratic success the political inventors have found.

The Republicans have a State ticket, they are all good men, and I hope that all voters who are dissatisfied with our present prosperity will vote the Republican State ticket. We have no time to fool with new parties, but let us get together in a true and tried party. Together we stand, divided we fall. That is why the Progressive leaders refused to fuse with the Republicans in this State, it would have stopped the division and the bosses pay would have stopped.

A. G. T. L. NEWS MONTEVALLO

Miss Frances Y. Smith, former general Secretary of the Montevallo Y. W. C. A., and now one of the general secretaries of the Southern States, spent the week end here and made two strong talks to the students.

The Y. W. C. A. is one of the largest and most helpful organizations in this Institute. On the membership roll there are 350 members, about 200 of whom are pursuing voluntary courses of Bible study. Two public meetings are held each week. Last Sunday evening a special song service was held and on Wednesday evening Miss Virginia Wilson gave a very interesting account of Y. W. C. A. work in Paris, where she spent her vacation studying French.

The new souvenir postal card pictures of the front gate to the campus are growing very popular. This gate is a gift to the college by the senior class of 1914.

Professor L. N. Duncan, of Auburn, spent last Friday here conferring with President Palmer and the Faculty about the Extension work in Home Economics that is being conducted jointly by Auburn and Montevallo. Miss Tappan, head of the Extension work, left in the afternoon with Prof. Duncan for Chilton county to begin some demonstrations in that county. Chilton county is one of the first counties in this state to begin organizing for progressive movements in corn clubs, tomato canning, school improvement and other helpful enterprises that are accomplishing so much for the general good. Other counties will do well to look to Chilton.

Hon. Thomas A. Curry, of Clanton, made a short visit to his daughter, Miss Mary Annie Curry, who is one of the most popular students in college.

Mrs. Bailey, Misses Born, Lee and Leeper motored to Birmingham on Monday. This is the most popular as well as the cheapest way of going to the magic city since the completion of the State highway.

The following young ladies from Chilton county are in attendance this year: Misses Izora Callen, Mary Annie Curry, and Ruby Gore of Clanton; Alvys Nix and Myrtle Reynolds, of Jemison; Etha Nix, of Maplesville; Cordelia Scott and Mary Oliver, of Verbena; Nettie Weaver, of Stanton.

A GOOD MOVE

The K. C. Directory Company have commenced numbering all buildings, preparatory to Free Delivery. The cost of the number is 25c for each house.

The system used is 100 numbers for each block, so that all expansion is allowed for. All vacant lots have numbers allotted them so that if buildings are ever erected the proper number can be given.

This is a good move and every house in town should be numbered at this time. Be ready when representatives call, as all orders are taken at the house, and collections made there. In order to get free delivery, the houses must be numbered systematically, so that question is settled.

MAPLESVILLE.

Last Thursday night, October 22nd, Hon. Thomas A. Curry and Judge L. H. Reynolds discussed the political issues of the day here. The audience was Democratic by a large majority.

Judge Reynolds made his usual speech, blaming the Democrats with all the ills of the country in general, and attempted to show how the Bull Moosers could make the country blossom as a rose. However, Senator Curry's store of information on what the Democratic party did for our great American republic for forty years, and on the war between the states and what the present able administration has already accomplished, and is coming with the situation. Then again his references to the Lily White party, etc., sank deep [illegible]

FORMER CHILTONIAN WRITES FROM FLORIDA

Lakeland, Fla., Oct. 24, 1914.
Editor Clanton Press:—Believing you would be interested in hearing from a subscriber and one time citizen of Alabama, I am sending to you this letter.

This Lakeland in which we live, and am in business, is a most modern and progressive city, with most excellent banking houses—three of them, and mercantile houses that are creditable, commodious and increasing in numbers, and trade, both wholesale and retail. There are cigar factories, woodworking plants, ice factory, steam laundries, power plants, splendid hotels, and five lines of railroads center here. The A. C. L. Railway maintain shops here also. Most of their operatives and train crews live here, own their own homes, and the largest wholesale horse and mule market in the state is here and owned and operated by the Wilson Bros. of Montgomery. There are very many Alabamians living here and in south Florida, and they are prospering. We have bought a couple of houses and lots here, and like Lakeland and the country immensely.

The industries here are citrus fruit, strawberry and truck farming and corn and sugar cane growing, sweet potatoes, etc. The latter produce 200 to 500 bushels to the acre and sell for $1.00 to $1.60 a bushel. The phosphate mines with electric power plants and lighting system costing $250,000 to $1,000,000 are all near this city, and their boss sirens and continuous dynamite blastings "wake up the natives" and everybody else. Their output brings many millions of dollars annually into the state. Both cattle, horses, hogs, and dogs are grown here—the first in bands of thousands, and they all thrive. Many carloads of fat cattle are now being shipped to Chicago and Kansas City.

The naval stores and saw mills on most extensive scales, are all conducted nearby. Watermelons, cucumbers and other garden truck is on the market now. The crop of annual winter tourist and Yankees hunting for climate, health and investments will soon be in and ripe.

There are twelve lakes in and around the town, and good trout, bass, speckled perch and bream fishing in all of them. Deer, wild turkeys, quail, ducks, squirrels, etc. are abundant, and will be all ripe, fat and ready to eat on the 20th of November. The County Fair will be held here in the winter, with everything grown in fruits and vegetables, etc., and in live stock exhibited and then will be a good time to be here and see what is being done in this good land, and to see the splendid and most cosmopolitan citizenry.

There are orange groves up to 100 acres in size up to the very city's limits. Three big fruit packing houses in the city proper and in every land are grape fruit and orange and lemon trees.

The cotton question does not bother, it is not gloomy, business is good.

My wife and baby are fat and fine and we are, delighted with the town, the people and the climate, and country. There are three theaters and the finest auditorium in the entire south. Bue do you come and see it all. There are two splendid high and grammar schools with 1480 in attendance, besides many private and kindergartens. There are six garages and almost everybody owns auto cars; there are magnificent cook and clay roads to the Atlantic and Gulf, and nearby lakes and cities, and the National Highway from New York to Tampa, via

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

CHAPTER XXV—Continued.

"Who is that man?" asked Gracia, as she reined in at his side. "Do you know him?"

"Sure do!" responded Hooker jovially. "He's the best friend I got in Mexico!

"Kai, Amigo!!" he hailed, as the Yaqui came quartering down the hill, and, apparently oblivious of the oncoming pursuers, he rode out of the trail to meet him. They shook hands and Amigo flashed his familiar smile, glancing shyly over the horse's back at the daughter of the Aragons.

"I knew the horse," he explained, with a gentle caress for Copper Bottom. "My people—up there—kill Mexicans! Where you go?"

"North—to the line," answered Bud, pointing up the pass.

"Muy malo!" frowned the Yaqui, glancing once more at the woman behind. "Muchos revoltosos!"

"Where?" asked Bud.

"Everywhere!" replied Amigo with a comprehensive wave of the hand. "But no matter," he added simply. "I will go with you. Who are these horsemen behind?"

"Rurales!" responded Hooker, and the Yaqui's black eyes dilated.

"Yes," nodded Bud as he read the swift question in their glance. "He is there, too—Del Rey!"

"Que bueno!" exclaimed the Indian, fixing his eagle glance upon the riders. He showed his white teeth in a smile. In an instant he saw his opportunity, he saw his enemy riding into a trap, and turned his face to the pass.

What Amigo had waited for, the opportunity he had watched for, was at hand. Del Rey should pay the price of that scar the Yaqui carried. Not again would the bullet go astray, and his people should have one less Mexican to fight after that day. The hatred of generations lay behind the thoughts of the Indian. He cared nothing for the grievance of the girl, and he would not kill Del Rey for that, but for his own reasons.

"Come!" he said, laying hold of a latigo strap, and as Hooker loped on up the steady incline he ran along at his stirrup. In his right hand he still carried the heavy Mauser, but his sandaled feet bore him forward with tireless strides and only the heaving of his mighty chest told the story of the pace.

"Let me take your gun," suggested Hooker, as they set off on their race, but Amigo in his warrior's pride only shook his head and motioned him on and on. So at last they gained the rugged summit, where the granite ribs of the mountain crop up through the sands of the wash and the valley slopes away to the north. To the south was Del Rey, still riding after them, but Amigo beckoned Bud beyond the reef and looked out to the north.

"Revoltosos!" he exclaimed, pointing a sun-blackened hand at a distant ridge. "Revoltosos!" he said again, waving his hand to the east. "Here," waving toward the west, "no!"

"Do you know that country?" inquired Hooker, nodding at the great plain with its chains of parallel Sierras, but the Indian shook his head.

"No," he said; "but the best way is straight for that pass."

He pointed at a distant wedge cut down between the blue of two ridges, and scanned the eastern hills intently.

"Men!" he cried, suddenly indicating the sky-line of the topmost ridge. "I think they are revoltosos," he added gravely. "They will soon cross your trail."

"No difference," answered Bud with a smile. "I am not afraid—not with you here, Amigo."

"No, but the woman!" suggested Amigo, who read no jest in his words. "It is better that you should ride on—and leave me here."

He smiled encouragingly, but a wild light was creeping into his eyes and Hooker knew what he meant. He desired to be left alone, to deal with Del Rey after the sure manner of the Yaquis. And yet, why not? Hooker gazed thoughtfully at the oncoming rurales and walked swiftly back to Gracia.

"This Indian is a friend of mine," he said, "and I can trust him. He says it will be better for us to ride on—and he will take care of the rurales."

"Take care?" questioned Gracia, turning pale at a peculiar matter-of-fact tone in his voice.

"Sure," said Hooker. "He says there are revoltosos ahead. It will be better for you, he says, to ride on."

"Madre Di Dios!" breathed Gracia, clutching at her saddle; and then she nodded her head weakly.

"You better get down for a minute," suggested Hooker, helping her quickly to the ground. "Here, drink some water—you're kinder faint. I'll be right back—just want to say good-by."

He strode over to where Amigo had posted himself behind a rock and laid a hand on his arm.

"Adios, Amigo!" he said, but the Yaqui only glanced at him strangely.

"Anything in my camp, you're welcome to it," added Hooker, but Amigo did not respond. His black eyes, fascinating as a snake's, were fixed intently before him, where Del Rey came galloping in the lead.

"You go now!" he said, speaking with an effort, and Hooker understood. There was no love, no hate left in that mighty carcass—he was all warrior, all Yaqui, and he wanted Del Rey to himself.

"We'll be going," Hooker said to Gracia, returning swiftly, and his subdued tones made her start. She felt, as one feels at a funeral, the hovering wings of death, yet she vaulted into her saddle and left her thoughts unsaid.

They rode on down the valley, spurring yet holding back, and then with a roar that made them jump the heavy Mauser spoke out—one shot! And no more. There was a hush, a long wait, and Amigo rose slowly from behind his rock.

The Heavy Mauser Spoke Out—One Shot!

"God!" exclaimed Hooker, as he caught the pose, and his voice sounded a requiem for Manuel del Rey.

Then, as Gracia crossed herself and fell to sobbing, he leaned forward in his saddle and they galloped away.

CHAPTER XXVI.

Though men may make a jest of it in books, it is a solemn thing to kill a man, even to be near when one is killed. If Gracia had slain Del Rey herself in a passion her hot blood might have buoyed her up, but now her whole nature was convulsed with the horror of it and she wilted like a flower.

An hour before she had burned with hatred of him, she had wished him dead and sought the man who would kill him. Now that his life had been snipped off between two heart-beats she remembered him with pity and muttered a prayer for his soul. For Hooker, for De Lancey she had no thought, but only for the dashing young captain who had followed her to his death.

Of this Bud had no knowledge. He realized only that she was growing weaker, and that he must call a halt, and at last, when the walls of their pass had widened and they rode out into the open plain, he turned aside from the trail and drew rein by a clump of mesquit.

"Here, let me take you," he said, as she swayed uncertainly in the saddle. She slid down into his arms and he laid her gently in the shade.

"Poor girl," he muttered, "it's been too much for you. I'll get some water, and pretty soon you can eat."

He unslung the canteen from his saddle-flap, gave her a drink, and left her to herself, glancing swiftly along the horizon as he tied out their mounts to graze. But for her faintness he would have pushed on farther, for he had seen men off to the east; but hunger and excitement had told upon her even more than the day-and-night ride.

For a woman, and sitting a side-saddle, she had done better than he had hoped; and yet—well, it was a long way to the border and he doubted if she could make it. She lay still in the shade of the mesquit, just as he had placed her, and when he brought the sack of food she did not raise her head.

"Better eat something," he suggested, spreading out some bread and dried beef. "Here's some bytaches I got from Don Juan—I'll bet you'll thank me for them."

Gracia shuddered, sighing wearily. Then, as the words had hurt her, she covered her face and wept.

"What did you tell that man?" she asked at last.

"Why—what man?" inquired Hooker, astonished. "Don't you speak to me?"

"No!" she cried, gazing out at him through her tears, "not until I know what you said. Did you tell that Indian to—to kill him?"

"Why, no!" he protested. "Sure not! What made you think that?"

"Why—you rode over and spoke to him—and he looked at me—and then—he—killed!"

She gave way to a paroxysm of grief at this, and Bud looked around him, wondering. That she was weak and hungry he knew, but what was this she was saying?

"I reckon I don't understand what you're driving at," he said at last. "Wish you'd eat something—you'll feel better."

"No, I won't eat!" she declared, sitting up and frowning. "Mr. Hooker," she went on very miserably, "what did you mean this morning when you—laughed! I said I hated poor Manuel—and you said—well, what you did—and you laughed! Did you think—oh, you couldn't have—that I really wanted him killed?"

"Why, sure not!" cried Hooker heartily. "I knowed you was fooling! Didn't I laugh at you? Say, what kind of a feller do you think I am, anyway? D'ye think I'd get an Indian to do my killing?"

"Oh, then didn't you?" she cried, suddenly brightening up. "You know, you talk so rough sometimes—and I never do know what you mean! You said you guessed you'd have to kill him for me, you know, and—oh, it was too awful! I must be getting foolish, I'm so tired out, but—what did you tell that Indian?"

Bud glanced at her sharply for a moment and then decided to humor her. Perhaps, if he could get her quieted, she would stop talking and begin to eat.

"He asked me who was after us," he said, "and I told him it was Del Rey."

"Yes, and what did he say then?"

"He didn't say nothing—jest lined out for the pass."

"And didn't you say you wanted—him—killed?"

"No!" burst out Bud, half angrily. "Haven't I told you once? I did not! That Indian had reasons of his own, believe me—he's got a scar along his ribs where Del Rey shot him with a six-shooter! And, furthermore," he added, as her face cleared at this explanation of the mystery, "you'd better try to take me at my word for the rest of this trip! Looks to me like you've been associating with these Mexicans too much!"

"Why, what do you mean?" she demanded curtly.

"I mean this," answered Hooker, "being as we're on the subject again. Ever since I've knowed you you've been talking about brave men and all that; and more'n once you've hinted that I wasn't brave because I wouldn't fight.

"I'd just like to tell you, to put your mind at rest, that my father was a sergeant in the Texas rangers and no hundred Mexicans was ever able to make him crawl. He served for ten years on the Texas border and never turned his back to no man—let alone a Mex. I was brought up by him to be peaceable and quiet, but don't you never think, because I run away from Manuel del Rey, that I was afraid to face him."

He paused and regarded her intently, and her eyes fell before his.

"You must excuse me," she said, looking wistfully away, "I did not—I did not understand. And so the poor Yaqui was only avenging an injury?" she went on, reaching out one slender hand toward the food. "Ah, I can understand it now—he looked so savage and fierce. But"—she paused again, set back by a sudden thought—"didn't you know he would kill him?"

"Yes, ma'am," answered Hooker quietly, "I did."

"Then—then why didn't you—"

"That was between them two," he replied doggedly. "Del Rey shot him once when he was wounded and left him for dead. He must have killed some of his people, too; his wife, mebbe, for all I know. He never would talk about it, but he come back to get his revenge. I don't shoot no man from cover myself, but that ain't it—it was between them two."

"And you?" she suggested. "If you had fought Del Rey?"

"I would have met him in the open," said Hooker.

"And yet—"

"I didn't want to," he ended bluntly. "Didn't want to fight him and didn't want to kill him. Had no call to. And then—well, there was you."

"Ah!" she breathed, and a flush mounted her pale cheeks. She smiled as she reached out once more for the food and Hooker resolved to do his best at gallantry, it seemed to make her so happy.

"So you were thinking of me," she challenged sweetly, "all the while?" I thought perhaps I was a nuisance and in the way. I thought perhaps you did not like me because—well, because I'm a Mex, as you say."

"No, ma'am," denied Hooker gazing upon her admiringly. "Nothing like that! When I say Mex I mean these low, pelado Mexicans—Don Juan tells me you're pure-Spanish."

"With perhaps a little Yaqui," she suggested shyly.

"Well, maybe he did say that, too," confessed Bud. "But it's just as good as Spanish—they say all the big men in Sonora have got some Yaqui blood—Morral, that was vice-president; the Torres brothers, governors—"

"And Alvarez!" she added playfully. "I'll bet you're just as proud of your Yaqui blood as you can be, you Americans!" Bud could not deny, remembering Don Juan de Aragon.

"Why, you're pitching on me now," he said. "Say, I'm not going to eat any more of that grub unless you do. Here, have a bite of this bread."

"Oh, now you commence jealous," she pouted. "If I were only a Yaqui—and big and black—"

"Never mind," defended Bud. "He was a true friend, all right, and true friends, believe me, are scarce."

There was a shade of bitterness in his voice that did not escape her, and she was careful not to allude to Phil. His name, like the name of her father, always drove this shy man to silence, and she wanted to make him talk.

"Then you ought to be friends with me," she chided, after a silence. "I have always wanted to be your friend—why will you never allow it? No, but really! Haven't I always shown it? I remember now the first time that I saw you—I was looking through my hole among the passion-flowers and you saw me with your keen eyes. Phil did not—but he was there. And you just looked at me once—and looked away. Why did you never respond when I came there to look for you? You would just ride by and look at me once, and even Phil never knew."

"No," agreed Bud, smiling quietly. "He was crazy to see you, but he rode right by, looking at the windows and such."

"The first time I met him," mused Gracia, "I asked about you. Did he ever tell you?"

Bud hung his head and grinned sheepishly. It was not difficult to make out a case against him.

And so Gracia had not wanted Del Rey killed as he thought she did. She was not the vicious woman he had thought her for a time. She was just the gentle, noble girl he had sworn to protect and conduct across the border to her fiance. Again came the desire to claim her, but there was not only Phil to be thought of but the fitness of himself to be the mate of this woman.

"Is it something I have done?" she asked at last. "Is that why you never liked me? Now, Mr. Hooker, please speak to me! And why do you always sit so far away—are you afraid of me? But look."—she moved closer to him "here we are alone, and I am not afraid of you!"

"Of course not," answered Bud, looking across at her boldly. "Why should you be—you ain't afraid of nothing!"

"Is that a compliment?" she demanded eagerly. "Oh, then I'm so happy—it's the first you ever paid me! But have I been brave," she beamed, "so far? Have I been brave, like a man?"

"Sure have!" remarked Hooker impersonally, "but we ain't there yet. Only thing I don't like about you is you don't eat enough. Say, don't pick up them crumbs—let me pare off some more of this jerked beef for you. Can't nobody be brave when they're hungry, you know, and I want to bring you in safe."

"Why?" she inquired, as she accepted the handful of meat. "Is it on Phil's account?" she ventured, as he sat gazing stoically at the horses. "You were such friends, weren't you?" she went on innocently. "Oh, that is why I admire the Americans so much—they are so true to each other!"

"Yes," observed Hooker, rolling his eyes on her, "we're fine that way!"

"Well, I mean it!" she insisted, as she read the irony in his glance.

"Sure! So do I!" answered Hooker, and Gracia continued her meal in silence.

"My!" she said at last; "this meat is good! Tell me, how did you happen to have it on your saddle? We left so suddenly, you know!"

She gazed up at him demurely, curious to see how he would evade this evidence that he had prepared in advance for their ride. But once more, as he had always done, Hooker eluded the cunningly laid snare.

"I was figuring on pulling out myself," he replied ingenuously.

"What? And not take me?" she cried. "Oh, I thought—but dear me, what is the use?"

She sighed and dropped her head wearily.

"I am so tired!" she murmured despondently; "shall we be going on soon?"

"Not unless [illegible] jumps up [illegible] her smile as honestly, "don't you worry none about me—I like you fine."

He slipped away at this, grinning to himself, and sat down to watch the plain. All about him lay the waving grass land, tracked up by the hoofs of cattle that had vanished in the track of war. In the distance he could see the line of a fence and the ruins of a house. The trail which he had followed led on and on to the north. But all the landscape was vacant, except for his grazing horses. Above the mountains the midday thunder-caps were beginning to form; the air was very soft and warm, and— He woke up suddenly to find his head on his knees.

"Ump-um-m," he muttered, rising up and shaking himself resolutely, "this won't do—that sun is making me sleepy."

He paced back and forth, smoking fiercely at brown-paper cigarettes, and still the sleep came back. The thunder-clouds over the mountains rose higher and turned to black; they let down skirts and fringes and sudden stabs of lightning, while the wind sucked in from the south. And then, with a slash of rain, the shower was upon them.

At the first big drops Gracia stirred uneasily in her sleep. She started up as the storm burst over them; then, as Bud picked up the saddle-blankets and spread them over her, she drew him down beside her and they sat out the storm together. But it was more to them than a sharing of cover, a patient enduring of the elements, and the sweep of wind and rain. When they rose up there was a bond between them and they thrust and parried no more.

They were friends, there in the rush of falling water and the crash of lightning overhead. When the storm was over and the sun came out they smiled at each other contentedly without fear of what such smiles may mean.

CHAPTER XXVII.

As the sun, after a passing storm, comes forth all the more gloriously, so the joy of their new-found friendship changed the world for Bud and Gracia. The rainbow that glowed against the retreating clouds held forth more than a promise of sunshine for them, and they conversed only of pleasant things as they rode on up the trail.

The dangers that still lay between them and the border seemed very remote now, and neither gave them a thought. There was no one in all the wide world but just these two, this man and woman who had found themselves.

Twenty miles ahead lay the northern pass, and from there it was ten more to Gadsden, but they spoke neither of the pass nor of Gadsden nor of who would be awaiting them there. Their talk was like that of children, inconsequential and happy. They told of the times when they had seen each other, and what they had thought; of the days of their childhood, before they had met at Fortuna; of hopes and fears and thwarted ambitions and all the young dreams of life.

Bud told of his battle-scarred father and their ranch in Arizona; of his mother and horse-breaking brothers, and his wanderings through the West; Gracia of her mother, with nothing of her father, and how she had flirted in order to be sent to school where she could gaze upon the upstanding Americans. Only Bud thought of the trail and scanned the horizon for rebels, but he seemed more to seek her eyes than to watch for enemies and death.

They rode on until the sun sank low and strange tracks struck their trail from the east. Bud observed that the horses were shod, and more tracks of mounted men came in beyond. He turned sharply toward the west and followed a rocky ledge to the hills, without leaving a hoof-print to mark the way of their retreat.

Those hoof prints brought Bud back from the land of dreams in which he had been wandering to a realization of the dangers that lurked about them. But a little way ahead was the pass they must cross, and he suddenly realized that they could not safely do so in the broad light of day. He must not take such chances of losing his new found happiness.

Says Moon Is Oval Shaped.

Astronomers will await with interest details of the "experiment" carried out by Professor Stiattesi at Bologna by which he claims to have demonstrated that the moon is oval shaped.

The moon is more easily measured than any other heavenly body, but though it has been measured thousands of times no difference has been detected between its polar and equatorial diameters. A clergyman recently put forward the theory that the side of the moon always turned away from the earth is of the same size and shape as the great pyramid which, according to Revelations, forms the "New Jerusalem." Eventually, so asserts the author of the theory, the moon will fall on the earth, and the hemisphere turned earthward will bury itself in our planet, while the pyramidal New Jerusalem will project above the rock and ruin of the elements as the Celestial City, where the faithful are to spend eternity.

This remarkable lunar theory has been published with a preface by the bishop of Exeter.

HINTS FOR PRESERVE CLOSET

Pickled Peaches Should by All Means Be Among the Condiments Served —Brandied Cherries.

Pickled peaches are a dinner condiment of unparalleled excellence. Many people prefer pickled fruit to the sweeter jellies and preserves and the good housekeeper always puts up pickled dainties as well as preserves, jellies and jams for her well-stocked winter fruit closet.

Here is a tried and true recipe for pickled peaches: To seven pounds of selected peaches allow half as many pounds of granulated sugar, one quart of vinegar, two ounces each of stick cinnamon and cloves. Dissolve the sugar in the hot vinegar, add the spices and boil for six minutes; add the peaches and boil slowly until the peaches have become soft enough to be pierced easily by a fork. Turn out the fruit and boil the sirup down to one-half. Now put in the peaches again and let the whole just come to a boil. Pour into a deep crock and cover when cold.

A Virginian housekeeper recommends this recipe for brandied cherries: Cover large, oxheart cherries which have been stoned with some excellent brandy and let stand for 48 hours. Add to the mixture sugar in a proportion of pound for pound. Do not cook, but seal in glass jars and set away in a cool, dry place. These cherries are delicious for garnishing whipped cream and frozen desserts. They may also be served in home-mixed cocktails.

AN OYSTER STEW RECIPE

Expert Recommends This as an Unusually Appetizing Way of Serving the Bivalves.

Fannie Merritt Farmer, cookery editor of the Woman's Home Companion, presents a number of "Recipes for October" in that publication. Among them is her recipe for Boston oyster stew, which follows:

"Put one quart of oysters in a colander and pour over three-fourths cupful of cold water. Carefully pick over oysters, remove tough muscles from half of them, and slightly chop remaining half with removed tough muscles. Add chopped oysters to water drained through colander, heat to the boiling point, and let simmer three minutes. Strain through a double thickness of cheesecloth, add reserved soft part of oyster, and cook until oysters are plump. Remove oysters with a skimmer and put in a tureen with one-fourth cupful of butter, one-half tablespoonful of salt, and one-eighth teaspoonful of pepper. Add oyster liquor, strained a second time, and one quart of scalded milk. Always remember to scald milk in a double boiler, which overcomes the danger of scorching. Serve with oyster crackers."

Sponge Cake, Orange Filling.

Mix well together three egg yolks, three-fourths of a cupful of sugar, the grated rind of one lemon, one cupful of sifted flour and one teaspoonful of baking powder. When well beaten together add a little salt and the whites of the three eggs beaten stiff. Bake for 15 minutes in Washington pie tins. For the filling beat together the juice of one orange, with a little of the grated rind, one egg, one cupful of sugar and two tablespoonfuls of warmed butter, and cook in a double boiler until it thickens. Spread between the layers of cake.

More Uses for Salt.

A pinch of salt thrown on eggs will make them beat lightly in about half the time usually required. When broiling steak over a coal fire sprinkle a little salt on the burning coals and the flame will not blaze up and scorch the steak. If you are broiling meat in a gas oven and it catches fire, quickly turn the gas off and throw a handful of salt on the blazing meat. You do not need to use any water. The salt will put out the fire and you can then scrape off the salt from the meat.

Beanpot Roast.

One and one-half pounds of clear stew meat, cut into two-inch bits. Put into beanpot and cover. Set in oven two hours and bake slowly. Do not add anything but one-half teaspoonful salt. It will be rich, with lots of nice gravy, if cooked slowly. Nice served with potatoes and hot slaw. Sometimes when nearly done take out of the oven and put into a good-sized shallow dish, put a thick layer of mashed potatoes on evenly all over. Set back in oven to brown slowly.

Boston Brown Hash.

Chop any remains of steaks, roasts or stews very fine. Grease a deep pie dish. Put a layer of mashed potatoes (old ones, left over, will answer) in the bottom of the dish, then a layer of meat, then a layer of stale bread crumbs; sprinkle with salt and pepper, a few bits of butter; moisten with a half cupful of beef gravy, then put another layer of potatoes. Dip a knife into milk and smooth the top. Bake in a moderate oven until brown. Serve hot.

Southern Style.

Peel and boil half dozen onions 10 minutes; drain and slice thin. Now have two pounds of veal sliced nice and thin. Lay veal in saucepan, season with little salt and pepper. Cover the veal with the onions. Chop (or small pieces of butter rolled in flour. Season with powdered nutmeg and grated rind of lemon; let simmer slowly.

DANDRUFF AND FALLING HAIR

P. O. Box 3, Wausau, W. Va.—"I was troubled with dandruff, falling hair and itching scalp for two or three years. It was so bad at times my coat-collar would be covered so I was ashamed to go in company. It itched so my head was irritated and pimples would come on my scalp. My hair came out badly, it became thin and dry, so dry that it seemed as though there was no life in it.

MODERN WAR IS MERCIFUL

Under Existing Conditions the Wounded Are Given a Fair Chance to Recover to Health.

A general impression is that with powerful weapons of great precision greater loss of life and greater pain are caused. The view is almost certainly inaccurate. The modern bullet, says the Scotsman, unless it is of the soft-nosed type, is on the whole merciful, and either kills outright or gives its victim a fair chance of recovery. It does not, as a rule, mutilate.

The ambulance corps was practically unknown 60 years ago, and not only is aid brought more rapidly to the wounded, but it is far more effective than in the pre-Lister days. Rapidity of conveyance has increased beyond all comparison. In the present war it is true to say that in many cases men have been lying in a British hospital within 24 hours of receiving their wounds. If the risk of being hit is greater, the chances of recovery from injury have been immensely increased.

A TREATMENT THAT HEALS ITCHING, BURNING SKINS

Don't stand that itching skin humor one day longer. Go to the nearest druggist and get a jar of resinol ointment (50c) and a cake of resinol soap (25c). Bathe the eczema patches with resinol soap and hot water, dry and apply a little resinol ointment.

It's almost too good to be true. The torturing, itching and burning stop instantly, you no longer have to dig and scratch, sleep becomes possible, and healing begins. Soon the ugly, torturing eruptions disappear completely and for good.—Adv.

A Modern Disease.

Old Jake woke up and rubbed his eyes as he gazed on the unfamiliar room. Then he remembered, and hopped out of bed. Fifteen years had he saved out of the meager wages given him by a grateful farmer, in order to visit London.

"Uncle," came his young nephew's voice at the keyhole, "mother says'll you come and set these marrer seeds, and see what you can do with the old black 'en what's got a bad leg?"

Uncle and nephew soon entered the little back garden, when the old boy stopped short with amasement, and adjusted his glasses to gaze at the small figure on the grass plot, who was performing gymnastic feats.

"Does thy sister have fits, lad?" he asked, with concern.

"No, uncle," replied the nipper with a grin, "them's gymnastic feats."

"I'm sorry 'bout that," quoth the old chap. "As she 'ad 'em long?"—Answers.

Not Due to Ignorance.

Doctor Briggs received a note from a farmer living back quite a ways in the country, requesting him to come as quickly as possible to see his child who was very sick with "a very bad cold."

The doctor examined the child and then turned to the mother.

"Don't you know," he asked, "that your little girl is coming down with the measles?"

"Yes, doctor," was the woman's reply, "I knew she was."

"Then why in the world," asked the doctor, "did you write me that she had a very bad cold?"

The woman hesitated for a moment, then, looking at her husband, said, with sullen frankness:

"Neither him nor me knew how to spell 'measles.'"—National Monthly.

Expenses Cut Down.

We must admit that the cost of living is rather high," said the campaign adviser.

"Well," replied Senator Sorghum, "we must do something with the money. We can't buy votes with it any more."—Washington Star.

CALOMEL WHEN BILIOUS? NO! STOP! ACTS LIKE DYNAMITE ON LIVER

I Guarantee "Dodsons' Liver Tone" Will Give You the Best Liver and Bowel Cleansing You Ever Had—Doesn't Make You Sick!

Stop using calomel! It makes you sick. Don't lose a day's work. If you feel lazy, sluggish, bilious or constipated, listen to me!

Calomel is mercury or quicksilver which causes necrosis of the bones. Calomel, when it comes into contact with sour bile crashes into it, breaking it up. This is when you feel that awful nausea and cramping. If you feel "all knocked out," if your liver is torpid and bowels constipated or you have headache, dizziness, coated tongue, if breath is bad or stomach sour just try a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone.

Here's my guarantee—Go to any drug store or dealer and get a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone. Take a spoonful and if it doesn't straighten you right up and make you feel fine and vigorous I want you to go back to the store and get your money. Dodson's Liver Tone is destroying the sale of calomel because it is real liver medicine; entirely vegetable, therefore it cannot salivate or make you sick.

I guarantee that one spoonful of Dodson's Liver Tone will put your sluggish liver to work and clean your bowels of that sour bile and constipated waste which is clogging your system and making you feel miserable. I guarantee that a bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone will keep your entire family feeling fine for months. Give it to your children. It is harmless; doesn't gripe and they like its pleasant taste.

Dr. Pierce's Golden Medical Discovery

Perhaps this case may be similar to yours

J. Wesley Tilley of (Box 672.) Salem, Col., writes:

Gentlemen:—"It gives me much pleasure to be able to send you a testimonial, if by its reaching some sufferer your medicine will do as much for him as they have for me. At the age of fourteen I was troubled a great deal with malaria and biliousness, accompanied with the worst sort of large boils. I was persuaded by my parents, who have always been strong believers in Dr. Pierce's remedies, to try the Golden Medical Discovery. I took one bottle and the boils all disappeared, but I did not stop at one bottle, I took three and the malaria all left me and I have had no more boils to this day, thanks to the 'Golden Medical Discovery' for my relief.

"Following an operation for appendicitis two years ago I was troubled very much with constipation and I have found by a few doses of the 'Discovery' I can keep my bowels in perfect condition. This made me feel so thankful that I have recommended it to my friends. You may use this letter as you see fit, and I hope it may be the means of bringing your 'Golden Medical Discovery' to the notice of some sufferer."

for over forty years has been lending its aid to just such cases as this. In our possession we have thousands of testimonials of like character.

Perhaps you are skeptical, but isn't it worth at least a trial in view of such strong testimony? Isn't it reasonable to suppose that if it has done so much for others it can do as much for you?

Your druggist will supply you in liquid or tablet form, or you can send 50 one-cent stamps for a trial case. Address

Watch out for that old worn out "trick" Treasurer's report in this issue of Union-Banner, show a "busted" treasury.

Can boosters of the Bull Moosers point to a single act during their administration where the "common people" are more directly benefitted than thirty-five miles of graded road, which is now assured, and which has been or will soon be built by the present administration?

If the County Treasury is in the depleted condition that these political calamity howlers and office seekers would have you believe, why would so many men come here and endeavor to contract with the county for building roads?

"YOU CAN FOOL ALL OF THE PEOPLE, SOME OF THE TIME; YOU CAN FOOL SOME OF THE PEOPLE, ALL OF THE TIME; BUT YOU CAN NOT FOOL ALL THE PEOPLE ALL OF THE TIME."

It is peculiar how people will differ: One man will heartily endorse a thing and put his money, his labor and his time into it. His brother will condemn the same thing and spend his time, his labor and his money in running over the county telling people that "hit's ruination to the county."

Populism was weighed in the balance and found wanting; Republicanism was weighed and also found wanting, and on next Tuesday, of the Bull Moose Party, the people of Chilton county will write the gloomy words, "Mene, mene, tekel upharsin."

It may interesting and refreshing to know that a contract for the building of a portion of the Public Highway from Clanton to the Shelby county line was let by the Commissioners on last Monday to Mr. George Moore, a Democrat, and to Mr. W. A. Reynolds, a Bull-Moose.

Let every Democrat, regardless of whatever other engagement he may have on next Tuesday, go to the polls and vote and see to it that his neighbor does the same. We have made a splendid fight and have what but it's the votes that

That the outside business world considers Chilton's financial standing good, was evidenced by the number of contractors from Birmingham, Montgomery, Anniston and many other points, who were on hand Monday, the day set by the Commissioners Court to receive bids for the construction of the north link of the Highway, all eager to be awarded the contract.

Cotton is selling today, in Clanton, at 6 1-4 cents per pound, with Woodrow Wilson as President of the United States. On the same day in the year 1898, cotton was selling in Clanton at 4 1-2 cents per pound.

On the same day in the year 1899 cotton was selling in Clanton at 5 1-2 cents per pound. Who was President of the United States in 1898 1899?

And yet some people are sitting aroung whittling sticks, spitting tobacco juice and saying that Woodrow Wilson is the cause of the low price of cotton and what is worse still, some people claim not to have any better sense than to believe it.

Then too, one of the speakers who has appeared for the Progressive Party in the joint discussions in the county, sought to charge that the Democratic party was a party of the Bosses. In fact he tried to "raise Cain" about the "bosses" at Clanton, Maplesville, Verbena, Stanton, etc., but he conveniently forgot to tell folks about the time when he, together with the Hon. Charles Scott, who is the Campaign Manager for the Bull Mooses, organized a "Lily White" party in Alabama only a few years ago—a party which was to close its doors against the colored brother and deny him his presence at any of the Lily White meetings, etc. But when the orders from the "Heap Big Injun" at Washington, Mr. Roosevelt, was sent demanding the contrary, the "Abortive Lily White Party" went the way of the wicked and the colored brother was restored immediately to fellowship and all was again "Black and Tan."

The Commissioners met on Monday and let the contract for the building of the Public Highway from Clanton to the Chilton and Shelby line, and for all this "Let the people rejoice and be exceeding glad." There is a brighter day dawning upon Chilton county. It is only a question of a very short while until a splendid highway will reach every section of our county and the splendid crops which are being grown in our splendid county will find easy access to the markets and our people will be more prosperous and happy and life within our borders will indeed be worth while. The progressive and business-like manner in which our Probate Judge and Board of County Commissioners have administered the business of the county, has set a new pace in our public affairs, has marked a new era in our county advancement and won for themselves the highest encomiums of the general public. Their administration will go down in history as the wedge which cleaved asunder the aged and sterile idea of the sluggard and do-nothing, which has so long shackled and held us back in the great march of progress.

In another column will be found a Guide Ticket for Democratic voters to be voted on Tuesday and it would be well for the voter to cut this Guide Ticket out and fill it out as he desires to vote it. You can show it to your neighbor and he can prepare his ballot by it also. If you desire to vote the straight Democratic ticket, which is in the first column on the left on the official ballot, under the emblem of the Rooster, just make a cross (X) mark in the circle at the top of the column. If you desire to vote a "split" ticket, do not make the cross in the circle, but run down the ticket and of the person or persons for whom you desire to vote for and mark out the name of the person for the corresponding office on the other ticket. In other words make the X mark before the name of the person or persons for whom you wish to vote for and run your pencil through the name of the person you wish to vote against on the other ticket. Every voter who can not read or who cannot on account of age or other infirmity, make out his ticket, has the right to call any qualified voter whom he chooses to make out his ticket for him or aid in doing so. None but qualified voters can aid in the making out of a ticket.

Speaking of platforms, we wonder how many Progressive party voters had a voice in the making of their platform or know anything about when, where and by whom it was made? Judge Reynolds claims that he was in Birmingham where the said platform was made and that he was one of the distinguished gentlemen who got it up. How many Progressives in Chilton county knew that the Judge was there and what he was there for? Did the voters send him there and instruct him what planks to put in the platform? Did they authorize him to appropriate the private property of the Socialists and against their knowledge or consent, put their plank of the initiative, referendum and recall in the Progressive platform; did they authorize him to fit in a plank demanding Woman Suffrage? Did they authorize him to demand in that platform the Democratic Low Tariff plank? In fact did the people of the Progressive party in Chilton county know anything about what was going on? We are sure they did not. But the ex-Judge is great on platforms. He is really an expert on platforms as he has been before the people of the county for the last fifteen years on various and sundry platforms and it did not make any difference what sort of a platform it was—just so it was a platform. The ex-Judge can make a platform over night and come out the next morning with all four feet upon it and strange to say, can get a few of our careless and unthinking voters to get aboard with him. We know that the ex-Judge is, politically speaking, "without God and without hope in the world," but we cannot quit praying for the poor ignorant or prejudiced voter who follows him into the quick sand

DEMOCRATS, DO YOUR DUTY.

Before another issue of the Clanton Press, the general election of 1914, will have passed into history. The contest in Chilton will come to a close on Saturday night at Thorsby. Senator Curry, who has done the speaking for the Democrats, has conducted his campaign along high and dignified lines, yet with that degree of vigor and candor that gained for him the greatest respect and interest on the part of his hearers. While he has snatched the mask of deceit and falsehood from the face of the enemy, he has inflicted no wounds and left no scars. In the defense of the Democratic party in the Nation, State and County, he has struck "straight from the shoulder," giving no quarter and asking none. His was a campaign of education along political lines, and hundreds of voters who have been groping about in the darkness of misunderstanding and prejudice have resolved to cast their future lot with the Democratic party—the only party in the South that stands for the peace and prosperity of the people. We have the fight won. Let every Democrat, regardless of what his obligations are, go to the polls on Tuesday next and vote

Score One for Science.

Speaking of rats—and there was a rat-killing crusade a while ago all along the Atlantic coast, wasn't there?—one of the difficulties of civilization has been to find a rat-trap that the wise old rat could not in some way cheat. Of course, there are scores of rat-traps, most of them very efficient provided your rat can be lured into them. But some rats seem possessed of a sense, an instinct or a cunning that enables them to evade capture or death. Even some poisons fail to fool some rats. But over in Philadelphia a new trap has been invented which both fools the rat and kills it at the same time. It consists of an iron plate and a spike, both connected with electric wires. On the spike is a piece of cheese. The rat steps on the plate, reaches up and bites the cheese—and drops dead, having completed the circuit and so electrocuted itself. Score one for science.

College of Hard Knocks.

The student who graduates from the College of Hard Knocks, and then takes a post-graduate course at the Study-Lamp university, will compare very favorably with the graduates of any institution. Difficulties play an important part in our training, and it is not wise to hope for too much from one for whom things are made too easy. If the training which is the result of overcoming hard things is supplemented by home reading and study, the resulting product will hold his own, wherever you put him. The colleges and universities are worth while because they enable a young man to accomplish certain desirable results with the least waste of time or effort. But no one would go so far as to claim that they are in any sense indispensable.

Why Not?

Little Anna's father was a baseball enthusiast and had taken her to several games. One Sunday morning she went with him and her mother to the service in the Methodist church. Anna was not much interested in the sermon until the minister warmed up to his subject and the older men near the pulpit began to shout "Amen!" "Hallelujah!" etc. On the way home she looked up at her father and exclaimed: "Say, pop, who were the men up front rooting for the preacher?"—Lippincott's Magazine.

New Bird of Prey.

A Wirral gamekeeper a little while ago was feeding his hand-reared young wild ducks when an aviator, bound for Parkgate, passed over at no great height. Away went the flappers in all directions, quacking in terror, the younger and feebler ones scuttling to the hedges and those which could fly making for the river. When the aeroplane had passed and the field was quiet again some forty birds straggled back, but three days later there were still as many missing. The downy duckling, just out of the egg, dives or seeks shelter instinctively when the shadow of a large bird, a hawk or a heron, passes its pool, and no doubt these ducks thought that some gigantic and noisy bird of prey was swooping upon them. That gamekeeper does not like aeroplanes.—Manchester Guardian.

Jar Opener.

A hint to housewives: Old scissors make a very serviceable fruit jar opener. Anyone who has struggled with the obstinate top of a fruit jar will appreciate any little aid to the opening process, and here is one: Take an old pair of scissors and grind the broken ends concave, so as to fit the side of the jar top when the scissors are open. Then bore holes near the end of each ground prong. A stout piece of wire should then be inserted in the holes and fastened securely so that it will just reach around the jar top when the scissors are held open. Now, by pressing the shears together, the wire will take a death grip on the fruit-jar cover, so that it is easily removed. The device also comes in handily in the canning season, when the housewife wants to screw her tops down firmly.

Detects Listeners.

A motor-driven telltale device for party-line telephones has been patented, which will give conversing parties the location of any subscriber who may "listen in" while they are using the line.

The rising receiver hook at the interloping station starts a motor-driven signal wheel which gives the code of the station attempting to use the line. The motor cannot be stopped or the circuits interrupted until the signal is completed.

COUNTY FAIR OPENED TUESD

Exhibits The Best Ever

The Chilton County Fair opened its gates to the public on Tuesday morning. Beautiful weather has prevailed, but the attendance so far has not come up to to the expectation of the management, but it to be hoped the citizens will rally to the support of this worthy enterprise, and the crowds will greatly increase for the remaining days.

The exhibits in all departments—Agricultural, Live Stock, Canary, and Ladies' department—the largest and most complete in the history of the Fair Association.

The Ladies' department, in charge of Mrs. Annie Thacker, is deserving of special mention, containing a beautiful display of home made articles of which we shall have more to say next week.

The Agricultural department is also replete with a large and varied display of farm products.

The colored people are represented with a very creditable exhibit.

The Krause Amusement Company have a number of good up-to-date clean and moral shows which are proving a great attraction for all who attend.

Friday, the Better Babies Contest will be a special feature, and it is expected that a large number of babies will be entered for the contest.

Saturday, the closing day, will be a special day for the school children. The management has kindly consented to admit all school children to the grounds for the nominal price of ten cents and have arranged to have an automobile parade for the children through the principal streets of the town to the fair grounds.

Why Not Publish It?

When you want a fact to become generally known, the right way is to publish it. Mrs. Joseph Kallans, Peru, Ind., was troubled with belching, sour stomach and frequent headaches. She writes, "I feel it my duty to tell others what Chamberlain's Tablets have done for me. They have helped my digestion and regulated my bowels. Since using them I feel entirely well." For sale by all dealers.

Mrs. Harper, Misses Lurline and Annie Mae left the past week for Wetumpka, where they will make their future home. It is with distinct regret that Clanton loses this family, and they will be greatly missed, both in church and social circles, but we feel sure they will share the same popularity among their new friends.

Alice Robinson, the negro woman who it will be remembered killed her husband at Maplesville a few weeks ago, became demented in jail last week and for three nights the citizens of the town were greatly annoyed by her frantic shrieks and screams. She was carried to the insane asylum for negroes at Mount Vernon, Ala., Saturday last.

Mr. and Mrs. William B. Harris request the pleasure of your company at the marriage of their daughter, Grace Elizabeth, to Mr. Howell W. Prothro, on Wednesday afternoon, November the fourth, at half after twelve o'clock, three hundred and twenty-one, Sixth Street, Griffin, Georgia.

The above invitation will be read in Clanton with a great deal of interest, as the bride-to-be has visited Clanton as the guest of Mr. and Mrs. E. Hopkins. She is a niece of Mr. Hopkins. Miss Harris is a most charming girl and during her visits here made many friends by her charming personality and urbane manners.

Mrs. G. H. Denson and Mr. Prothro's brother are to be the only attendants.

Minnesota Traveling Man in Bad Shape

In an affidavit exccuted before a Notary in St. Paul a traveling man swears to the folloming: Had a scrofulous ulcer about two by three inches in size on the right side of neck over the jugular vein—a dangerous place. Was treated by many doctors but no benefit. Allen's Ulcerine Salve cured the ulcer in six months.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

W. T. Hutchens, Nicholson, Ga., had a severe attack of rheumatism. His feet, ankles and joints were swollen, and moving about was very painful. PROCURING REST FOR BRAIN

English Physician Gives Advice to Those Who Suffer From Lack of Sound Sleep.

Many men and women, especially those past their first youth, find difficulty in procuring the sound, restful sleep so necessary to keep mind and body fit. Although physically the body is tired out, the brain is as alert as ever, and perfect oblivion is impossible.

An English physician gives some interesting advice on the matter. "Insomnia," he states, "is one of the penalties of the increasing strain modern life throws upon our brains. The man who works with his muscles and lives in the open air is rarely a victim of sleeplessness.

"The essentials for a good night's rest are mental repose, a requisite amount of muscular fatigue, comfortable body heat, and plenty of ventilation.

"The most difficult to secure is lessened brain activity. An excellent plan is to take a brisk half-hour's walk just before bedtime, followed by a hot bath and a rubdown, and then a cup of warm milk and a biscuit or two as one gets into bed.

"If in addition, the mind be focussed on some pleasant but not exciting topic, a night's rest is assured to all but the most chronic sufferer.

"The type in which the sleeper suddenly awakes an hour or so after having fallen asleep usually means that more outdoor muscular exercise is required."

TAX COMMISSION CHANGES DECISION

Will Not Insist on Payment of Tax on Life Policy—Approved By Brickell.

STATE CAPITAL HAPPENINGS

Doings In and Around the State House Chronicled for Our Readers.

—Montgomery.

Payment of taxes by policy holders on life insurance policies with a cash surrender value will not be demanded by the State Tax Commission, it was announced at the office of the commission, following prolonged consideration of the matter. The decision met the approval of Attorney General Brickell, it was announced.

The stand of the commission, in a statement to the press, was expressed thus:

"The State Tax Commission unanimously decided, with the approval of the Attorney General, that it will not insist on the payment of taxes by policy holders on life insurance policies which have a cash surrender value. In view of the decisions of the Supreme Courts of Indiana and Minnesota and the opinions of the attorney generals of New York, Ohio and Pennsylvania, construing statutes similar to ours, which decisions and opinions hold that such policies are not taxable, the Commission made the above ruling."

Kolb to Issue Report.

Copies of the annual report of the state department of agriculture and industries have been received from the printer and are now ready for distribution over the state. The report contains a complete list of the receipts from the sale of fertilizer tags and licenses, the total receipts for the past fiscal year being $188,292.

In the prefatory remarks to the department's report, Capt. Reuben F. Kolb, commissioner, calls attention to the efforts of the department during the past year to maintain "its past ideals of service to the farming masses of Alabama."

"Every method looking to a betterment of the cause of our farmers that was deemed practical to adopt has been advocated and presented," says the report. "We have co-operated cordially and helpfully with every movement looking to an improvement of conditions that have restricted our farmers in opportunity and hampered them in causes; we have been diligent in defending their interest against impositions wherever and whenever discovered; we have warned, warned, instructed, and, as far as possible, resisted the inevitable invasion of the boll weevil's direful presence, which, in a great agricultural area of the state, is now a grave reality. In a word, this department has exhausted every constitutional means within its employment to bring about a new farming era in Alabama."

Gets Contract to Print Laws.

As the lowest bidder among several newspapers of the State, the Birmingham Age-Herald was awarded the contract for printing the general laws to be passed at the next session of the Alabama Legislature. The bid was 20 cents per "square." The next lowest bid was that of the Montgomery Times, which offered to do the printing at 21 cents per "square." The bids were opened by Secretary of State, C. D. Brown, the contract automatically going to the paper with the lowest figure.

Motor Vehicle Receipts.

Total receipts of the motor vehicle department for the year ending September 30, last, were $113,201.75, an increase of $31,829.75 over the preceding year, according to Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, who has submitted a report to the governor covering his examination of that department.

The receipts of the department were divided among the state, cities and counties and was apportioned as follows: State, $52,02879; maintenance, $15,980.26, and cities and counties, $45,191.70.

The department's expenses for the year amounted to $11,297.37, which included salaries of the two clerks and other expenses.

The total amount collected since the establishment of the motor vehicle department is $259,962.75, of which amount $64,489 was collected in 1913.

Minus Legislature Ten Days.

Agitation for a special session of the legislature has brought to light the fact that Alabama will be without a law-making body for almost ten days during the first part of November. By constitutional provision the O'Neal legislature will go out of office the day after the election of November 4. The vote is not canvassed until the Friday following or November 6. At least two days must be necessary in filing the successful names in the secretary of state. Then 2 or 3 days still elapse before qualifying.

Since the establishment on April 4, 1911, the expenditures for the maintenance of the court of appeals have been $70,180.34, while the receipts of the court have amounted to $16,848, according to Examiner of Public Accounts J. T. Gorman, who submitted a report to the governor on his examination of the books and accounts of Alexander Troy, clerk of the court.

The expenditures of the court for the past fiscal year amounted to $20,000, of which amount $15,000 was spent in salaries for judges; $2,500 for the salary of the clerk of the court and $2,500 for other clerical hire.

The receipts of the court for the year were $4,557.20, of which amount $3,063.20 was received in fees and $1,495 in library fees.

Since the establishment of the court according to Examiner Gorman, 2,242 cases have been docketed, 1,728 have been decided, 158 transferred to the supreme court and 356 are now pending.

Examiner Gorman reported Mr. Troy's books correct and complimented his excellent system of bookkeeping.

Following is Mr. Gorman's report in part:

"In obedience to instructions received from the executive office, I have examined the books, accounts and vouchers of Hon. Alex Troy, clerk of the court of appeals, from October 1, 1913, to September 30, 1914.

"Its books are correctly kept. The clerical work on all of his dockets, is excellent.

"For the fiscal year ending September 30, 1914, he collected and paid into the state treasurer $3,062.20 fees.

"In addition, he collected $1,495 library fees, making a total of $4,557.20 collected and paid.

"The expenses of the court for the fiscal year were as follows:

Salaries of judges	$15,000
Salary of clerk	2,500
Salary of secretary	1,650
Salary of temporary clerk	850
Total	$20,000

"The court of appeals was created by an act approved March 11, 1911, and was organized April 4, 1911.

"The following are the salaries paid in this court, per annum:

Three judges, $5,000 each	$15,000
Clerk	2,500
Secretary	1,650
Total	$15,150

"Since its organization the following are the receipts and expenditures of this court:

Receipts—
Clerk's fees	$12,493
Library fees	4,355
Total	$16,848
Expenditures—
Salaries of judges	$53,373.63
Salary of clerk	8,870.97
Salary of secretary	5,868.14
Salary of temporary clerk	2,048.20
Total	$70,160.94

Asks for Legislators' Ideas.

Governor O'Neal addressed letters to members of the Legislature to ascertain their position on the question of convening the Legislature to aid in settling upon some plan to aid the farmers during the financial stringency. This action was taken following a conference between the Governor, Senator John H. Bankhead, W. M. Seymour and O. P. Ford.

The Governor also addressed a letter to the Attorney General, inquiring for an opinion in connection with the authority of the Legislature to restrict cotton acreage or to authorize bonds to produce money to purchase cotton.

Those who conferred with the Governor promised to secure pledges from Legislators to the effect that they would not go further than to try to bring aid for the farmers.

Conference Gives No Solution.

The meeting of Governors (present and future), Senators, and Legislators called to order in the assembly room of a local hotel by General Bibb Graves, chairman of the State Democratic Executive Committee, resulted in nothing more than discussion of plans already promulgated for the relief of the financial stringency.

Observe "Clean-Up" Day.

Teachers all over Alabama observed "clean-up and school improvement day," on October 30. The day was observed in practically every school in the state.

Open Season Begins November 1.

Open season on quail, squirrel and other game, including migratory birds, such as ducks, geese and brant, will begin November 1 and continue until February 1, a period of three months, and as a consequence hunting licenses are in great demand just now. Reports from all portions of the state indicate there is plenty of game in the fields and that fine sport will be provided during the coming season. A number of hunting parties are being arranged.

Swanson Pleads Guilty.

W. G. Swanson, former cashier of the Macon County Bank of Tuskegee, pleaded guilty to the charge of embezzlement when tried by the criminal court of Tuskegee and was given 13 years and one day in the penitentiary. Swanson was immediately taken to the state prison at Wetumpka to begin his sentence. Swanson was indicted on the charge of embezzling about $30,000 of the bank's funds and for swearing falsely as to the bank's financial condition.

ON NOVEMBER 3

Important Issues Will be Decided in Alabama—Progressives and Republicans Active.

BATTLE FOR SECOND PLACE

Speakers for All Parties Are in the Field and Are Lining Voters Up.

Birmingham.—The general election to be held in Alabama on November 3, will decide several important issues in Alabama.

While normally the vote in general elections are light, and it has been predicted that the cotton situation in the state at this time will have a tendency to decrease further that vote even below the normal, the fact that important questions hinge upon the size of the vote may result in a larger vote being polled than generally expected.

Under the Parks option law by which counties can vote wet or dry with reference to the liquor traffic, the vote for governor at the general election is made the basis upon which the petitions for election are called. The Parks bill requires that 45 per cent of the qualified voters of a county must sign the petition asking for an election before the probate judge shall issue the call for an election.

It is natural, therefore, that counties that desire to remain dry will seek to bring out a heavy vote to make it more difficult for the required number of voters to be obtained to the petition asking for the election. On the other hand, the counties that desire to remain wet probably make every effort to bring out a large vote to make it difficult for the drys to call an election.

As long as the Parks local option law remains in effect the petitions for a local option election must contain 45 per cent of the total vote cast in the contest for governor at the general election.

The election November 3 will decide whether the progressives or the republicans shall consitute the second party in Alabama. At present the progressive party is the second party in the state, having polled a larger vote in the election two years ago than did the republicans. This year the republicans have been very active, striving vigorously to push the progressives out of second place in the standing of the parties in Alabama.

The progressives, on the other hand, do not propose to yield gently to the republicans the honors that they captured two years ago. They are making a very aggressive campaign.

The progressives and the republicans are hammering the democratic party very heavily in several counties of the state. Movements are on foot to form fusions between the two parties to oppose the democratic nominees.

The republicans are confidently claiming that they will elect a whole or a part of their ticket in Winston, Franklin, Walker, Chilton, St. Clair and Shelby counties.

The republicans are the progressives have state campaign headquarters in Birmingham. Both of these parties have speakers in the field and are reaching the voters through the mails.

TO GIVE A FOUR CROP PRIZE.

Railroad Makes Offer of Shorthorn Bull to Boys in Its Counties.

Auburn.—Announcement was made that the Central of Georgia will offer a pure bred shorthorn bull as the prize to the winner of the four-crop contest in any of the 80 counties it serves in Georgia and Alabama where a club of 25 or more members is organized under the supervision of the state agents in charge of the boys' club work.

These boys will cultivate three acres each, one in cotton, one in corn, and one in winter oats followed by cow pea hay, four crops on three acres.

TO CONSTRUCT NEW ROAD.

Will Be Built Soon From Incline to Gunter's Landing.

Gadsden.—The Nashville, Chattanooga and St. Louis railroad, within the next few months, probably will begin the construction of a line, 30 miles, connecting incline, near Huntsville, with Gunter's Landing, one mile from Guntersville. It is probable that a bridge will be built over the river at Incline, but a ferry will be used for some time.

NEGRO BADLY HANDLED BY MOB.

Cool Heads Prevent Lynching of Black Who Ran Into Affection.

Meridian, Miss.—The reported lynching of a negro at York, Ala., 30 miles from here, was denied by officers. The report grew out of an assault and arrest resulting given a negro hotel proprietor by a mob. The negro was said to have been hurrying to the depot to catch a train and ran against two white women, nearly knocking them down.

Secretary Reviews Accomplishments of Association.

Montgomery.—The eighteenth annual session of the Alabama Good Roads Association was held here, and the meeting was from every point of view declared to have been a success.

John Craft of Mobile was unanimously re-elected president of the Alabama Good Roads association. J. A. Rountree was re-elected secretary, and the following elected vice presidents: Jno. W. O'Neal of Birmingham, J. E. Pierce of Huntsville, Senator John H. Bankhead of Jasper and Oscar W. Underwood of Birmingham.

The most interesting feature of the meeting was the report of the secretary which is herewith given in part:

"One of the most successful meetings in the history of the association was held in the city of Mobile November 20-22, 1913. Recommendations were made and plans laid to carry on the work of the association. Among the plans that were adopted was to commit the incoming legislature of Alabama to pass a law to place the convicts on the public roads of the state; to continue liberal appropriations for the building of roads, and to change the constitution in order that bonds might be issued for the purpose of building good roads in the state.

"Early in January the executive committee met and put in operation the committing of the members of the legislature. Letters were written to every candidate for the state senate and the house, asking them to commit themselves upon these issues referred to above. Out of the vast number of candidates that ran in the recent democratic primary election we are glad to report that two-thirds of the legislature is committed to the policies of the Alabama Good Roads association, and that the next legislature will take no backward steps in the cause of good roads. This is one of the splendid works that has been accomplished by the association for the year 1914.

"The next great work that has been accomplished by the association has been the organizating of county and district associations, and also highway associations. During the past 12 months 20 good roads associations have been organized in that number of counties; 10 local good roads associations and five special highway associations. An average membership of from 75 to 150 members has been enrolled in each one of these associations.

"Good roads days, August 14 and 15, were inaugurated by this association in the year 1911. Since that time an active campaign has gone forth to popularize these days and make them a success.

"Reports were received showing that over 100,000 people worked the roads on good roads days in over 60 counties in the state.

"The success of good roads days is established, and the next legislature will be called upon to pass a law fixing these days as permanent ones. Governor O'Neal has promised in his annual message to recommend the same.

"The state highway commission of Alabama was enacted into a law at the request of the Alabama Good Roads association in 1911. An appropriation of $144,000 was made and is divided equally among such counties as appropriate amounts equal to state aid money. During the past 12 months a total of $2,833,747.67, was expended on roads and bridges by the state of Alabama.

"At present, according to official reports, there are 49,639 miles of roads in Alabama, of which 5772.39 miles or 11.63 per cent are improved. The Alabama Good Roads association has aroused interest in the various counties in Alabama and urged them to take advantage of state aid. They have also assisted in conducting bond issues and special tax issues, so that these counties could take advantage of state aid, as well as to improve the roads by bond issues.

Next Meeting in Birmingham.

Mobile.—Birmingham was selected as the place for holding the next state reunion of Alabama Division U. C. V., and the following officers were elected unanimously: General Harvey E. Jones, Commander-in-Chief; Brigadier General John B. Fuller, First Brigade; Brigadier General C. W. Hooper, Second Brigade; Brigadier General Thomas B. Lampkin, Third Brigade; Brigadier General Thomas S. Plowman, Fourth Brigade.

STATE BRIEFS.

H. H. Broom of Walker county grew 216 pumpkins and 14 bushels of apples on less than half an acre.

Decatur is still working for that interurban road.

Claud Slaton, 13 years old, killed his brother, 17, in Marshall county, with a hatchet.

Only about one-sixth of the cotton of Hale county has been sold. Price 6 cents.

Contracts have been let for the road between Ozark and Elba.

In Marshall county 18 good horses are offered for sale.

Hay crop of Monroe is unusually good.

Heavy shipments of peaches were made from Alabama to the French government. According to information current in Birmingham industrial circles it is stated that the French government is [illegible] the canning of fruit and supply it to the armies [illegible]

Tales of GOTHAM and other CITIES

Pet Cat, Saved From Chloroform, Tries Suicide

NEW YORK.—It is little wonder that Minnie, the pet cat at the Staten Island ferry house in Manhattan, attempted to commit suicide. For days she had more than any cat could bear without being driven to distraction.

Four of her most intimate friends who had long been her companions were taken from her, and she was left to bemoan her lot alone. Minnie had a narrow escape herself and it was only because of the tears of strong-hearted men around the ferry house that she was allowed to remain behind when the others went.

Minnie's history is interesting. The story of how she escaped being chloroformed along with her associates is equally interesting. For more than twelve years she has been a familiar character around the ferry house.

It is known that she is the mother of at least 397 cats. Frank Wall, who has charge of the restaurant in the ferry house, has kept track of them and has the number of each litter written on the wall. Consequently, it is safe to say, as a friend of Minnie remarked, that more than half the cats around the Battery can claim her as kin and break her will in a pinch.

For some time there has been a complaint against the large number of cats around the ferry house. The Society for the Prevention of Cruelty to Animals was notified and asked to remove some of the felines. A wagon from that institution backed up there, and there was a wild scamper to round up the cats.

Minnie was left behind. Late in the afternoon she became disconsolate and deliberately dived off the ferry slip into the bay, intent upon drowning herself. But "Larry" Hanlon, acting superintendent of ferries, saw her, and fished her out with a long pole.

Minnie is now kept inside the candy stand until she overcomes her suicide mania.

He Met a Charming Girl From His Old Home Town

INDIANAPOLIS.—He is a fellow who likes to talk about his "old home town." It is just a little town, but he knows everybody there and enjoys talking about his old friends and neighbors. The result is that all of his business associates in Indianapolis are familiar with names and scenes in his "old home town."

The other day a rather comely woman of middle years met him in front of the courthouse. He is seen and known in that neighborhood. She asked if he was the real estate agent who had promised to meet her there.

"No, I'm not a real estate man," he replied politely, "but I know most of the boys and may be able to find him for you. I will go and bring him to you in a minute or two."

"Never mind, thank you," she said with a friendly smile. "I'll just wait. I'm used to waiting for real estate men. They're always late. There was one, Doug Chalmers, in my old home town at Taskerburg. He was always late."

"Taskerburg!" he exclaimed with delight. "That's my old home town, and I know Doug very well. How long have you been away from there?"

They talked on for several minutes. She grew tired of waiting for the real estate man and said she had to do some shopping. Being a stranger in town she didn't know much about the stores, she said. He volunteered to go with her. At the shirtwaist counter she proceeded to buy a waist valued at $5. She looked in her purse and, to her amazement, had only some small change. She had left her other pocketbook at home. Yes, he would lend her $5 and she would meet him in front of the Traction Terminal building at 3 o'clock and return the money. She lived at —— North Delaware street, she said. That afternoon he waited. She did not come. Then he went to the North Delaware street address. It was a church.

Story of Woo's First Shave Didn't Fool Landis

CHICAGO.—The shaving party of a Chinese infant was described to Federal Judge Landis by friends of Woo Pon, a blinking citizen of the new republic, who does not want to return to his native land.

The witnesses said Woo's father, Woo Ging Gong, had issued the invitations one month after Woo was born, in the tenth year of the reign of Kwangsu (1884) at Folsom, Cal.

As the guests crowded around Papa Woo cried, "You're next," in Chinese, and, grabbing his offspring by the ears, carefully shaved all of the baby's head except where the queue ought to grow.

That story, they figured, should be sufficient proof that Woo was a native-born American. But Judge Landis was thinking of a poem:

"For ways that are dark
And tricks that are vain
The heathen Chinee is peculiar."

So he took a hand in the cross-examination.

"Let the bailiff take your hat," said the judge.

Woo Pon, who was on the witness stand, might not understand the language of the lawyers, thought the judge, but surely he would know a common word like that if he had lived for thirty years in the United States.

But Woo Pon did not understand.

"I don't blame him or his countrymen for trying to put it over on me. If I was in his place I'd do the same thing. But it is my business to keep from being fooled," said the judge. "An order of deportation will be entered. And I suggest that the United States attorney investigate this case in view of that shaving story."

Suicide Prevented by an Elusive Collar Button

LOS ANGELES.—Ralston Wilkes for weeks had not been in good health. His distress so preyed upon him that it caused dissension between him and his wife. Mr. Wilkes thought that ill health, an unhappy home, and an angry wife were too great afflictions for a man to stand, and he notified his most intimate friends that he intended to kill himself.

Such news he forwarded to Mrs. Wilkes, who was in Hollywood, housed by relatives. As soon as she received the alarm she notified the police and the police went to the Wilkes residence, No. 1453 North Coronado street, and questioned the maid. He said he felt very bad indeed, that he was consumed by a fever that the doctors had been unable to break, and was depressed. He could not perspire.

As his threats were not sufficiently active to warrant arrest, the police left him there. The next morning Mr. Wilkes, who is a carpenter, arose early and prepared the poison that was to cause his death.

Then he began to don his best clothes, but his collar button fell and still stay connected. Wilkes made a determined search, crawling all over the floor and moving the furniture.

Suddenly along his forehead there appeared beads of perspiration. Almost at once his whole body was drenched. He felt relieved, and when he had regained his feet he found that he was singing while the detectives pounded on the door. They had returned to go to his room, for he had warned his wife by a telephone that he would be dead by 10 o'clock.

GOD BE WITH US

London.—Each day is but a repetition of the previous day in the battles being fought out in West Flanders, northern France and Poland. One side gains a little at one point, only to lose at another.

It appears from the official German and French reports that the Germans, finding it impossible to advance along the coast toward Dunkirk, owing to the fire from the British and French warships, took a route a little more inland, and have succeeded in crossing the Yser canal, which the Belgians have been defending stubbornly for a week, to the west of Dixmude.

They also have made progress to the northeast of, and still are in possession of Roulers, toward which the allies were advancing last week. The Germans claim to have taken 500 British troops in the fighting in this neighborhood.

Of the battle on the center and left wing the German report does not speak. The French declare they are maintaining their positions in the Argonne and along the Meuse. From unofficial sources it is learned the French have made some advance in the mountains along the Alsace border.

Warships' Work Was Effective

Dover.—It is estimated that the Germans lost 4,000 killed and wounded in Belgium on October 21, when their advancing line was bombarded by the British warships. Firing started at 6 a. m., and continued without intermission for twelve hours.

The range of the ships' guns enabled them to shell the German trenches three miles inland. They destroyed a German field battery, dispersed a German bridging train, which had been assembled to force a crossing of the Yser, blew up an ammunition column, killed Gen. Von Trip and all of his staff to the west of West Ende and compelled the Germans to evacuate their position before Nieuport.

The firing was so rapid that some guns discharged fourteen projectiles per minute. At the end of the day the whole coast from Nieuport to West Ende was completely evacuated.

3,000 Germans Slain Near Woods

Paris.—Four French batteries recently bombarded and destroyed a village in the Argonne region and turned their attention to the surrounding woods to which the Germans had fled. After the fight 3,000 German dead were found in the vicinity.

French Forces Advance In Alsace

Paris.—A dispatch from Geneva to the Excelsior says refugees from the battlefield declare the French occupy Thann, the valley of Moenzter, the valley of Wesser, and all the passes there, including the pass of Sainte Marie in Alsace.

Preparing To Invade England

Copenhagen.—Two ship yards at Kiel, the Germania and the Howard, are building thirty armored lighters capable of carrying 500 men each and traveling at the rate of nine miles an hour to proceed to the river Scheldt should events permit the landing of German troops on the coast of England. It is asserted that three of these lighters are completed and already on their way to the Scheldt. The Germans are building an airship shed in Schleswig for two large Zeppelins.

London.—The admiralty issued a statement outlining steps that are being taken in regard to the eight or nine German cruisers at large in the Atlantic, Pacific and Indian oceans. These two articles include the one, which has until recently been [illegible]

Russians Cross The Vistula

Petrograd.—The following official communication was issued by the Russian general staff:

"The energetic offensive of our armies, which have crossed the Vistula on a large front, encounter no resistance on the part of the Germans, who continue to retreat.

"In the trenches below Ivangorod we took large quantities of war stores and ammunition abandoned by the reserve corps of the Prussian guard in its hasty retreat.

"The Austrian armies continue to fight with stubbornness on the Vistula, on the San and particularly to the south of Przemayl.

Uprisings In Portugal

Lisbon.—The Monarchists of Portugal made attempts to effect uprisings. There were outbreaks at various places, especially in the northern part of Portugal, which for a time was cut off from telegraphic communication with Lisbon. A sharp conflict took place at Mafra between 100 civilians and Republican troops.

Another German War Loan

Berlin.—The following account of the meeting of the Prussian diet was given out in official quarters in Berlin:

"A Prussian war loan of $375,000,000 was passed unanimously, even the Socialists supporting the resolution. Money was voted for the relief of the province of east Prussia, which has suffered the most during the war, and for other military purposes."

Other information given out in Berlin says:

"The Danish steamer Rolf, from New York for Christiana, carrying 20,000 tons of corn, has been captured by a British cruiser and taken into Scotland.

"A German hospital ship, searching the sea for men from German torpedo boat destroyers sunk by the British, has been forced to go into an English harbor by a British cruiser.

"A German naval officer has discovered in Antwerp a letter addressed to an English surgeon, Richard Reading, a volunteer in the Belgian machine gun corps, written by his sister, Jennie, and dated Birmingham, September 28, in which are the following words:

"'I would like to be a nurse; I could kill one or two Germans.'

"The British are bombarding the open Belgian town of Ostend.

"Reliable official reports declare that there is in Germany a sufficient supply of cereals to meet amply all requirements until the next harvest, and that the stock of cattle is sufficient to provide an ample supply of meat."

British Seize Oil Ships

Washington.—Great Britain's determination to keep from Germany cargoes of illuminating oil which might be made fuel for army motor trucks, Zeppelins and aeroplanes, is responsible for the seizure of American Standard Oil steamers by the British cruisers. This fact was developed in conference here after the state department had requested the release of the tanker John D. Rockefeller. The Standard Oil company has asked the state department to secure release of two more of its ships.

GEN. FRENCH REPORTS ON DESPERATE FIGHTING IN BATTLE OF THE AISNE

London.—The official press bureau issued long reports from Field Marshal General Sir John French detailing the operations of the British expeditionary force in France and their progress from August 22 to October 13.

This covers the retirement of the British from Mons southward to the Seine and the advance back to the River Aisne and the first stage of the desperate encounters along the line of that river. It was September 5 when the allies took the offense.

The report contained this startling information:

"It is a fact that betwen September 12 and October 8 the total of killed, wounded and missing among the British expeditionary force has reached 561 officers and 12,980 men, proving the severity of the struggle in which our troops have been engaged."

Following is the statement issued by the press bureau:

Sir John French's first report, dated September 17 says:

"In spite of very determined resistance on the part of the enemy, who is holding in strength and with great tenacity a position peculiarly favorable to defense, the battle which commenced on the evening of September 12 has so far forced the enemy back from his first position, secured passage of the river, and inflicted great loss upon him, including the capture of over 2,000 prisoners and several guns."

The dispatch gives details of the retreat on August 28 and 29. Generals Gough and Chetwode, with the Third and Fifth Cavalry brigades, covered the retreat, repulsing the Germans with great loss.

German Pursuit Vigorous.

"The pursuit by the enemy," continues the report, "was very vigorous. Some five or six German corps were on the Somme facing the fifth army; on the Oise at least two corps were advancing toward my front and were crossing the Somme east and west of Ham; three or four more German corps were opposing the Sixth French army on my left.

"On September 5 General Joffre decided to take the offensive, as he considered conditions very favorable to success."

Field Marshal French believes that about noon on the 6th the enemy realized that a powerful threat was being made against the flank of his columns moving south and east and began the great retreat which opened the battle.

This battle, so far as the Sixth French army, the British army and the Fifth and Ninth French armies were concerned, was concluded on the evening of September 10, when the Germans had been driven to the Soissons-Reims line, with the loss of thousands of prisoners, many guns and enormous masses of transport.

On the 8th both the First and Second army corps made large captures and took some guns. On the 9th after forcing the passage of the Marne, they inflicted a heavy loss in killed and wounded on the Germans, while the Second division took some hundreds of prisoners and a battery of eight machine guns.

Field Marshal French's second report, dated October 8, concerns the operations of the British forces since the evening of September 10. It reads:

"Early in the morning of the 11th three corps crossed the Ourcq, further pursuit of the enemy being practically unopposed, the cavalry reaching the line of the Aisne, two brigades south of Soissons and three brigades at Couvielles and Carseuil, on the afternoon of September 12.

Battle of Aisne Opens.

"The Fifth division approached Missy, but were unable to make headway. The west army corps reached the neighborhood of Vauxcere without much opposition. In this manner the battle of the Aisne commenced.

"The position of the enemy was very strong either for delaying action or for defensive battle.

"On the morning of the 13th I ordered the British forces to advance and make the passage of the Aisne. The first corps and cavalry advanced on the river. The first division was directed on Chanouville, via the canal bridge at Boarg.

"By nightfall the first division occupied the area around Moulins, Pasea and Geny. The Second division bivouacked on the southern bank of the river, leaving only the Fifth brigade on the north bank to establish a bridge head.

Checked by Artillery.

"In the approach to Missy, where the Fifth division eventually crossed, there is some open ground, which was swept by artillery fire from the opposite bank. The Thirteenth brigade, therefore, was unable to advance, but the Fourteenth, directed on a less exposed point, was pushed over, and at night established itself on the left of [illegible] with the Fifth brigade [illegible] by the Fourth division on [illegible] and, it succeeded in [illegible] attacks [illegible]

"During the night of the 13th and on the 14th, and following days field companies incessantly worked night and day, throwing eight pontoons and one foot bridge across the river under a generally heavy artillery fire, which was incessantly kept up on most of the crossings after their completion.

"The action of the First corps on this day under the direction and command of Sir Douglas Haig was of so skillful, bold and decisive a character that he gained positions which alone would have enabled me to maintain my position for more than three weeks of very severe fighting on the north bank of the river.

About 1 p. m. the enemy obtained a footing between the First and Second corps and threatened to cut the communications of the latter. General Haig was hard pressed and had no reserve in hand. I placed a cavalry division at his disposal, part of which he skillfully used to prolong and secure the left flank of the Guards brigade. Some heavy fighting ensued, which resulted in the enemy being driven back with heavy loss.

General Advance Ordered.

"About four o'clock a weakening of the counter-attacks by the enemy and other indications tended to show that his resistance was decreasing, and a general advance was ordered by the army corps commander.

"Although meeting with considerable opposition and coming under very heavy artillery and rifle fire, the position of the corps at the end of the day's operations extended from the Chemin des Dames on the right through Chivy to Le Cour De Scupir, with the First cavalry brigade extending to the Chavonne-Soissons road. On the right the corps was in close touch with the French Moroccan troops of the Eighteenth corps, which were entrenched in echelon to its right rear. During the night they entrenched this position.

"Throughout the battle of the Aisne this advanced and commanding position was maintained, and I cannot speak too highly of the valuable services rendered by Sir Douglas Haig and the army corps under his command.

"On the morning of the 15th I became convinced that the enemy was making a determined stand. Reports reached us from the French armies on my right and left clearly indicating that the enemy was occupying a strongly intrenched line along the whole Valley of the Aisne.

"General Hamilton, with the Third division, attacked vigorously and regained the ground lost on the 14th.

"I was compelled to change my plans when I learned that further advance of the First corps would have dangerously exposed my right flank; and further also learned from the French commander-in-chief that he was strongly re-enforcing the Sixth French army corps on my left, with the intention of bringing up the allied left to attack the enemy's flank and thus compel his retirement.

"On the 17th, 18th and 19th the whole of our line was heavily bombarded. The First corps was constantly engaged. The enemy was ultimately driven back with heavy loss.

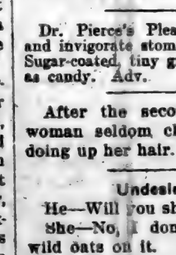
"On the 18th information reached me that General Joffre had determined to attack and envelop the German right flank.

Night Attack Repulsed.

"On the evening of the 19th the enemy became active. After dark he continued his attack on the Second division, only to be driven back. Our losses in these two days were considerable, but the enemy's, as obtained, vastly exceeded them.

"On the night of the 21st another violent attack was repulsed by the Third division, the enemy losing heavily. On the 22d four-inch howitzer batteries from home arrived. They were brought into action on the 24th with very good results.

"On the 22d the action of General de Dastelnau's army on the allied left developed considerably and withdrew considerable forces of the enemy from the center and the east. Until the 28th it appeared as though the enemy's position in our front was weakening.



"On that day, however, a marked renewal of activity commenced.

"Repeated counter-attacks were delivered and [illegible] all along the front in the effort to [illegible] the [illegible] which [illegible] by this time [illegible]

MRS. THOMSON TELLS WOMEN

How She Was Helped During Change of Life by Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

Philadelphia, Pa.—"I am just 52 years of age and during Change of Life I suffered for six years terribly. I tried several doctors but none seemed to give me any relief. Every month the pains were intense in both sides, and made me so weak that I had to go to bed. At last a friend recommended Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound to me and I tried it at once and found much relief. After that I had no pains at all and could do my housework and shopping the same as always. For years I have praised Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound for what it has done for me, and shall always recommend it as a woman's friend. You are at liberty to use my letter in any way."—Mrs. THOMSON, 649 W. Russell St., Philadelphia, Pa.

Change of Life is one of the most critical periods of a woman's existence. Women everywhere should remember that there is no other remedy known to carry women so successfully through this trying period as Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential), Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

A prisoner in one of the Irish police courts the other day was asked his occupation. He mentioned several callings that he followed from time to time.

"And among other things," inquired the prosecuting lawyer, "do you pick pockets?"

"No," he retorted; "I don't pick them; I just take them as they come."

No Excuse.

Representative Bacon of Georgia was condemning in a Macon club the German general staff for its antiquated close formation in attack, a formation which costs the German army thousands of lives.

"Close formation," he said, "was excellent in Napoleon's day, but with our modern machine guns, shooting myriads of bullets a minute, it is a useless, it is a cruel waste of life."

"But," said a German-American, "we've got so many men, you know, congressman—we've got so many, we can afford to—er—to lose—"

"My friend," Mr. Bacon interrupted, "would you excuse your cook for serving you watery soup because there had been a rainy season?"

MOUNTAIN CREEK NEWS

We had several good old veterans to pass out this month, old age being the cause in most cases.

Mr. Nathan Calloway was buried Sunday afternoon at two o'clock.

Miss Carry Crowell, her two brothers, Charlie and Harry, Mr. Vinson Crowell and Berry Tatum, all of Deatsville, visited the Home Sunday; they enjoyed a fine dinner at the auditorium; Miss Katie Smith, one of our neighbors, took dinner with them and all passed the day pleasantly. Mr. J. A. Crowell entertained them.

DEATH OF JOHN L. FRIDAY.

On Saturday last veteran John L. Friday, Co. D., 62nd Alabama, died at the Soldiers' Home and was buried Sunday.

Mr. Friday was a native of Chilton county; he left Clanton four years since to enter the Home. The deceased was 71 years of age.

THORSBY NOTES

The Ladies Guild met at the home of Mrs. Butler last Thursday afternoon. There was a short business meeting followed by a social hour and refreshments.

A number of friends of Mr. A. K. Horn met at his home last Friday evening to help him celebrate his birthday. There was a short program consisting of music by Miss Lassfolk, solos by Mr. Philip Horn and remarks by Mr. Butler, followed by refreshments. Mr. Horn was presented with a gold ring by his children and grand children and with other gifts.

Basket ball is being played with much vigor by the young men of the Baptist High School and Thorsby Institute. A match game between the two schools on Thursday evening of last week resulted in a score of 12 to 3 in favor of the Unity-Chilton Baptist High School.

The opening concert of the joint entertainment course was given by the Beverly Entertainers on Monday night of this week. The concert was well attended and was well enjoyed by all. The dates of the remaining numbers on the course will be announced later.

A carload of fertilizer for the strawberry crops was received in Thorsby on Tuesday of this week. The order was placed through the Farmers' Union, as more advantageous prices were secured in this way. Despite the high price of potash, over five tons have been ordered, as the potash is considered absolutely essential for the success of the strawberry crop.

Considerable crimson clover and bur clover are being sown around Thorsby, also some vetch. The school garden on the grounds of Thorsby Institute will have different varieties of winter clover crops, including white blooming crimson clover, Agusta vetch, hairy vetch, Canada field peas, wheat, rye, oats, rape and others. Some six acres of crimson clover will be seeded on the Institute farm.

Miss Ethel Morgan, of Eclectic, Elmore county, is the latest arrival at the Girls' Dormitory of the Institute. Miss Mary Lizzie Hughes was compelled to leave school for a few week's rest, being threatened with appendicitis. She hopes to return in ten days or two weeks.

The first public recital by the Thorsby Institute music students will be given Friday evening, Nov. 6th, 1914, at 7:30 o'clock, at Bates Hall. A real treat awaits you. Do not miss it.

Several people from Thorsby, including some of the Institute teachers and a number of the Boy Scouts, attended the Community Fair at Collins Chapel last Saturday. They report a very interesting and instructive exhibit of products, and commend the idea to other communities.

This place is famous as the home and burial place of Robert Morrison, the first Protestant Missionary to China. He came out in 1807 and worked part of the time on Macau and part in Canton, and for almost a century his remains have rested in a quiet little cemetery in the heart of the city. It is interesting also to see where he baptised his first convert, most likely by immersion.

The ruins of an old Catholic cathedral erected in 1582 are very interesting. The front wall and the steepie are all that are left standing, all the rest of the building having long since fallen away. This cross on the top of this steeple is famous for having inspired the great old song "In the Cross of Christ I Glory." The author was sick on a ship lying in the harbor and could see the Cross on top of the church and this inspired him to write the immortal words of the song.

The government is a kind of little republic but under the government of Portugal. It is held as a source of revenue for the Portuguese government. There are two or three hundred Portuguese there, nearly all of whom are officers and soldiers, while the main population is Chinese.

But with all the beauty of the place, there is a dark side to it. It is one of the most wicked places in the world. Every kind of evil known to man is practiced here without restraint of law. Gambling houses are wide open and even have their signs hanging out on the front. Almost every other one of the signs along the streets is "First-class Gambling House." There are no second-class ones. Opium-smoking dens are numerous and houses of ill-fame are almost on every street. Heathen China has made it unlawful to gamble and smoke opium, but in this little place ruled by a supposedly Christian nation all is wide open. It is astonishing to see how low men will go for revenue. This year the city government sold the exclusive right to sell opium to one company for $750,000. If those in America who want to license liquor for the revenue it brings could see the awfulness of it, I believe they would not want to do it again.

Macau is a fine example of Catholic Christianity. The first Catholic missionary landed there in 1580. They have been there ever since and to-day the heathen darkness is even more dense than it was when they came. But that is all you can expect of Catholics, especially of the European type, for the masses of the people know nothing of the real loving Christ. On the boat going over from Hong Kong, in conversation with a man who lives in Macau, I asked him if he were a Christian, a believer in Christ. He said: "No, I am a Catholic." Is there any heathen darkness more dense?

CLEAN OUT THE ALLEYS

The Civic Improvement Club requests all merchants and business men of Clanton to have the alleys next to their buildings cleaned out and the garbage and tin cans piled up. This is a move to conserve the health of the town, and all merchants and business men are urged to heed this request. The city will have the garbage hauled off.

COUNTY FAIR CLOSES; LARGE ATTENDANCE

The Chilton County Fair closed on last Saturday night. The attendance the two last days, Friday and Saturday, showed a big gain over the previous days and much interest was displayed by the large number of visitors over the various exhibits. President W. H. Conway states that the number who attended Saturday almost reached two thousand.

We had hoped to give our readers a complete list of prize winners, but were unable to obtain it for this issue.

The Ladies' Department, under the direction of Mrs. Annie Thacker, showed some splendid exhibits of culinary art, needlework, handpainted pictures, beautiful hand embroidery, etc.

Among the exhibits in this department was a quilt 102 years old and a counterpane 120 years old, both of which had been well preserved and appeared to be as good as new. There were also on exhibition two or three quilts, the cloth of which had been spun and woven in Chilton county, and the dye for dying was gotten from a dye rock right here in our own county, so that the articles in their entirety were home manufactured.

The beautiful hand-painted pictures exhibited by Mesdames J. R. Mullins, A. M. Gowan and Miss Winnie Reynolds received a great deal of favorable comment.

Miss John Lee Thacker, the eleven year old daughter of Mrs. Annie Thacker, had a number of beautiful articles on display.

The Girls' Tomato Club, managed by Mrs. Nellie Shaw, had a splendid display of canned tomatoes.

In the live stock department Mr. W. J. Hobson, of Jemison, received first prize on horses, and Mr. Clay Burnett, of Collins' Chapel, second prize.

For best colt over one year old, Mr. Dudley Collins received first prize.

For best colt one year and under, Mr. W. H. Conway captured first prize.

Mr. Jim Culp, Clanton, received first prize on milch cows, and Mr. Ernest Williams, R. F. D. No. 6, got second prize.

In swine, Mr. Dudley Collins had on exhibit a fine Duroc-Jersey sow and nine pigs; Mr. W. Y. Nix, of Maplesville, a fine sow and nine pigs; Mr. E. H. Mims, of Clanton, a Berkshire sow and two pigs, as well as the largest boar on the grounds, weighing about five hundred pounds. One of the interesting features of this department was a pig out of a litter of sixteen, taken from the sow and raised by hand. Mr. W. T. Johnson, of Verbena, had a Poland China pig four or five months old which weighed 125 pounds.

Nearly every breed of fine poultry were on display. Dr. Halstead of Birmingham, judge of this department, said the exhibit was the best he had judged this year in county fairs.

Perhaps the largest sweet potatoes ever grown in Chilton county were exhibited by Mr. Jodie Landsford, of Cooper, eleven potatoes weighing sixty-three pounds the largest one weighing twelve pounds.

The judges for the Ladies department were Miss Clarita Conway, of Birmingham, and Miss Sarah Conway of Lafayette.

Judges for the [illegible] and agricultural departments were Prof. Calvert, of Auburn, and Prof. [illegible]

REPUDIATES ANY KINSHIP

Isadore Shapiro, Birmingham Attorney, Says Harry Shapiro is an Imposter and Unworthy of Confidence.

Mr. Isadore Shapiro, who will be a member of the next Legislature from Jefferson county, wants it distinctly understood that Harry Shapiro, who seems to be lecturing through Middle Alabama, is not his brother, as Harry Shapiro claims to be. Representative Isadore Shapiro is well known in Montgomery. As a mere boy he was an efficient and excellent clerk in the Alabama Legislature. He later went to Yale on the money he had earned and made an unequaled record in that college. After graduating in law from Yale and after entering on the practice of his profession in Birmingham Isadore Shapiro, in a sweepstake race, the entries of which included some of the most popular men in Birmingham, won a place in the Legislature from Jefferson county.

In view of the fact that his name has been mentioned in several lectures in Middle Alabama by Harry Shapiro, he makes the following statement:

"A man named Harry Shapiro, representing himself to be a Baptist Missionary, is making speeches throughout the State and is posing as my brother. In Tuskegee, the other night, he declared that although he was my brother, he stumped the county against me because I 'stood for whiskey.'

"This man is scheduled to make a speech in Montgomery within the next few days, and I want it known that he is in no wise related to me. I have never seen him in my life; I repudiate any kinship he may claim. The statement that he stumped the county against me when I ran for the Legislature is a positive untruth. He did not raise his voice in this county and he would not dare to do so. I want it known that the man is an imposter and is unworthy of any confidence. I want the people of Montgomery and Middle Alabama to know this."—Montgomery Advertiser.

The above mentioned Harry Shapiro spoke in Clanton not long since, and while here posed as a first cousin of Isadore Shapiro, and in speaking of the kinship stated that the resemblance was so close that the two would be taken for brothers. It seems from the above that Harry thought when he arrived in Tuskegee that the resemblance had become so marked he would have little trouble in making the people there believe they were brothers.

BOOM TO POSTAL SAVINGS

The war in Europe is proving a big boon to postal savings in this country. From the very day hostilities opened [illegible] postal savings [illegible] withdrawals [illegible] purpose of the Government to carry out its obligations, not only among the nations of the earth, but with the humblest citizen of our land.

Two important results have followed; thousands of people, largely of foreign birth, accustomed to send their savings abroad, are now patrons of our postal-savings system; and enormous sums of actual cash have been released for commercial uses among our own people at a time when the need for every available dollar is pressing.

The growth of postal-savings in the United States has been steady and healthy and the system has filled an important gap between the tin-can depository and the factory paymaster. On July 1, when affairs were running smoothly here and abroad and the transmission of money across the Atlantic was safe and expeditious, there was approximately $43,000,000 of postal-savings standing to to the credit of about 388,000 depositors. Since then over $10,000,000 have been added and the number of depositors has increased enormously. This unprecedented gain is the more striking when it is considered that the net gain in the last three months is greater than the gain for the entire fiscal year 1914. Scores of offices have done more postal-savings business since the war has been going on than was done by them during the previous existence of the service. The increases are confined to no special localities, but have been felt in every nook and corner of the country. New York City alone made a gain in September of more than a million, while Brooklyn showed a relatively big increase. Chicago reported a larger gain in the past three months than for the past twelve months. More than 7,000 new accounts were opened during the period, bringing the number of depositors in that city up to 21,000.

The unexpected increase in postal-savings business has not only added greatly to the general administrative duties of the system, but has brought up many new and interesting problems which have called for the careful personal consideration of Postmaster General Burleson and Governor Dockery, Third Assistant Postmaster General. But their task has been lightened somewhat by the promptness of depository banks in furnishing additional security to meet the abnormal deposits. A number of the very largest banks in the country, which have heretofore declined to qualify as depositories for postal savings funds, are now among the eager applicants for them.

GIRLS' TECHNICAL MONTEVALLO

The work of the Story Tellers' League has grown so much that it has been found necessary to organize two more chapters. The names of the chapters are: "Uncle Remus," for Freshmen; "Wyche," for Sophomores; "Lanier", for Juniors; "Poe," for Seniors. A story telling circle is formed for the Sub-Freshmen. The published program for the three old chapters are very interesting. Programs will be prepared at once for the "Lanier" chapter and the circle. The building committie, of which Governor O'Neal is chairman; is called to meet here od November 5th to pass upon the plans and specifications of Architect W. T. Warren for the new Technical Building.

President and Mrs. T. W. Palmer, Miss Brooks and Miss Tappan, spent last Monday in Birmingham inspecting the welfare work that is being so admirably conducted by the T. C. I. and R. R. Company under the direction of Dr. Marion Whidden. They visited the schools at Muscoda, Fossil and Edgewater mines and found many helpful suggestions for the extension work in Home Economics just begun here. They gave a very interesting account of their trip to the Y W. C A. on last Wednesday.

Several visitors from Birmingham came by automobile on last Sunday. Among them were Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jemison, Sr., Mr. and Mrs. Robert Jemison, Jr., Mrs. Morris, Miss Virginia Jemison and Mr. C. T. Lehman.

President Palmer announced this week that he had arranged for two more lyceum attractions; The University Glee Club at Thanksgiving and Maud Powell in January.

Mr. J. P. Gore, of Clanton, visited here on last Sunday.

Prof. S. L. Chesnutt visited the Chilton County Fair one day and was very favorably impressed. He states that the educational features were excellent and other Fairs would do well to follow the Chilton plan.

THE FRIENDS OF THE FARMER

The plan of the Saint Louis banker to assist the cotton farmers of the South is a further indication of the nation-wide interest which is being manifested in the problems of the men who follow the plow.

The movement is not intended as a plan for purchasing cotton, but is designed rather to make available a fund of $150,000,000 to loan on cotton at not to exceed six cents per pound, for the purpose of making cotton a liquid asset, stabilizing its price and bringing about normal conditions again.

It has been said that it takes great calamities to develop our friends and the present crisis is proof positive that the farmer has friends in every line of industry who are willing to share his misfortunes and lighten his burdens. Strong men are strong only as they co-operate with other men, and the spirit of friendliness on the part of the business man towards the farmer augurs well for the future of the agricultural interests of the nation.

The Land of Broken Promises

A Stirring Story of the Mexican Revolution

By DANE COOLIDGE

Author of "The Fighting Fool," "Hidden Waters," "The Texican," Etc.

(Copyright, 1914, by Frank A. Munsey.)

18 CHAPTER XXVII—Continued.

By the signs the land ahead was full of bandits and ladrones, men to whom human life was nothing, and a woman no more sacred than a brute. At the pass all trails converged, from the north and from the south. Not by any chance could a man pass over it in the daytime without meeting some one on the way, and if the base revoltosos once set eyes on Gracia it would take more than a nod to restrain them.

So, in a sheltered ravine they sought cover until it was dark, and while Gracia slept, the heavy-headed Bud watched the plain from the heights above.

As he watched he dreamed of a home in which this woman now sleeping beside him was the queen. He dreamed of years to come with unbounded happiness throughout all of them. Thoughts of Phil and duty to his pardner were far away. Nothing on the plain below served to distract him from this dream of happiness. As far as he could see there was nothing that savored of danger for the woman in his keeping. There were no sounds or signs of either federal or revolutionary troops, from both of which they were fleeing, and from both of which he must guard her. Again they were in a world that was all their own, an Eden with but one man and one woman.

For an hour and more he watched and dreamed, and with the dreams came the desire for sleep, the cry of nature for rest. Gracia stirred, then spoke softly to him, calling him by name, and her voice was as music far away.

When she awoke and found him nodding Gracia insisted upon taking his place. Now that she had been refreshed her dark eyes were bright and sparkling, but Bud could hardly see. The long watching by night and by day had left his eyes bloodshot and swollen, with lids that drooped in spite of him. If he did not sleep now he might doze in the saddle later, or ride blindly into some rebel camp; so he made her promise to call him and lay down to rest until dark.

The stars were all out when he awoke, startled by her hand on his hair, but she reassured him with a word and led him up the hill to their lookout. It was then that he understood her silence. In the brief hours during which he had slept the deserted country seemed suddenly to have come to life.

By daylight there had been nothing to suggest the presence of men. But now as the velvet night settled down upon the land it brought out the glimmering specks of a hundred camp-fires to the east and to the north. But the fires to which Gracia pointed were set fairly in their trail, and they barred the way to Gadsden.

"Look!" she said. "I did not want to wake you, but the fires have sprung up everywhere. These last ones are right in the pass."

"When did you see them?" asked Hooker, his head still heavy with sleep. "Have they been there long?"

"No, only a few minutes," she answered. "At sundown I saw those over to the east—they are along the base of that big black mountain—but these flashed up just now; and see, there are more, and more!"

"Some outfit coming in from the north," said Bud. "They've crossed over the pass and camped at the first water this side."

"Who do you think they are?" asked Gracia in an awed voice. "Insurrectos?"

"Like as not," muttered Bud, gazing from encampment to encampment. "But whoever they are," he added, "they're no friends of ours. We've got to go around them."

"And if we can't?" suggested Gracia.

"I reckon we'll have to go through, then," answered Hooker grimly. "We don't want to get caught here in the morning."

"Ride right through their camp?" gasped Gracia.

"Let the sentries get to sleep," he went on, half to himself. "Then, just before the moon comes up, we'll try to edge around them, and if it comes to a showdown, we'll ride for it! Are you game?"

He turned to read the answer, and she drew herself up proudly.

"Try me!" she challenged, drawing nearer to him in the darkness. And so they stood, side by side, while their hands clasped in promise.

The night grew darker and darker. Even Hooker, with his eyes trained to the starlight, could not see the trail, and Bud, leading the horses, felt with his feet for the rocks and sand. Then, as the moon began to show over the mountains, they mounted and rode forward, Bud leading the way, Gracia next and Hooker bringing up the rear. Their course lay to the north, around the camp-fires in the pass, and as they rode they kept a sharp lookout for sentries. Twice they passed dark figures on the trail, and each time Bud's hand went to his gun, but they were allowed to pass unchallenged.

Then, as the moon rose, they began to see the camp-fires more clearly, and the dark forms of men lying around them. Some were sleeping, others sitting up, and the horses were picketed in bunches. Gracia, who was riding next to Bud, pointed to a large fire, around which a number of men were gathered, and Bud nodded. Then, as they rode on, he saw that the trail led directly past the fire, and that there was no way to avoid it.

Gracia, too, had seen the danger, and she turned in her saddle and spoke to Hooker, who was riding behind. Then, as they rode on, they all drew their guns and held them ready for instant use. Bud's heart was pounding heavily, and he could feel the blood throbbing in his temples, but he kept his face turned toward the fire and his eyes fixed on the trail. Then, as they came abreast of the fire, he heard a sharp challenge, and a man sprang up and ran toward them.

"Keep a going!" whispered Hooker, "and the first man that makes a break I'll shoot him full of holes!"

He sat like a statue on his shining horse, his six-shooter balanced to shoot, and something in his very presence—the bulk of his body, the forward thrust of his head, and the burning hate of his eyes—quelled the spirits of the rebels. They were a ragtag army, mounted on horses and donkeys and mules and with arms of every known make.

It was just such an army as was overrunning all northern Mexico, such an army as had been levying tribute on the land for a century. They spread terror throughout all that great country south of the American border.

The fiery glances of the American made them cringe as they had always cringed before their masters, and his curses turned their blood to water. He towered above them like a giant, pouring forth a torrent of oaths and beckoning them on their way, and the leader was the first to yield.

With hand half-raised and jaw on his breast he struck spurs to his frightened mule and went dashing over the ridge.

The others followed by twos and threes, some shrinking, some protesting, some gazing forth villainously from beneath their broad hats. As they looked back he whirled upon them and swore he would kill the first man that dared to turn his head.

After all, they were a generation of slaves, those low-browed, unthinking peons, and war had not made them brave. They passed on, the whole line of bewildered soldiery, looking in vain for the men that were behind the American, staring blankly at the beautiful woman who sat so courageously by his side.

When the last had gone by Bud picked up his rifle and watched him around the point. Then he smiled grimly at Gracia, whose eyes were still round with wonder, and led the way down the trail.

CHAPTER XXVIII.

The high pass and the insurrectos were behind them now and the rolling plains of Agua Negra were at their feet. To the northeast the smoke banners of the Gadsden smelters lay like ribbons across the sky, and the line was not far away.

Yet, as they came down from the mountains, Bud and Gracia fell silent and slackened their slashing pace. The time for parting was near, and partings are always sad.

But ten miles across the plain lay Gadsden and Phil—Phil to whom Gracia was promised. There had been no thoughts of him from the time they sat together under the horse-blankets waiting for the rain to pass until now that the dangers were virtually over, and but a short time more would place them beyond the reach of either rurales or rebels. Bud thought of the duty he owed his pardner, even though that pardner had played him false. Great as was his longing for Gracia, he could not forget that duty. Their companionship had been but a thing to forget if he could, or at best he could only remember the sweetness of it, and must forget the dreams he had dreamed as he watched beside Gracia in the hills. He was taking her to Phil, and all else must be sacrificed for duty.

Bud looked far out across the valley to where a train puffed in from the south, and the sight of it made him uneasy. He watched still as it lay at the station and, after a prolonged stare in the direction of Agua Negra, he reined sharply to the north.

"What is it?" asked Gracia, coming out of her reverie.

"Oh, nothing," answered Bud, slumping down in his saddle. "I see the railroad is open again—they might be somebody up there looking for us."

"You mean—"

"Well, say a bunch of rurales."

He turned still farther to the north as he spoke and spurred his jaded horse on. Gracia kept her roan beside him, but he took no notice, except as he scanned the line with his bloodshot eyes. He was a hard-looking man now, with a rough stubble of beard on his face and a sullen set to his jaw. As two horsemen rode out from distant Agua Negra he turned and glanced at Gracia.

"Seems like we been on the run ever since we left Fortuna," he said with a rueful smile. "Are you good for just one more?"

"What is it now?" she inquired pulling herself together with an effort. "Are those two men coming out to meet us? Do you think they'd stop us?"

"That's about our luck," returned Hooker. "But when we dip out of sight in this swale here we'll turn north and hit for the line."

"All right," she agreed. "My horse is tired, but I'll do whatever you say, Bud."

She tried to catch his eyes at this, but he seemed lost in contemplation of the horsemen.

"There's rurales," he said at last, "and heading straight for us—but we've got the lay to get caught now. Gracia!" he added hoarsely, and went sailing on the swale.

For two miles they rode up one draw, down another below the level of the plain, but at last they came at the mouth of the gulch and looked gratefully over the trail they had crossed. Then, as they rode on, Bud's hand sought hers and clasped it.

"No, but seriously!" protested De Lancey, as Bud chuckled hoarsely. "You can't cross the line without being passed by the inspectors, and—well, your father is there to see you back."

"But I will not go!" flung back Gracia.

"Oh, my dear girl!" cried De Lancey, frowning in his perplexity, "you don't understand, and you make it awful hard for me. You know they're very strict now—so many low women coming across the line, for—well, the fact is, unless you are married you can't come in at all!"

"But I'm in!" protested Gracia flushing hotly. "I'm—"

"They'll deport you," said De Lancey, stepping forward to give her support.

"I know it's hard, dear," he went on, as Bud moved hastily away, "but I've got it all arranged. Why should we wait? You came to marry me, didn't you? Well, you must do it now—right away! I've got the license and the priest all waiting—come on before the rurales get back to town and report that you've crossed the line. We can ride around to the north and come in at the other side of town. Then we—"

"Oh, no, no!" cried Gracia, pushing him impulsively aside. "I am not ready now. And—"

She paused and glanced at Bud.

"Mr. Hooker," she began, walking gently toward him, "what will you do now?"

"I don't know," answered Hooker huskily.

"Will you come with us—will you—"

"No," said Bud, shaking his head slowly.

"Then I must say good-by?"

She waited, but he did not answer.

"You have been so good to me," she went on, "so brave, and—have I been brave, too?" she broke in pleadingly.

Hooker nodded his head, but he did not meet her eyes.

"Ah, yes," she sighed. "You have heard what Phil has said. I wish now that my mother were here, but—would you mind? Before I go I want to—give you a kiss!"

She reached out her hands impulsively and Hooker started back. His eyes, which had been downcast, blazed suddenly as he gazed at her, and then they flitted to Phil.

"No," he said, and his voice was lifeless and choked.

"You will not?" she asked, after a pause.

"No!" he said again, and she shrank away before his glance.

"Then good-by," she murmured, turning away like one in a dream, and Bud heard the crunch of her steps as she went toward the horses with Phil. Then, as the tears welled to his eyes, he heard a resounding slap and a rush of approaching feet.

"No!" came the voice of Gracia, vibrant with indignation. "I say no!" The spat of her hand rang out again and then, with a piteous sobbing, she came running back to Bud, halting with the stiffness of her long ride.

"I hate you!" she screamed, as Phil came after her. "Oh, I hate you! No, you shall never have the kiss! What! if Bud here has refused it, will I give a kiss to you? Ah, you poor, miserable creature!" she cried, wheeling upon him in a sudden fit of passion. "Where were you when I was in danger? Where were you when there was no one to save me? And did you think, then, to steal a kiss, when my heart was sore for Bud? Ah, coward! You are no fit pardner! No, I will never marry you—never! Well, go then! And hurry! Oh, how I hate you—to try to steal me from Bud!"

She turned and threw her arms about Hooker's neck and drew his rough face down to her.

"You do love me, don't you, Bud?" she sobbed. Oh, you are so good—so brave! And now will you take the kiss?"

"Try me!" said Bud.

THE END.

WORLD'S WONDER IN OREGON

Hottest Springs on Earth Said to Have Been Located Seventy Miles From Portland.

Springs hot enough to cook beans and boil eggs in three minutes have been found within a short distance of Portland, Ore. They are on the Clackamas river, 30 miles south of Estacada and 70 miles from Portland.

These springs are 50 in number, and one throws out a stream seven inches in diameter. The springs have been known to the Indians for many years. A French halfbreed named Michel Arquette, a trapper, hearing an old Indian of the Molalla tribe speak of hot springs this side of the range, made an investigation and found them.

The springs are supposed to be the hottest in the world—320 degrees. Beans have been cooked in the larger spring with the same dispatch as on a stove. Eggs, encased in a mesh of any kind, have been cooked in three minutes. Even fish have been caught in the Clackamas river and without being taken off the line have been dropped into the spring and in a very brief time cooked to a turn.

The waters come from solid rock and are strongly impregnated with salts, but not of sufficient strength to make the baths objectionable.

Many visitors are said by the Indians with regard to the wonderful properties of these springs. Still they have not been developed to any extent.

To Increase Supply of Salmon

Important experiments have recently been made by the fisheries [illegible] for British Columbia in connection with the hatchery operations. This year at Seaton lake instead of placing all the sockeye salmon eggs in the lake as had been the custom heretofore, a plan was adopted more in keeping with the natural method followed by the fish. The eggs after having been inoculated with the lymph, were buried under five inches of sand and gravel. Over 1,000 ova were thus treated in the especially made therefor, and as a result 188,000 healthy fry have been taken out with the possibility of more to follow. This is a splendid result as compared with the old system, and it is believed by those that the new method will revolutionize the business of the hatcheries.

The Pioneer Mother.

The school children of California are saving up their pennies to pay for the monument to the pioneer mother which is to be executed by Charles Gradfly for the Panama-Pacific exposition. The woman's head of the exposition suggested that such a statue be erected and the children were the first to respond, sending in an avalanche of pennies. The central figure is that of the pioneer mother dressed in a homespun gown and at her knees are two sturdy little children.

PRESSED HARD.

Coffee's Weight on Old Age.

When people realize the injurious effects of coffee and the change in health that Postum can bring, they are usually glad to lend their testimony for the benefit of others.

"My mother, since her early childhood, was an inveterate coffee drinker, had been troubled with her heart for a number of years and complained that 'weak all over' feeling and of stomach.

"Some time ago I was making a visit to a distant part of the country and took dinner with one of the merchants of the place. I noticed somewhat unusual flavour of the coffee and asked him concerning it. He replied that it was Postum.

"I was so pleased with it that, as the meal was over, I bought a package to carry home with me, and had her prepare some for the next meal. The whole family were so well pleased with it that we discontinued coffee and used Postum entirely.

"I had really been at times quite anxious concerning my mother's condition; but we noticed that after using Postum for a short time, she felt much better than she did prior to its use, and had little trouble with her heart, and no sick stomach; the severe headaches were not so frequent, and her general condition much improved. This continued until she was quite hearty.

"I know Postum has benefited myself and the other members of the family, but not in so marked a degree as in the case of my mother, as she was a victim of long standing." Name given by Postum Co., Battle Creek, Mich.

Postum comes in two forms:

Regular Postum — must be well boiled. 15c and 25c packages.

Instant Postum — is a delicious beverage instantly prepared by the addition of a level teaspoonful to a cup of hot water and, with cream and sugar, makes a delightful beverage immediately. 30c and 50c tins.

"There's a Reason" for Postum.

THE CHARM OF MOTHERHOOD

Enhanced By Perfect Physical Health.

The experience of Motherhood is a trying one to most women and marks a crisis in many an epoch in their lives. Not one woman in a hundred is prepared or understands how to properly care for herself.

Of course nearly every woman nowadays has medical treatment at such times, but many approach the experience with an organism unfitted for the strain of strength, and when it is over the system has received a shock from which it is hard to recover. Following upon this comes the nervous strain and suffering for the child, and a distinct change in the mother results.

There is nothing more charming than a happy and healthy mother of children, and indeed child-birth under the right conditions need be no hazard to health or beauty. The unexplainable thing is that with all the evidence of shattered nerves and broken health resulting from the unprepared condition, and with ample time in which to prepare, women persist in going blindly to the trial.

Every woman at this time should rely upon Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound, a most valuable tonic and invigorator of the female organism.

So many homes are childless there are now children because of the fact that Lydia E. Pinkham's Vegetable Compound makes women normal, healthy and strong.

If you want special advice write to Lydia E. Pinkham Medicine Co. (confidential) Lynn, Mass. Your letter will be opened, read and answered by a woman and held in strict confidence.

COTTON EXCHANGES TO REOPEN NOV. 16

Liverpool and New York Exchanges to Open Simultaneously—Outlet for Tied-Up Markets Worked Out.

BANKERS HOLD CONFERENCE

Groups of New York Financiers Will Advance $10,000,000 to Brokers.

Washington. — An outlet for the tied-up cotton markets of this country was worked out when at a conference of federal reserve and private bankers, together with Sir George Paish and Basil B. Blackett, representing the British Treasury, it was agreed simultaneously to open November 16 the New York and Liverpool Cotton exchanges.

Sir George spoke authoritatively, he said, for his government as to the Liverpool exchange.

This is the first vital move coming out of the conference of the American and British bankers to relieve the stress of international money affairs due to the war.

The next important step to be taken by the bankers will be to agree upon a system of exchange of nine months certificates that may be used by American merchants in lieu of luring over $400,000,000 or more of gold to England to strike the balance of trade.

The day decided upon for opening the New York and Liverpool Cotton Exchanges is that already fixed by Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo for opening the federal reserve system, and, it was predicted here would at once give a tremendous impetus to American money.

In connection with the reopening of the New York Cotton exchange, it was learned also that a group of New York bankers has agreed to underwrite a loan of about $10,000,000 to carry cotton brokers through the storm that will break on them with the resumption of trading and save them from disaster.

JAPAN TO TAKE 600,000 BALES

Estimated Demand for Staple Will Nearly Double That of Last Year.

Washington.—That Japan this year will take 600,000 bales of American cotton as against 375,000 bales last year, was an estimate made at the Japanese embassy. Not that the United States is to make any inroads on the East Indian cotton trade with Japan, but the number of spindles in the land of Nippon has increased tremendously and more mills will be established.

Also at the German embassy it was said that all the factories in that country are in operation, although what proportion of their 11,000,000 spindles are at work could not be ascertained. Despite the fact that winter has set in abroad a tremendous amount of cotton goods is being turned out by the German mills for the soldiers and a great amount of cotton bandages is being used by the armies.

The number of spindles in Japan last year was listed at 2,400,000 and of 453,000 bales of the 1913 crop held in reserve by the spinners something over 117,000 were American staple. In 1914 Japan is expected to consume between 1,600,000 and 2,000,000 bales of the world's supply.

EXPORT BALANCE PREDICTED

Restoration of Many Trade Currents Are Predicted.

Washington. — Restoration of many trade currents and establishment of a substantial export balance by American commerce in October was indicated in statements issued by the treasury department. Telegraphic reports from cities which handle about 7% per cent. of the country's export trade showed that from October 5 to 31, inclusive, a trade balance of more than $33,000,000 was established.

If figures from the remaining ports show the same proportions, the October gain over the export balance for September will amount to more than $17,000,000. Part of the increase was ascribed to cotton shipments which had been almost suspended by the European upheaval. During the week ending October 28, 212,053 bales of cotton were exported. On last Thursday alone 43,903 bales were sent abroad.

Total exports from the principal cities from October 5 to 31 amounted to $139,945,681 and imports $106,241,261. The imports represented about 37 per cent. of the total for all the country, and the exports 72 per cent. In September the exports were worth $158,337,333, compared with imports of $140,069,611.

CALOMEL SICKENS! IT SALIVATES! DON'T STAY BILIOUS, CONSTIPATED

I Guarantee "Dodson's Liver Tone" Will Give You the Best Liver and Bowel Cleansing You Ever Had—Don't Lose a Day's Work!

Calomel makes you sick; you lose a day's work. Calomel is quicksilver and it salivates; calomel injures your liver.

If you are bilious, feel lazy, sluggish and all knocked out, if your bowels are constipated and your head aches or stomach is sour, just take a spoonful of harmless Dodson's Liver Tone instead of using sickening, salivating calomel. Dodson's Liver Tone is real liver medicine. You'll know it next morning because you will wake up feeling fine, your liver will be working, your headache and dizziness gone, your stomach will be sweet and your bowels regular. You will feel like working. You'll be cheerful; full of vigor and ambition.

Your druggist or dealer sells you a 50-cent bottle of Dodson's Liver Tone under my personal guarantee that it will clean your sluggish liver better than nasty calomel; it won't make you sick and you can eat anything you want without being salivated. Your druggist guarantees that each spoonful will start your liver, clean your bowels and straighten you up by morning or you can have your money back. Children gladly take Dodson's Liver Tone because it is pleasant tasting and doesn't gripe or cramp or make them sick.

I am selling millions of bottles of Dodson's Liver Tone to people who have found that this pleasant, vegetable, liver medicine takes the place of dangerous calomel. Buy one bottle on my sound, reliable guarantee. Ask your druggist or storekeeper about me.

DIFFERENT THINGS IN MIND

Tom's Supposed Indorsement of What Lurlina Disapproved of Nearly Led to a Quarrel.

They were in the lure of the cabaret, and and she—Tom and Lurlina. The contralto was singing. Positive nonindorsement was in Lurlina's voice as she said:

"Entirely too low! Entirely!"

Surprise and unmistagable admiration mingled in Tom's reply.

"Ah, no! It's exquisite!"

A catch in her breath, amazement in her wideopen blue eyes.

"Why, Tom! How can you?"

There was almost tears in her voice.

"How can I?" he replied enthusiastically. "Indeed, how can I not?"

Amazement fled from indignation in her eyes. The chill of ice was in her tone and manner.

"Then I will thank you to take me home?"

"Why, Lurlina?" And now the amazement was in his eyes and painful eagerness in his voice. "What do you mean?"

"I mean her gown!"

A beam of light. Tom saw it all.

"Oh, Jupiter!" Could joy have better uttered? "I meant her voice!"

Thereupon the waiter came and all was forgotten.

FINE RASH ON BABY'S BODY

1341 Parkwood Pl., N. W., Washington, D. C.—"When my babe was about two weeks old I noticed a scurf on her scalp which gradually grew worse. It started with a fine rash over head and body and made her very restless at night. The rash left the thick scurf on her head. We used ——, ——, and other remedies recommended by friends, but nothing seemed to do any good.

"This continued until she was three months old and by that time it formed sort of a crust, so that her scalp never looked clean. Nothing helped until we used the Cuticura Soap to bathe her and Cuticura Ointment to anoint her. They acted like magic, clearing the scalp entirely. The trouble disappeared." (Signed) Mrs. H. L. Ration in Congress.

The ratio of representation in the lower house of congress at Washington has steadily changed since the year 1789, when the Constitution began its work, the ration was 30,000 to the representative. In 1910 the ratio was 210,000 to the representative. If the ratio did not rise the members of the lower house would in time become too numerous for business. It is for the purpose of keeping the membership within reasonable bounds that the ratio is made to keep pace with population.

GETTING DOWN TO THE FACTS

Relic Which Mr. Bradley Valued So Highly Was Not Altogether a Present.

Said Mr. Bradley: "I think a good deal of this rocking chair. It's made from wood that grew on a farm in Virginia once owned by G. Washington."

"I don't see anything extraordinary about it," said Parks, "except that it's big and ugly. How much did it cost you?"

"Nothing. That's the beauty of it. A friend of mine in Washington sent it to me. There's nothing like having good friends."

"No, I suppose not. How did he send it?"

"By express. Quite a relic, isn't it? Wood grew on one of G. Wash—"

"You paid the express charges, I suppose?"

"Of course. Wood grew on a farm that once belonged to George—"

"How much was the —"

"Farm that once belonged to George Washington in Virginia. It isn't every day you can—"

"How much expressage did you—"

"Isn't every day you can see a rocking chair made out of wood grown on a farm that once belonged to George—"

"What express charge did you have to pay?"

"Eight dollars and seventy-five cents," said Bradley, with visible reluctance.

So Disappointing.

Reginald loved his wife tenderly and devotedly, but he had to acknowledge in the inmost recesses of his heart that the hand that wielded the powder puff lost its art in the pudding basin.

"What pudding would you like tonight, love?" she cooed at breakfast time.

"Oh, anything!" he whispered desperately.

"Anything?" she reiterated, in a pained tone.

"Well, you know, old girl; anything light—only don't tire yourself out."

"You shall have your favorite—custard, dear," she promised.

Toward seven o'clock Reginald returned, but the sound of weeping and gnashing of teeth greeted his trained ear.

"Whatever is it, my dear girl," he implored, as he rushed into the kitchen.

"O-o-o-oh!" she sniveled on his waistcoat. "I've been making you custards all the afternoon, and—"

"And what, pet?"

"They all t-t-turned out sponge cake!"—St. Louis Post-Dispatch.

Greek Meets Greek.

The two oldest inhabitants were very ignorant, neither of them being able even to tell the time of day. A friend of Uncle Ben's gave him a watch, of which he was very proud. One day, before the crowd at the corner store, old Pete, being slightly jealous of such wealth and wishing to embarrass his rival, said: "Say, Ben, what time have you got?"

The other old fellow drew out his watch and turned its face toward his inquisitor. "There she be!" he exclaimed.

Pete was almost at a loss, but he made a magnificent effort and retorted: "Blame if she ain't!"—Everybody's Magazine.

A Home-Made Poison
Uric acid, unknown in the days of a simple, natural out-of-door life, is a modern poison created inside the human body by a combination of meat-eating, overwork, worry, and lack of rest. Backache or irregular urination is the first protest of weak kidneys. When the kidneys fail behind in filtering out the excess uric acid, there is danger of gravel, dropsy or Bright's disease. Doan's Kidney Pills strengthen weak kidneys, but if the diet is reduced, excesses stopped, and fresh air, exercise and sleep increased, the medicine acts more quickly. Doan's Kidney Pills have a world-wide reputation as a reliable kidney tonic.
An Alabama Case
"Every Picture Tells a Story"

T. B. Morrison, 114 W. Church St., Decatur, Ala., says: "For four years I suffered from kidney complaint and weakness of the bladder. My kidneys acted too freely, obliging me to get up three or four times at night. I had a constant pain in the small of my back and when I stooped over my back was so weak that I could hardly straighten. Doan's Kidney Pills not only relieved the trouble with the kidney secretions, but strengthened my back and made me feel better in every way. The benefit has lasted."

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

And still the world will continue to wag just the same.

The Progressive party was knocked into a cocked hat Tuesday by receiving a severe stroke of "Rooseveltitis."

As soon as the outside world ascertains how old Chilton went, watch cotton go to 15 cents per pound.

Will wonders never cease? A man who came to Clanton to vote Tuesday said that the reason the price of cotton was so low was because the Clanton authorities spent all the money for waterworks. The Democrats have been charged with bringing on the European war, but this latest charge is a caution indeed. Just such "chillun" some folks do raise!

Our Mountain Creek correspondent comes with a potato tale this week, stating that one was grown near that burg, weighing 10 1-2 pounds and he wants to see the color of the man's "peepers" who can beat it. Well, we admit that this was some "tater," but Mr. Jodie Lansford of Cooper had one at the County Fair last week (and we seen it with our own eyes) that tipped the beam at 12 pounds. Who said there wasn't any "taters?"

Mr. W. A. Candler brought into the Press office Monday some excellent paper shell pecans grown on his farm about one mile west of Clanton. Mr. Candler has 14 trees of this delicious fruit. While diversification is the order of the day it seems that more of our farmers would go into the pecan growing industry. The soil here is well adapted to the growth of pecans, and in a few years after the trees began to bear handsome returns would be realized.

That war is fought by boys is a familiar truth that we often forget. But the records of our own civil war prove it overwhelmingly. The department rolls show that in the great rebellion there were enlisted in the army of the north 2,778,309 men, and of these 25 were 10 year old and younger, 225 12 years and under, 1,523 14 years old and under, 844,891 16 years and under, 1,151,438 18 years and under, 2,159,798 21 and under and 618,511 22 years and over. Thus the average of the whole army was 19.7 years. When war thus takes away the young manhood of the country, who can estimate its cost?—Chicago Post.

The farmers club of Seymour, Ind., newly constructed, was dedicated last week with elaborate ceremonies. This is the first building of its kind in the middle west, entirely for the convenience and comfort of the farmers who go there to do their trading, and they have taken great interest in the building. There is an assembly room for farmers meetings, rest rooms for both men and women and a room set apart for children, in charge of a woman who will take care of the little ones while their mothers do their shopping. There are lunch rooms and other conveniences, and from the hearty endorsement so far received from the visiting farmers, the club is sure to score a great success.

While we must say that we regret that Chilton did not go Democratic, but we take heart and rejoice in the fact that we still have fast in the support of President Wilson's policies.

While we have not heard from Oshkosh yet, we are constrained to believe that Chilton is the only county in the universe the Progressives carried. In almost every State where an election was held the party of Roosevelt was completely snowed under, and there is hardly any breath left in its limp and dying form.

This only bears out what we have been telling our readers all along—that the Bull Moose party was fast passing away and its funeral dirge would be played before 1916. Wednesday morning's dispatches prove this beyond all peradventure.

But the question is, to what party will our Bull Moose friends in Chilton now turn for salvation?

Every farmer who owns his farm ought to have printed stationery, with his name, the name of his postoffice properly given. The printed heading might also give the names of whatever crops he specializes in, or his specialties in stock. Neatly printed stationery gives you a personalty and a standing with any person or firm whom you write and insures the proper reading of your name and address.

If you wish to write to your congressman or member of the legislature, or if you have a request to make of your county superintendent of schools, or if you wish information from any business house, in any case your letter will have increased weight and receive more and quicker attention if you use printed stationery. Get the habit. Come into the Press office and have us print you 500 sheets of good paper with envelopes to match. It will be one of the best investments you ever made "The Editorials of J. R. H." is the title of a new Holiday Book which will soon be issued from the press of Roberts & Son, the well known publishers of Birmingham. The author is J. R. Hornady, whose illustrated editorials have occupied a page in the Sunday issue of the Birmingham News for the past year and have attracted nation wide interest. The Sunday News has become one of the popular papers in the South, and these able editorials by "J. R. H." have had lots to do with its great popularity.

The book, which is now "on the press," so to speak, will appear in three bindings, cloth, half leather and full leather, and will be beautifully illustrated with original drawings by Gilbert Edge, an artist of exceptional ability. According to the publisher's announcement, the book will not be on general sale, but will be a "Subscription Edition," printed for those who subscribe for it now, and bound according to their specifications. A handsome prospectus descriptive of the book will be sent by Roberts & Son on request.

COUNTY WARDEN RECEIVES INSTRUCTIONS

Mr. J. P. Morrow, County Game Warden, Receives The Following Letter From John H. Wallace, Jr., State Game Commissioner.

Montgomery, Ala.

My Dear Sir:

The time is fast approaching when the season on all the game birds and animals, that can be legally taken, will be open. Many hunters pretending to be sportsmen will seek to take game just before the closed season expires. Be on the lookout for such men, and when they are apprehended, prosecute them to the extent of the law. Be especially diligent in seeing that every hunter is properly equipped with a license as required by law.

Be certain to give notice through all your county papers that the hunting season is about to open and that all who hunt outside of the limits of their voting precinct must first secure a hunitng license. I am sure that if you will direct the attention of the editors of your papers to the importance of bird and game conservation, they will be of valuable assistance in compelling an observance of the law.

Please give the matters to which your notice is herein directed your prompt attention.

Very truly yours,
JOHN H. WALLACE, JR.,
Commissioner

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

"Three years ago when I was living in Pittsburgh one of my children had a hard cold and coughed dreadfully. Upon the advice of a druggist I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it benefitted him at once. I find it the best cough medicine for children because it is pleasant to take. They do not object to taking it," writes Mrs. Lafayette Tuck, Homer City, Pa. This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. Sold by all dealers.

Stumps On Rusty Sidewalk Nail

While working on a well digging machine a Minnesota man jumped upon a rusty sidewalk spike. The nail drove part of his black wollen sock far up into his foot. He removed as much of the sock as he could, put on Allan's Ulcerine Salve and kept right on with his work. The salve drew out parts of the sock and all other poisons and in a week his foot was healed.

This salve is one of the oldest remedies in America and since 1869 it has been known as the only salve powerful enough to cure chronic ulcers and old sores of long standing.

Allan's Ulcerine Salve acts by drawing out the poisons and healing the sore from the bottom up. It is so powerful that it heals new cuts and sores in one third the time that common salves and liniments take. And it heals burns and scalds without a scar. Sold by Upchurch Drug Co., and other leading druggists.

WORLD MISSION OF CHIVALRY

Of Much Worth If Only to Create the Useful Romance of Action.

Chivalry served to draw out and develop those free, bold spirits whose talents could not have been evoked by the disputations of the schoolmen nor the mortifications of the religious zealots, says the Engineering Magazine. It created a romance of action to match the saint's moral paradise and evoked poetry and the arts to celebrate its charms. The love of the beautiful which it begot caused a hospitable reception to be given in Europe to the refinements brought from the East by the returning crusaders, which caused the first slight stirring of international trade.

The enthusiasm which the many-sided ideal of chivalry evoked with its galaxy of virtues, may be seen, in literature, in the unfolding of the themes of the simple Aryan folk tales, and the prose romances of the twelfth and thirteenth centuries, into the sensuous beauty of Provencal poetry and the delicacy and pathos of Plutarch and Dante. Chivalry embellished with romance the lives of its half-legendary founders, Charlemagne, Siegfried and Arthur. It supplied the conception of virtue sung in Chaucer's Pilgrimage, Malory's "Morte D'Arthur" and Spenser's "Faerie Queene." In the world of action chivalry animated the crusades, dispensed justice throughout Europe for 400 years, purified court life and made much of the warfare of the middle ages peculiarly humane and noble. Its enthusiasm burned into brilliancy in such characters as Richard and Blondel, the Black Prince and his father, Tancred, Godfrey of Bouillon, Gaston de Foix, Bayard and Warwick, and in a thousand forgotten commanders of the Templars, the Knights of St. John and the Teutonic Knights.

WHEN YOU CUT YOUR COTTON CROP
WHAT TO DO AND HOW TO DO IT

"King Cotton" has been dethroned (for the time being at least) and the farmers of the South are confronted with the gigantic task of diversifying their crops next year in order to live and prosper.

To some this will be easy, for they have practiced diversification for many years. But those who have raised cotton and cotton only are at a loss to know just what to do and how to do it.

For the benefit of this class of farmers The Tri-Weekly Constitution, the great farm paper which goes three times a week to the farmer's home with all the news of the world—the great war in Europe, what is being done to relieve the cotton problem, what is being done to curtail the cotton crop next year, and every other item of news worth chronicling—is now running a great series of articles on diversified farming.

These articles are written by farmers who move made a success at raising other things than cotton, and some of them have become rich. They tell you what to do and how to do it. Their experience will be worth much to you if you are in a quandary as to what method of diversification to follow.

The Press has arranged to club with the Tri-Weekly Constitution. For $2 you can get The Tri-Weekly Constitution from now to January 1, 1915, and the Press for one year, and have your choice from The Tri-Weekly long list of valuable premiums free. Call at our office, inspect this premium list, and subscribe at once.

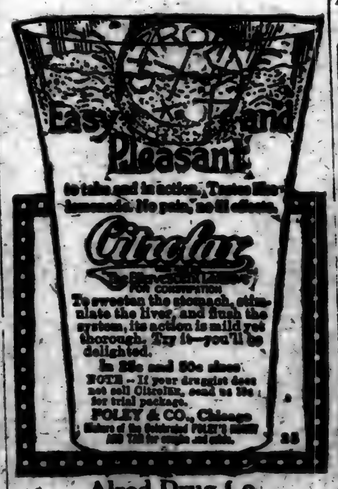
NOTICE



All the ladies of Clanton are earnestly urged and requested by the Civic Improvement Association to be present at the cemetery next Tuesday for the purpose of cleaning off the grounds. This is indeed a most laudable move and every lady of Clanton who desires to see our cemetery kept clean and the grounds beautified should take pride in attending on the above date. The second Tuesday in each month has been set apart as a day for work at the cemetery and it is hoped that all who can will attend and show their interest in this matter.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and despondent. Here are a few words of hope and cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Bowers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them my digestion is fine." For sale by all dealers.

OBITUARY

On October 28th the death angel visited the home of Mr. and Mrs. J. R. Scott and took from them their dear little boy. He was never very strong yet his death was a severe shock; he was the light of the home, the idol of mother and father's heart, the pride of their lives; but with all that loving hands and a skilled physician could do would not save the child, God in His infinite wisdom saw fit to call little Robert home where there will be no pain or sorrow; where sin cannot enter. And we will say to the grief-stricken parents, weep not, for your child is not dead but sleeping, soon to awake with the angels in the home prepared for such as he. God doeth all things for the best. We cannot call him back, but ere long we can go to him, and may God bless and comfort you all is the prayer of sympathizing friends.

Foley's Honey and Tar Compound for Croup.

COTTON GROWERS GET MONEY

National Banks Are Reaching Out Helping Hand and Extending Financial Aid to Farmers—Loans on Warehouse Receipts.

The hearts of the people of the South have been gladdened and a feeling of optimism is permeating the atmosphere. The heavy financial depression which gripped the cotton states during the early part of September is gradually being relieved and money is becoming freer. The banking institutions of the southern states are coming to the aid of the cotton growers with cash, advancing loans on cotton warehouse receipts.

Although it will take some time for the effect of the money being put into circulation to be felt to any great extent, the assurance that something is being done to relieve the situation has lent courage to the business man as well as to the farmer. Because of the fact that the cotton must be hauled to town and properly warehoused before loans will be made on the staple the work of advancing loans has been necessarily slow.

According to dispatches from various portions of the cotton belt there have been thousands of bales retired from the open market and money advanced to the growers at the rate of six cents a pound, or approximately $30 a bale. This money is represented principally by the Aldrich-Vreeland currency furnished the national banks by the United States treasury department. Under the provisions of this currency measure the cotton must be properly warehoused before loans can be made upon it.

Absence of Cash Felt.

It has been the absence of cash that has most greatly affected the South. There never has been a time since the European war began when there was not a demand for the wares of the merchant, but no one had money to pay for them. This condition was most seriously felt in the cities. In the country towns the merchants rallied to the aid of the farmers and supplied their immediate wants by accepting cotton in payment of their purchases. Old accounts were also settled with cotton. But soon the average country merchant had more cotton on hand than he knew what to do with. He also found it difficult to purchase from the wholesale houses and the jobbers as they were not prepared to take cotton from the merchant.

The prospects are now that this condition of affairs will soon undergo a change. Instead of trading his cotton to the merchant for the necessities of life the farmer is placing his bales in the nearest warehouse. The receipts he receives from the warehouse he takes to the bank he has been in the habit of carrying on his financial transactions with, using them as a collateral for borrowing money. In this manner real money is being put into circulation.

In Georgia and a portion of Tennessee this condition of affairs is especially true. The national banks are reaching out a helping hand and extending aid to the distressed farmer. Following a recent meeting of the currency association of Georgia an announcement was made that the national banks of this state and a part of Tennessee are making loans on cotton warehouse receipts. These loans are being made on the basis of six cents a pound.

Cotton Must Be Stored.

The only provision that has been stipulated by these banks is that the warehouse in which the cotton is stored must be aceptable to the bank. A great number of these loans are being made through the agency banks of the national institutions which gives it a much wider scope of operation. While it is true that this work has been going on for some weeks, the fact did not become generally known until the announcement made recently by the currency association.

It has been estimated that the national banks have loaned something like $50,000,000 on cotton within the past few weeks. There is still a large amount of available currency on hand in the banks that can be loaned on cotton. According to the figures recently issued by the United States department of agriculture this year's crop is estimated at approximately $750,000,000, figuring on a basis of ten cents a pound.

An Atlanta state bank was one of the first to offer any real financial aid to the cotton farmers of the South. The activities of this bank, however, was confined to its customers in Georgia alone. This bank is loaning money on cotton at six cents a pound and storing the cotton in its own warehouses in Atlanta. The bank officials say they will loan as much as $30,000,000 to the cotton growers of Georgia who are members of this bank.

According to the offer of this bank it will lend money to the grower at six cents a pound. The carrying charges of interest will be charged on the notes which will mature July 1, 1915. At the expiration of that time the borrower will have the option of extending the note to a longer period. The borrower will have the privilege of selling his cotton at any time he desires, providing he can get a release from the bank to pay off the note and interest. The bank also offers to sell cotton for any of the borrowers without additional charge.

Festus J. Wade Plan.

The Festus J. Wade plan for relieving the financial situation in the South is receiving universal attention at the present time. It has received the indorsement of President Wilson, Secretary of the Treasury McAdoo and the members of the federal reserve board. The plan has also been enthusiastically received by bankers in various cities throughout the cotton territory and bids fair to be a success.

According to the plan of Festus J. Wade, the St. Louis banker, a pool will be raised by subscription from the banks of the South and the other sections of the country. This pool is to be represented by agency banks in all parts of the cotton territory. These agency banks will, according to this plan, make loans on cotton warehouse receipts. The agency banks will then forward the warehouse receipts together with insurance papers to the headquarters of the pool and be reimbursed for the money advanced to the farmer.

WOMEN BOOST COTTON GOODS

Merchants of Cities Join Movement to Popularize Wearing of Cotton-Made Garments.

The wearing of more cotton-made apparel is a movement that was started by the southern women in Washington, and which has been taken up enthusiastically by the women in all sections of the country. Hand in hand with this movement was one instigated by the dry-goods merchants in all of the large cities and in a great number of the smaller cities to popularize the wearing of cotton-made garments.

A cotton styles show was recently held in Washington. The gowns displayed at this show, held in one of the hotels in Washington, will be worn by the official women of that city at a cotton ball to be held during December. Washingtonians thronged the styles show and gazed in wonder at the many dainty creations made exclusively from cotton materials by the modistes. In other cities cotton balls have been the leading social functions, and the popularizing of cotton-made garments has become a national movement.

The department stores in the large cities joined heartily in the movement. Some of the stores set aside a week when special sales of cotton goods and cotton-made garments were held. Much space was used in their show-windows for the display of the great variety of garments made from cotton goods. Though general in character, both of these movements have had a wholesome effect in stimulating the demand for cotton-made goods, which, of course, will mean the consumption of thousands of additional bales by American mills.

In New York City the Federation of Women's clubs with a membership of about 100,000 have taken up the movement to encourage buying more cotton goods and the wearing of more garments made from cotton cloth. The officers of this organization have sent an urgent appeal to the members asking them to aid their southern sisters by using cotton goods whenever possible.

The American Association of Cotton Manufacturers have been awake to the opportunities which the inability of the European countries to use American cotton has afforded them, and are making preparations for a greater output of cotton cloth than has ever been produced by American mills. During a recent meeting of the national association at Lenox, Mass., the question of the manufacture of more cotton cloth and the providing of markets for their output was taken into consideration.

Plan for Salvation.

When the cotton situation became critical in South Carolina and aid from the federal government seemed hopeless, Governor Cole Blease called a special session of the legislature. Almost every senator and representative came to the capital with some great plan for the salvation of the state from the disaster which threatened it by the demoralization of the cotton market.

From among the great mass of bills that were presented, two became the most prominent. One provided a state bond issue to valorize the 1914 crop, and the other to make it a misdemeanor to plant cotton during 1915. While the legislators appeared in favor of the reduction of the cotton acreage, the fact that they killed the bill showed that they were not in favor of doing away with the cotton crop entirely in 1915.

Egypt Also Affected.

The southern cotton growers have not been the only ones to suffer from the failure of the cotton market, for word has been received that Egypt also has been seriously affected. This country in the far East grows a considerable quantity of the Sea Island staple which is disposed of almost entirely through the London exchange.

Egypt has not only suffered from the failure to sell their product, but the pink boll worm played havoc with the crop. It is reported that the growers of Egypt made only one-half of their normal crop. When the Egyptians realized the situation, the ministry of agriculture in Cairo issued a proclamation to the cotton growers calling upon them to destroy the pink boll worm. Each day [illegible]

BRITISH CRUISER SUNK BY TORPEDO

German Submarine Gets Another Ship of The British Navy In The Straits Of Dover.

TURKEY RECEIVES ULTIMATUM

From Russia And Great Britain—War May Follow—Battle Of Yser Resumed

The war situation in Europe becomes more complicated each day. Russia and Great Britain have sent an ultimatum to Turkey calling on her to explain the bombardment of the Russian ports, demanding the dismissal of German officers in the Turkish navy and the dismantling of the German cruisers, Breslau and Goeben, now in Turkish waters. It is now predicted that Italy, Greece, Roumania and probably Bulgaria, will join the allies and wage war on Turkey.

After a rest of several days the great masses of troops of the allied and German armies assembled along the Yser river have resumed fighting. The Germans, it is said, have been reinforced and will make another desperate attempt to capture the French seaports. Another British cruiser has been sent to the bottom of the sea by a German submarine. This time the attack was made in the Straits of Dover. England is greatly stirred over the incident as the presence of German submarines in the straits will greatly endanger the movement of the ships between England and France.

The battle along the Yser river has been one of the hardest fought since the Germans invaded Belgium and France. It is necessary for the Germans to gain control of the French sea coast in order to carry out their plans for a campaign against the British Isles. Large bodies of German troops have been hurled against the allies and the characteristic German energy has been displayed by the kaiser's soldiers in their efforts to gain these most coveted positions. The casualties on both sides in this fighting have been tremendous, thousands of soldiers having been killed in the entrenched positions.

A retaliation on the Germans for their activities in dropping bombs upon Paris and other French towns were visited upon the Germans by the French. A bevy of French airmen flew over the German positions near Dunkirk, dropping bombs upon the German army headquarters, forcing the officers to flee to the woods. Bombs were then dropped into the trees in the woods. It is not known whether any German officers were killed.

In east Prussia, Galicia and Russian Poland, the fighting between the Germans and Russians continue with all its fury. It has been officially announced from Berlin that the Germans have retreated from Russian Poland. The Russians claim the German retreat was in the form of a riot and that thousands of soldiers were slain while fleeing before the Russian hosts. Progress is also claimed by the Russians in east Prussia against the Germans. The Austro-German forces in Galicia have been unsuccessful in their attempts to drive the Russians from Galicia, according to Russian advices.

One of the saddest spectacles of the war is the plight of the Belgian nation. The little army of Belgium has been driven entirely from its native heath and is now fighting in the ranks of the allies in France. Holland and England is overcrowded with starving, homeless Belgians who have fled from their devastated country. All possible aid is being rendered these unfortunate people by England and Holland. King Albert of Belgium has sent an appeal to the people of the United States asking for food and clothing for his people.

An idea of the appalling loss of life occasioned by the European war can be obtained from the latest casualty report from Berlin, which states that the losses in the German army last week were 62,000 men and that the total loss of life since the war started is 423,000 men. Based upon the belief that the losses of the allies were about the same, it is estimated that more than a million and a half men have lost their lives fighting in the present war.

Ban On Exports By Canada.

Ottawa.—The Canadian government placed an embargo on the exportation to any country at war with Great Britain of any articles which will be of use to them in prosecuting the war. A far-reaching contraband of war order, adopted by the Dominion cabinet, also prohibits the exportation of contraband to any neutral country which would in turn re-export the materials to Great Britain's enemies.

Sheep-Lined Coats For England.

St. Paul, Minn.—Orders for an unlimited number of sheep-lined coats have been placed with four local firms by the British and French governments, it was learned.

Torpedo Sinks British Cruiser.

London.—The daring of German submarines lurking along the French coast on the Straits of Dover to get a shot at British ships engaged in bombarding the German positions in Belgium was rewarded when one sank the light cruiser Hermes as she was returning from Dunkirk. Most of the crew were rescued.

The Hermes was a comparatively old vessel and from a naval viewpoint was of no great value, but the fact that she was attacked so near home indicates that the German submarines must have a base somewhere on that part of the Belgian coast, occupied by German troops, from which they can menace ships of the allies passing between England and France. Only a few days ago one sank the French steamer Admiral Ganteaume, which was carrying refugees from Calais.

How many submarines the Germans have in these waters is not known, but several have been seen recently. When ships are guarded by torpedo boat destroyers, as are those engaged in bombarding the German positions, they are comparatively safe, but the opportunity of the submarines come when one is caught alone.

The cruiser Hermes is the seventh British cruiser destroyed by German submarines or mines. Others in the list are the Amphion, sunk by a mine on August 6; the Pathfinder, sunk by a submarine September 5; the Cressy, Hogue and Aboukir, sunk by a German submarine September 22, and the Hawke, sunk by a submarine October 15.

Ultimatum Sent To Turkey

London.—Both Great Britain and Russia have presented the following demands to the sublime porte:

An explanation of Turkey's naval action in the Black sea; the dismissal of German officers from Turkish ships, and the dismantling of the cruisers Goeben and Breslau, said to have been purchased by Turkey and Germany. Failing to receive satisfaction of these demands, diplomatic relations with Turkey will be severed by Great Britain and Russia.

Egypt Annexed By Turkey

London.—Turkey has formally annexed Egypt, according to a German official statement which has been received from Berlin by the Marconi Wireless Telegraph company.

Berlin Delighted With Turkey

Berlin.—Announcement that Turkey had entered the war caused much enthusiasm in Berlin. A large crowd marched to the Turkish embassy, cheering for the sultan. The Turkish ambassador in an address from the balcony of the embassy expressed his gratitude for the manifestation.

German Bombs Kill Women

London.—Two German aeroplanes dropped two bombs at Bethune, France, according to the correspondents of the Daily Mail. The first failed to explode, but the second, which fell among market women, killed nineteen of them, and injured forty others. Two bombs were also dropped at Dunkirk, on the same day from a Taube machine, 2,000 feet up in the air. A woman and child were killed and all the windows in the neighborhood were [illegible]. Battle Of The Yser Resumed

London.—Rested, and with fresh reinforcements supporting them, the German troops who have been battling in Belgium and the north of France, are renewing their efforts to push their way through the French, British and Belgian lines to ports on the English channel.

Not only here, but in the Argonne region and the Woevre district, the fighting has been of the fiercest character.

In all these engagements the dead and wounded are multiplying, but thousands are taking their places. The transport of the wounded into the zone of safety where they can receive proper attention is proving a problem that has not been solved; hospitals and surgeons are inadequate for the care of those who have fallen.

Italian Cabinet Has Resigned

London.—The Italian cabinet has resigned according to a Reuter's dispatch from Rome.

Rome.—Signor Rubini, minister of the treasury, has sent his resignation to Premier Salandra. Efforts were made at the council of ministers to have him withdraw it, but he declined.

The Italian cabinet has suffered from same division of opinion as exists in the country at large. Italy's neutrality has been approved by the whole cabinet, but some of the ministers favored military preparations at any cost, while others supported the idea that the risk of Italy becoming involved through the measures was disproportionate to any advantage she might gain.

A definite decision regarding the ministerial crisis awaits the return of King Victor Emmanuel. The belief is held here that the resignation of the entire cabinet is not far off and that the king will entrust Premier Salandra to organize a new ministry. In this way the premier would be free to select ministers of a mind to meet the present situation with unanimity.

Russian Army Reports Progress

Petrograd.—The following communication was issued by general headquarters:

"On the east Prussian front the plan for breaking through the center of our fortified position around Bakalarzewo projected by the enemy has failed. During five days of unsuccessful attacks the Germans suffered immense losses. In many places the great accumulations of German dead in front of our trenches caused a moderation of our fire.

"Our troops have progressed in several districts on the east Prussian front.

"Beyond the Vistula we occupy strongly the towns of Gostynya, Lenczica, Lods and Ostroveso."

Protests Against U. S. Passports

Washington.—Complaint that many Germans posing as British subjects are receiving passports out of Germany from American diplomatic agents was filed at the state department by Sir Cecil Spring-Rice, the British ambassador. Information has reached the embassy that many aliens have crossed the channel to England with passports obtained by misrepresentation. Acting Secretary of State Lansing said the American officials in Germany would be cautioned to exercise vigilance.

Greece Will Reoccupy Epirus

London.—The Greek diplomatic representatives at the capitals of the great powers have given official notice of the decision of the Hellenic government to reoccupy Epirus, from which the Greek troops were withdrawn in March in consequence of the ultimatum presented at that time by the powers, [illegible]

Demands Return of Fees.

Auditor C. Brooks Smith wrote to Daniel W. Troy, special counsel for the state, and demanded the return to the treasury of $16,530.79, representing the amount which the latter has drawn in special attorney's fees since his employment in 1911. Auditor Smith also demanded of Mr. Troy the return of $2446.37, which he and R. B. Evins of Greensboro drew jointly for special counsel services.

Similar letters were sent out by Auditor Smith to about a dozen other attorneys in Alabama, who have drawn money from the state for special counsel services. Altogether, the state has paid out in attorney's fees something like $40,000, all of which Auditor Smith has asked to be returned to the treasury.

Auditor Smith's letter to the various special counsel are based on a recent decision of the supreme court, declaring the act under which they were employed unconstitutional. The supreme court's decision was announced some months ago.

Says Judiciary Costs Too Much.

The matter of the reformation and reorganization of the judiciary system of the state is certain to hold the attention of the next legislature, according to the statement of several members-elect of this body.

The judiciary system of the state costs the taxpayers and litigants several million of dollars annually, which, it is held by some new members of the legislature, is an exorbitant figure for the administration of justice in a state with a population of less than 2,200,000.

Figures recently compiled by J. T. Gorman of the office of examiner of public accounts, show that for the fiscal year ending September 30, the state paid the following salaries to the state judicial offices:

7	Supreme court judges	$ 34,784.94
3	Court of appeal judges	15,000.00
18	Circuit court judges	55,000.00
17	City court judges	46,900.00
10	Law and equity court judges	25,000.00
15	Circuit court solicitors	35,966.66
2	County solicitors	3,800.00
5	Chancellors	15,991.33
	Special judges	344.35
	Special solicitors	2,450.00
	Reporter supreme court	4,950.00
3	Clerks supreme court	6,000.00
5	Employes supreme court	7,480.00
	Stenographers supreme court	780.00
	Clerk, secretary and temporary clerk, court of appeals	5,000.00
	Total	$259,447.28

For the four fiscal years from October 1, 1910, to September 30, 1914, the state has paid the following judicial salaries:

Supreme court judges	$ 164,516.94
Court of appeals judges	53,373.63
Circuit court judges	219,419.94
City court judges	187,201.25
Law and equity court judges	112,433.12
Circuit solicitors	114,192.46
County solicitors	13,300.00
Chancellors	63,966.66
Special judges	5,398.74

Brooke Made Examiner

H. Y. Brooke was appointed federal examiner of banks for the three regional banks at Atlanta, Richmond and Dallas and soon will retire from the service of the State to undertake his new duties.

The State examiners are well up with their work, according to Governor O'Neal, and he does not deem it necessary to fill the vcaancy to be created by the withdrawal of Mr. Brooke. This will leave the choice of the new examiner to Mr. Henderson, if the number of examiners is not changed.

The resignation of Mr. Brooke will become effective on November 15.

OPPOSE REDUCTION COTTON ACREAGE

New Legislature Opposes Issuance of Bonds to Aid the Cotton Situation.

EXTRA SESSION OPPOSED

Governor Gets Sentiment of Legislature in Reply to Letter Sent Out Asking Their Opinion.

Montgomery. — Alabama's next legislature is opposed to the issuance of bonds by the State to relieve the present cotton situation. The legislature is also opposed to the enactment of laws eliminating the planting of cotton in the State next year and likewise any legislative action looking to material reduction of acreage. Moreover, the majority of the members of the next legislature is opposed to an extra session.

This much has been learned from a large number of letters which the members have written the governor in answer to his communication sent out some days ago, in which he asked their opinion as to the advisability of calling a special session for the purpose of considering the cotton situation.

The governor has had about 100 letters from the new members. These letters indicate, according to the governor, that the members of the legislature do not believe they can provide the necsesary relief. While all the letters have not yet been tabulated, the chief executive has gone through a sufficint number to ascertain, beyond any doubt, the opinion of the majority in regard to the subject.

CAN'T LIMIT COTTON ACREAGE.

Answers Letter From Governor on Subject

Montgomery.—Declaring that the supreme court of the United States has often held that "to deprive one of the use of property is a violation of the provision of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution," Attorney General Robert C. Brickell, in answer to a letter from the governor, has held that in his opinion the legislature of Alabama cannot "prohibit the production of cotton in 1915, or reduce the cotton production for the ensuing year."

"I cannot believe that either the prohibition of the production of cotton or the limiting of the number of acres cultivated could be accomplished without a violation of the fourteenth amendment to the constitution of the United States," said Mr. Brickell, "as the result of such an act would be to deprive persons of the use of his property without due process of law."

The Attorney General further expressed the opinion that the legislature could not place a tax upon cotton alone, or enact a statute "which provided that a lien should not be created upon a growing crop of cotton, which statute did not place such a tax upon all other farm products."

NEGROES PAY DEATH PENALTY.

Bennie Ward and Wash Gray Hanged for Robbery of Merchant.

Birmingham.—"You shore are killing an innocent nigger," was the statement made by Wash Gray as he stood on the scaffold just before Sheriff McAdory pulled the lever that sent the negro into eternity. Bennie Ward in a lengthy talk from the scaffold confessed his guilt and said he was willing to die for his crimes. He declared that Wash Gray had nothing to do with the crime for which he was to be hanged.

The double hanging took place in the yard of the Jefferson county jail and was witnessed by about 150 persons.

THREE KILLED IN MINES

Pocket of Gas in Coleanor Mines Explodes.

Birmingham. — Three men were killed by an explosion of a pocket of gas in the Coleanor mines of the Blocton-Cahaba Coal Company, in Bibb county. A report of the accident was immediately made to the office of C. H. Nesbitt, chief mine inspector.

ARREST 10 FOR NEGRO'S DEATH.

Aged Negro Is Found Dead Near Tilden.

Selma.—Sixteen arrests have been made by the Sheriff's office of Dallas county in connection with the murder of an aged negro near Tilden, in the southern part of the county. Deputy Sheriff Alston, who has been investigating the murder, brought to the county jail fifteen of the negroes under arrest. Only two of the negroes are believed to be implicated in the actual crime.

EXPENSES ABOVE INCOME

Expenditures Last Year Exceeded Collections.

Montgomery.—Expenditures of the state last year exceeded collections from all sources to the amount of $436,705.79, while the disbursements for the past year have exceeded receipts by $1,185,048.24, according to the annual report of C. Brooks Smith, state auditor. Mr. Smith's report for the year ending September 30 last was presented to the governor.

The auditor's report shows that the entire receipts for the fiscal year were $6,607,001.12, and that the total disbursements, after deducting $29,818.15 for pension warrants returned and cancelled (which was credited to the pension fund), was $7,058,706.91, or an excess in disbursements over receipts of $436,705.79. The previous year the total receipts were $6,288,992.07, and that year the disbursements exceeded collections by $256,903.67, making nearly $750,000 excess of disbursements over receipts in two years.

The balance in the treasury at the close of business on September 30 last was $130,299.15; the previous year it was $99,267.54, according to the report. The outstanding warrants on October 1 were $950,202.01, and a temporary loan of $100,000.

Jefferson county led all other counties in the payment of money into the treasury, Auditor Smith's report showing that Jefferson paid in taxes for the year ending September 30, last, $1,047,579.78, or about one-fourth of all the money paid into the treasury by all the 67 counties of Alabama, the total being $4,592,554.06. Montgomery paid into the treasury $294,658.55; Mobile, 0346,611.42, and Tuscaloosa, the fourth largest, paid $115,012.04.

HIGH COURTS BEGIN NOV. 9.

New Judges of Different Courts Assume Duties at Different Times.

Montgomery.—The judicial department of the State will get under way November 9, in regular autumn session and cases from the counties of Baldwin, Clarke, Mobile, Monroe and Washington are slated for first consideration.

A peculiarity in the manner of filling vacancies on the two benches is manifest in that the candidate for the Supreme Court, although elected at the November general election, does not take his seat until January, while the candidate for the bench of the Appellate Court, elected at the same time, takes his place on the bench immediately following the election. It has been intimated that an attempt will be made soon to alter the custom so that the members of the separate courts may enter upon their duties simultaneously.

GOOD YEAR IN ROAD BUILDING.

The Day of the Old Mud Road Is Fast Passing.

Montgomery.—The year of 1914 has been the state's best year in good road building. Counties that had done little in the improvement of their highways have waked up. During the summer just passed the work of building modern roads has been pushed and it will doubtless continue right up to the end of December.

The day of the old mud road is fast passing. Farm lands in Alabama are steadily enhancing in value, and in counties where the macadam road is much in evidence values, it is stated, have doubled within the last few years.

TOWNS FORM LEAGUE.

Movement for Better Municipal Government Started at University.

University.—Delegates from the various cities and towns of Alabama will meet at the University of Alabama and in Tuscaloosa on December 3rd and 4th for the purpose of organizing a league of the municipalities of the State of Alabama. The call for the meeting is being sent out by Professor George Jacob Davis, Jr., dean of the college of engineering of the University, and the meeting will be held under the auspices of the institution.

HINT EASY TO UNDERSTAND

English Farmer Had Made Old Mistake of Counting Chickens Before They Were Hatched.

An old farmer in the Midlands was anxious to marry, but could not make up his mind between the charms of a certain comely widow in the neighborhood and her equally charming daughter.

At last he resolved to let chance solve the problem.

"I'll ax th' one I fust sees a-goin' in," he muttered, and off he started on his amatory errand. But when he arrived both mother and daughter were sitting in the doorway.

"Dang it!" he cried. "Here was I comin' to ax one o' 'ee to marry me, an' I swore the fust 'un should ha' the chance. But there ye both be together. I'll shet my eyes now, an' the one as doan't want me mun go indoors. Th' one as stays is my wife to be."

Shutting his eyes the old farmer counted ten solemnly; there was a subdued chuckle, but when he opened them both women had gone.—London Tit-Bits.

RESINOL WILL SURELY STOP THAT ITCHING

What blessed relief! The moment resinol ointment touches itching skin, the itching stops and healing begins. That is why doctors have prescribed it successfully for nineteen years in even the severest, stubbornest cases of eczema, tetter, ringworm, rashes and other tormenting, unsightly skin-eruptions. With the help of warm baths with resinol soap, resinol ointment restores the skin or scalp to perfect health and comfort, quickly, easily and at little cost. At all druggists.—Adv.

How Ice Man Got the Booze.

The day was hot and the patient ice man had taken his usual care in getting the ice in the box just right and then mopping up the little water that got on the floor in the operation. He really was a good ice man and deserved to be rewarded.

"Here is a bottle of beer; you need it on a hot day like this," said the housewife.

"I can't accept anything from patrons, lady," the ice man said, as he eyed the bottle lovingly.

"Well, if that is orders, all right," the customer said.

Still the ice man pondered. "But," he added, as an afterthought, "if you put it on the back porch I'll steal it. There isn't any rule against stealing things."—Indianapolis News.

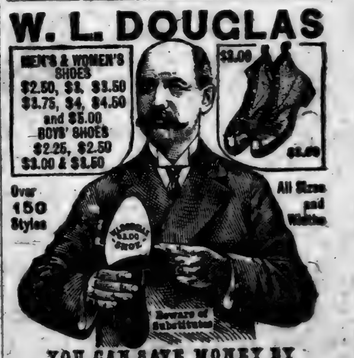
Glory.



Some worriors, having been at war quite awhile, were beginning to tire of the sport.

"There's glory enough for all!" exclaimed the more impulsive among them.

But others were more cautious. "Let's keep on killing and desolating awhile longer and make sure!" urged these.

It was the counsel of prudence which prevailed, the world being notified that the conditions were not, as yet, quite ripe for peace.

Our Reputation

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company is not only the name of a railroad; it is the sign of standard service in Southern Transportation.

Through long and intimate association with the general public in the Passenger Department we have, to our regret, made some enemies. However, those who condemn us will do us the justice to affirm that our passenger service can not be excelled by any other railroad in the South.

Through long and intimate dealings with shippers of freight we have, much to our regret, made some enemies. But those who disprove our methods and policies will do us the justice to affirm that the freight facilities of the L. & N. Railroad Co. can not be surpassed by any railroad in the South.

This has reference only to those who disagree with us. This disagreement arises sometimes from our unintentional negligence, sometimes from our error in judgment and sometimes from the disposition of the individual himself to find fault.

Through our long and intimate association with the general public we have made thousands of friends due to the high character of the service we render in both the Freight and Passenger Departments. We appreciate the praise accorded us by our friends and endeavor to profit by the criticism of those who disagree with us.

Whatever may be our course in this regard we at all times exert our every effort to not only maintain the present high standard of our service but to so improve and enlarge on it that we will keep abreast of the times and contribute to the more rapid development of the business interests of the South.

Our hope is for mutual prosperity and close co-operation of all the people.

SIMPLE ENGLISH NOT NEEDED

Dub Reporter Got Something of a Jolt in His Interview With Educated Chinaman.

Two San Francisco reporters were assigned to call on Chinamen and interview them on an immigration measure pending in congress. One of the reporters was a cub and an Easterner, while the other, an experienced man, assumed the management of the assignment.

"Gates," he said, after they had invaded several Chinese shops without any important result, "yonder is a tea-store. Beat it over by there and talk to the boss about Chinese voting. I'll go in next door. Remember to use the very simplest English you got."

The cub went inside the tea-shop and thus addressed the proprietor:

"John, how? Me—me—Telegraph, John! Newspape—savvy, John? Newspape—print things. Un'stan'? We want know what John think about Chinaman—vote—all same Melican man. What John think—Chinaman—vote, see? Savvy, John? Vote? What think?

The Chinaman listened to all this with profound gravity and then replied:

"The question of granting the right of suffrage to Chinese citizens who have come to the United States with the avowed intention of making this country their permanent home is one that has occupied the attention of thoughtful men of all parties for years, and it may in time become of paramount importance. At present, however, it seems to me that there is no exigency requiring an expression of opinion from me upon this subject. You will please excuse me."

The cub went outside and leaned against a lamp-post to rest and recover from a sudden faintness. His fellow reporter had purposely steered him against one of the best educated Chinamen in the United States.

WIND USED TO MAKE MUSIC

Investigation Has Disclosed Just How the Pressure Required May Be Ascertained.

In an interesting article in the Philosophical Magazine, Mr. Foord refers to Doctor Stone's table of wind pressure required to play various notes of the scale on various instruments. The table indicates that as the notes rise higher in the scale the air pressure necessary to produce them increases with most wind instruments, although not with all. In the clarinet, for example, the pressure decreases from the low notes to the high ones, varying from 15 inches of water to 8 inches.

Mr. Foord repeated these experiments on the clarinet and saxophone, playing the whole range of notes first loudly and then softly. For the clarinet it is found that the pressures fall as the notes rise, agreeing with Doctor Stone's table, although the inverse law holds good for the oboe, bassoon, horn, cornet, trumpet, euphonium and bombardon.

With the saxophone it is found that the pressures corresponding to notes at the beginning and end of the register are equal, the pressure rising to a maximum at the note D about halfway through the scale.

Composing Letters.

It is related of a merchant that, impatient at the long delay of a customer in settling his accounts with him, he said at last to his young clerk, "Write to that man and tell him that I can wait no longer!" "What shall I write to him?" the young man asked. The merchant was hurried and answered crossly and without thought, "Something or nothing, and that soon!" In a few days a check came from the delinquent, paying the entire amount of his indebtedness. Surprised, the merchant asked his clerk, "What did you write to that man?" "Just what you told me to," the young man answered. "I did not tell you what to write." "Yes, you did; you said, 'Something or nothing, and that soon.' I wrote that."

True, O Uncle Joshua, it takes some one more wise than a fool to "compose a letter."—Atlantic.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

Our Reputation

The Louisville & Nashville Railroad Company is not only the name of a railroad; it is the sign of standard service in Southern Transportation.

Through long and intimate association with the general public in the Passenger Department we have, to our regret, made some enemies. However, those who condemn us will do us the justice to affirm that our passenger service can not be excelled by any other railroad in the South.

Through long and intimate dealings with shippers of freight we have, much to our regret, made some enemies. But those who disprove our methods and policies will do us the justice to affirm that the freight facilities of the L. & N. Railroad Co. can not be surpassed by any railroad in the South.

This has reference only to those who disagree with us. This disagreement arises sometimes from our unintentional negligence, sometimes from our error in judgment and sometimes from the disposition of the individual himself to find fault.

Through our long and intimate association with the general public we have made thousands of friends due to the high character of the service we render in both the Freight and Passenger Departments. We appreciate the praise accorded us by our friends and endeavor to profit by the criticism of those who disagree with us.

Whatever may be our course in this regard we at all times exert our every effort to not only maintain the present high standard of our service but to so improve and enlarge on it that we will keep abreast of the times and contribute to the more rapid development of the business interests of the South.

Our hope is for mutual prosperity and close co-operation of all the people.

Cub Reporter Got Something of a Jolt in His Interview With Educated Chinaman.

Two San Francisco reporters were assigned to call on Chinamen and interview them on an immigration measure pending in congress. One of the reporters was a cub and an Easterner, while the other, an experienced man, assumed the management of the assignment.

"Gates," he said, after they had invaded several Chinese shops without any important result, "yonder is a tea-store. Beat it over by there and talk to the boss about Chinese voting. I'll go in next door. Remember to use the very simplest English you got."

The cub went inside the tea-shop and thus addressed the proprietor:

"John, how? Me—me—Telegraph, John! Newspape—savvy, John? Newspape—print things. Un'stan'? We want know what John think about Chinaman—vote—all same Melican man. What John think—Chinaman—vote, see? Savvy, John? Vote? What think?

The Chinaman listened to all this with profound gravity and then replied:

"The question of granting the right of suffrage to Chinese citizens who have come to the United States with the avowed intention of making this country their permanent home is one that has occupied the attention of thoughtful men of all parties for years, and it may in time become of paramount importance. At present, however, it seems to me that there is no exigency requiring an expression of opinion from me upon this subject. You will please excuse me."

The cub went outside and leaned against a lamp-post to rest and recover from a sudden faintness. His fellow reporter had purposely steered him against one of the best educated Chinamen in the United States.

WIND USED TO MAKE MUSIC

Investigation Has Disclosed Just How the Pressure Required May Be Ascertained.

In an interesting article in the Philosophical Magazine, Mr. Foord refers to Doctor Stone's table of wind pressure required to play various notes of the scale on various instruments. The table indicates that as the notes rise higher in the scale the air pressure necessary to produce them increases with most wind instruments, although not with all. In the clarinet, for example, the pressure decreases from the low notes to the high ones, varying from 15 inches of water to 5 inches.

Mr. Foord repeated these experiments on the clarinet and saxophone, playing the whole range of notes first loudly and then softly. For the clarinet it is found that the pressures fall as the notes rise, agreeing with Doctor Stone's table, although the inverse law holds good for the oboe, bassoon, horn, cornet, trumpet, euphonium and bombardon.

With the saxophone it is found that the pressures corresponding to notes at the beginning and end of the register are equal, the pressure rising to a maximum at the note D about halfway through the scale.

Composing Letters.

It is related of a merchant that, impatient at the long delay of a customer in settling his accounts with him, he said at last to his young clerk, "Write to that man and tell him that I can wait no longer!" "What shall I write to him?" the young man asked. The merchant was hurried and answered crossly and without thought, "Something or nothing, and that soon!" In a few days a check came from the delinquent, paying the entire amount of his indebtedness. Surprised, the merchant asked his clerk, "What did you write to that man?" "Just what you told me to," the young man answered. "I did not tell you what to write." "Yes, you did; you said, 'Something or nothing, and that soon.' I wrote that."

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

OTTO STOLKER WRITES A LETTER WHICH WE PRINT WITH PRELUDE

The people in Coosa and Chilton unties did not know nor care at their lands were worth and e managers of the Alabama ower Company knew it. They id not try to protect themselv and the company knew that they would not. Proper arrangements were made for judicial fairness in each community before condemnation proceedings begun. I was publishing a newspaper in Coosa county about the time condemnation proceedings were arranged, but, not being strictly in line nor having an abundance of time over and above my legitimate performances, did not get all the information that a person of more idle moments might have acquired.

I did know, though, that the people were not getting pay for what was to be delivered in the future. I knew that they were not getting compensation for giving away their heritage. That heritage did not consist wholly in the ownership of a little plot of ground, but they had a citizenship there, and a citizenship ought to be worth something. Some of them threw that citizenship away; sold their lands for a trifle, moved away, rather than stand by their weaker neighbors and battle, in a civil way, for that which was the ownership, in common, of a whole community. Whn a person says that the community may go to hell, if he can run away with his belongings, he is getting to where he is not entitled to that gravity of respect that belongs to a man of full merit.

The Alabama Power Company engaged in an industrial propo- tion that has merit in it. It is ganized, not as Altruists, not as eemosinary, but as a strictly mmercial undertaking with ckholders demanding the best sults that the best skill can pro- ce.

Legitimate prices for the lands d homes of the owners could ve been had if they had stood gether and performed that relig- s duty which one neighbor es to another. But they did t do that; they broke their ength by neglecting their unity e corporation did not make that nder.

Mr. Stolker's letter will follow what it is worth, and to that it is not improper for the re- k to be made that he has in- sts which are in danger by n of the erection of the dam e Tallapoosa. Mr. Stolker s:

r. S. J. Darby,
Alexander City, Ala.,

"My Dear Sir:—Herewith I en- ose a clipping giving a report on e effects of the flooding of lands n the Coosa river by the Alabama ower Company.

The clipping is from the Birm- ngham Age-Herald and the essen- tial part to Mr. Stolker's text com- es from a county health officer who may have recently found "a fly in the milk." When the devilment he speaks of was beginning he might not have been bearing official obligations. But it is well enou to read these reports; we t know until we see or hear.

We stated that the report was that of the county health officer, but on closer examination we find it to be from the county health physician But they are all mixed up over there anyway and it may be a Bull Moose expression. It is as ows:

Chilton county health physic V. J. Gragg, has made a to the Alabama state boar of which Dr. W. H Montgomery, the sta cer, is chair- man, an nounced as to the con water in the Coosa here the Alabama oper- ates its imp

"In Dr. Gr s in part that I cover all of the to the reservoir. ade a thorough investig n so far as I went. I ained data by sending word that I wished to meet the people at their schools, and the result was that enough people met me to report 94 cases of chills for this year, where there had been only two cases in six years before.

"There are many that failed to meet me. I know of my own knowledge that the teacher of this school abandoned his work before it was through because of his being confined to his bed with malaria.'

"Dr. Gragg is very plain in his words as to his opinion of the causes of this condition. He states that it is owing to the sunken trees, felled in the construction of the great dam district, and says the worst danger is in the small stream feeders of the Coosa river.

"The doctor says: 'I saw no ditches for drainage. . . . the water in some places had a very offensive odor.' "

Mr. Stolker continues: "The same thing will occur when they erect their dam at Cherokee Bluff. The injury caused by the flooding of the lands will spell ruin to those having lands within several miles of the Tallapoosa river from Cherokee Bluff to territory beyond Alexander City. All that section must become depopulated as malaria chills and mosquitoes will make living there too hazardous. Then apart from the vast body of taxable lands actually destroyed by flooding all adjacent lands will become uninhabitable and the loss to the whole of Tallapoosa county will prove to be disastrous. Taxable values will be greatly reduced and expenses increased in the erection of bridges and many other ways. The trade of Dadeville will become almost ruined and any new population will give the swamp section a wide berth. Thus far the power company, through the influence of money have mislead the people of Tallapoosa county by misrepresenting the great damage that will result from their dam and claiming the erection of their power plant would bring many important advantages.

"However people not in the power company's employ and who do their own thinking about their own interests must know the real truth of the situation. I have yet to learn of any reduction in price of electricity since the erection by this company of their Ocampo power plant Nor is the satisfaction very great of the land owners along the Coosa river, for only yesterday a deputy marshal was serving a whole armful—at least about fifty—notices of damage suits against the Alabama Power company based upon injury from the overflow. One gentleman who had a splendid farm in Shelby county that had five acres actually overflowed by the Ocampo power dam and for which they paid him $500.00—but now his whole place has become uninhabitable and valueless. The people of Tallapoosa county are unaware of the great disappointment in store for them having been misinformed by the power company and those in their employ. Will you undertake to champion the people's cause? They surely are in need of a defender.

For the present I will say no more but at any time will be glad to enter more fully upon this question. I remain, very truly,

Your friend,
OTTO STOLKER."—

7TH GRADE GOES TO COUNTY HIGH SCHOO

At its first regular meeting tl new Board of Education decide to transfer the seventh grade t the County High School. Thi will enable any pupil in the rura schools now in this grade to ente the school at its opening, Januar 1st, and better prepare themselve for entranee into the eighth grac next Fall. The local Board a. sumes the expense, and those er tering will only have to pay tl incidental of $2.50 for the last s sion of five months. This sho especially appeal to those pupil reach of Clanton, or any of L. & N. stations. The former c drive in and the latter can secure school tickets at small cost.

There will be about seventy-five pupils transferred from the Clanton school, and this number can easily be swelled an hundred.

The building is now nearing completion, and when finished it is going to be one of the best of its kind in the State. The large columns in front sre not found in any of the other county high school buildings. We understand the State Superintendent of Education will be up this week to inspect it.

FARM EXHIBITS AT COUNTY FAIR

Chilton County is to be congratulated on the quality of her agricultural products as shown at the Chilton County Fair last week.

The impression of Shelby county people is that their land will grow a better quality of crops than will Chilton. The exhibits at Clanton last week did not indicate such to be the case. The corn showed up especially well. It would have shown much better had the exhibitors given more care in selecting what they put on exhibit. One man in particular had three varieties of good corn and could have won the general corn exhibit if he had been more particular in selecting his ears.

The forage crops were numerous and showed excellent quality, with the exception of soy beans. I would suggest that more of your farmers plant soy beans, as they thresh readily from the vines with an ordinary oat thresher. They are sometimes difficult to get up but the trouble is they are usually planted too deep. It was encouraging to note such crops as velvet beans, crimson clover and other legumes. It will be largely through such plants that our heavy commercial fertilizer bills will be reduced and the productiveness of our exhausted cotton lands will be increased.

The oats on exhibit were first-class clean, and heavy. I was glad to see only three varieties exhibited. Fulgam, a Texas Rust-proof and Hundred Bushel, the latter being an improved anplar. It is better to have only a few varieties of any crop grown in a community. In fact it is best to have only one variety in most cases, after having ascertained which is the best for that particular section. It will pay to watch the Fulgam oat. It has not been very generally tried, but seems to be winning a number of blue ribbons at the various Fairs and is two to three weeks earlier than the other heavy kinds. This is quite an advantage in getting it off the ground in time to follow with peas or another crop.

It seems to be a splendid idea to encourage the negroes by giving them a part in the Fair. Some of their exhibits were very creditable. I was glad to be able to give them a blue ribbon on bacon, lard and two or three other articles.

It is encouraging to note the educational trend that your Fair is taking, for instance the health booth. the lectures, and etc.

None of the Fairs are what we would like to see them. They should be purely educational with the clap trap and catch penny features cut out. But until the whole citizenship of the county rallies to the support of the county Fair and realizes the fine opportunity for good in it, the county Fair will just have to get along the best it can and finance itself by means of undesirable features. I bespeak for your county Fair the co-operation and support of every good citizen in Chilton county to the end that it may become better.

TERRIBLE FIGHTING IN FOG FEATURES CHANNEL COMBAT

Germans Are Checked.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Official announcement wan made today that a German attack of considerable force south of Ypres was repulsed on Monday and that the French forces made appreciable progress around Bixschoote and between Ypres and Armentieres. The British troops also repulsed all the attacks made by the Germans.

The battle continues with undiminished fury, however, its fierceness being increased by the reinforcements both have received.

BY FRANKLIN P. MERRICK.

PARIS, Nov. 10.—Few battles in the history of the world have contained the tragic and extraordinary features which have marked the past 48 hours' fighting in dense fog in northern France and western Belgium. Troops have gotten lost in mid-day darkness, stumbling into the ranks of the enemy; ranks have charged with fixed bayonets against their fellow soldiers and both the armies of the Germans and the allies have fired at their friends.

Throughout days and nights of constant fighting, while earth and sky were obscured with the dense murk, the roar of artillery has been incessant all along the line from Dixmude to Arras, for the artillery duel has not yet been decided.

GOOD ARTICLE FROM JUDGE ADAMS

From the Creation of Man Down to the Recent Election in Chilton County.

Clanton, Ala., Nov. 9, 1914

Editor Press:

Way back in history, Genesis 2 and 8, the Creator said, "It is not good that man should be alone." And man began to multiply and the varied vicissitudes through which he has passed, down to this day, is a matter of history. We have the Jewish history with their governments; the history of the Romans with what their government meant to the world; we have the civilized with the uncivilized people of the earth pointed out in history, and we have hundreds of ideas of religion, and all these forms have come down through past history and their battle cry has been the betterment of man. Whether it was true or not, one thing we know, i. e., history tells us they all come through blood, and until a few months ago I thought that these dark days were over, but the present blood shed and carnage in the present war in the East tell me that I did not know. When I read the sad story of this awful struggle and how the dead bodies of men block the streams of water as they fall before the guns of war as wheat before the scythe, I am compelled to ask myself how far up the hill of civilization and Christianity have we come?

But when I consider the condidition of some of those people who are taught that the spirit and power of religion is in the law of man and that of right the larger guns are the real gods of earth, I am not much surprised.

But we are not in Europe, we are in America, where we boast that it is the land of the brave and the home of the free, and if there is any truth in this claim of our people, should we not be friends, and friends who live and work for the best interest of the greatest number of all men—rich and poor, high or low, ignorant or wise—and are we thus living? Does the political campaign which has just closed with its villification and misrepresentation stand as sponsor or evidence of such interest one in another?

Some of the people of Chilton county honestly believed that President Wilson was responsible for the low price of cotton and refused to believe that he was responsible for the high cost of all food supplies; they did not seem to be able to harmonize the low price of cotton and high price of wheat, corn, meat, hay—in a word all things that we eat and feed to stock. Now, in the name of all reason and common sense, why were the people thus confused. I am persuaded that it was not because they were bad or worse than other men. The great majority of the people of Chilton county are honest, hard working people. They have not had the opportunity to read much history or read law or compare the effects of national legislation on business, so we need not be surprised when they are lead to believe that the President is after the cotton farmer to oppress him, and at the same time lends his aid to the grain and hog grower, and this is the logic of the campaign speeches of the recent past by those who fought the Democratic party. The remedy is education for our people and the doctrine of making a living on the farm. Try it and see. Yours for the best,

S. M.

The official count last Friday showed that there were 2248 votes cast in Chilton county in the recent election. Of this number the highest Progressive, R. J. Williams, received 1380 and the highest Democrat, B. E. Jones, 868.

Louisiana did elect a Progressive Congressman. But, like Chilton county, Alabama, the Louisiana district is out of style. It didn't go Progressive till the rest of the country had rejected Bull Moosism.—Montgomery Advertiser.

The Editor has received a copy of the "Secret of a Happy Day Laborer," with the compliments of the author, Mrs. Lula M. Dudley, of Montgomery, who for many years resided in Clanton. The book which is just from the press, is a beautiful story, and is dedicated to the young wives of America. Mrs. Dudly is a writer of exceptional ability, and is also the author of "Through Pastures Green," a religious book, which has received much favorable comment from the press of the country.

The eighteenth annual session of the Alabama Good Roads Association met in Montgomery, Oct. 21 to 23. It is pronounced by all that attended as the best convention that has been held by that body in many years. The attendance was not as large as usual but more practical work was done for the cause of good roads and that the effects of the same will be felt in the future. Montgomery as usual did herself proud in entertaining the convention. Hon. John Craft, of Mobile, was re-elected President, and Mr. J. A. Rountree, of Birmingham, who was one of the original founders of the Association and who was the first and only Secretary the Association has ever had, was re-elected Secretary for the nineteenth time—a graceful tribute to a faithful officer.

Chilton county was highly honored by the convention. Judge E. B. Deason was elected district vice President from the fourth congressional district, and Mr. F. A. Gulledge was re-elected member of the executive committee.

The Association has done a great work in the past and we look for still greater work in the future.

The lodging of the charge of attempting to bribe Harve Honeycutt, an elector of Chilton county, against Walter Deshazo and Wilbur Speer, two of our most prominent citizens, carries all the ear marks of having been inspired by the Progressive Party, or some individual members of prominence in said party, to serve their own personal ends. The fact that such a charge should spring from, and be preferred by individual Progressives shows without doubt that there is an inclination of some of the leaders of the Progressive Party to distrust the rank and file of their party. It is unfair and unjust to cast upon any of our people, regardless of party affiliation, any such imputation, especially when the charge fails to bear even the semblance of truth. The deep interest of our county people, regardless of the party to [illegible] belong, in the conduct [illegible] in the past, does not deserve to have the reflection, that they or any of them would offer or accept a bribe, cast upon them. Our citizenship deserves fairer consideration at the hands of the self constituted, changing an interchangeable leaders of the so-called Progressive party (now Nationally defunct), according to the last election returns.

A BRAVE FIGHT

Now that the campaign is over, the result declared and the good people of Chilton are again pursuing their peaceful avocations, we feel that it is not amiss to call attention to certain features of the campaign and its results. While it is true that all of the Democratic nominess were defeated, yet there are many things about the campaign, from our standpoint, to commend themselves to us. Though we went down in defeat, yet a courageous fight was made in behalf of the Democratic ticket; and for the first time, probably, in the history of the county the fight from a Democratic standpoint was made by local Democrats. While the Press would commend all who aided in this fight, yet there is one man whose efforts stand out preeminently, and that man is Senator Thos. A. Curry, who managed the county campaign, and whose fearless, brilliant and patriotic efforts stamp him as one of the state's strong campaigners. While we would not minimize the part played by others, yet it is true that Senator Curry made the fight almost single handed and alone. In the very outset of the campaign he flung a challenge to L. H. Reynolds and J. O. Middleton, both of whom are speakers and politicians of recognized ability, and for seventeen successive days he met one or the other of them in joint debate and to say that he held his own with them is but putting it mildly. Senator Curry's speeches in this campaign prove him one of the state's foremost orators.

The Press congratulates Senator Curry on his masterly fight. The Democratic party and the State of Alabama have need of such men as he, and we believe that some day they will reward him as he deserves.

NEW YORK COTTON EXCHANGE TO REOPEN SOON

New York, November 10.—Reopening for the New York cotton exchange for the general trading within the next few days was forecast today by the announcement of the incorporation of the Cotton Trading corporation to take over December contracts at 9 cents a pound. Although a date for the reopening has not been announced officially, a prominent exchange official said today there was no reason why business should not begin by the first of next week.

The Cotton Trading corporation, which is a part of the corporation-syndicate plan for taking over contracts that have remained outstanding since the exchanges were closed, has been organized for business. Its president is S. T. Hubbard, a former president of the cotton exchange.

All signatures needed for the corporation-syndicate agreements have been obtained, it is stated, and the plan is expected to be put into operation as soon as details have been passed on by the 15 banks and trust companies financing the plans.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

"Three years ago when I was living in Pittsburgh one of my children had a hard cold and coughed dreadfully. Upon the advice of a druggist I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it benefitted him at once. I find it the best cough medicine for children because it is pleasant to take. They do not object to taking it," writes Mrs. Lafayette Tuck, Homer City, Pa. This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an adult. Sold by all dealers.

MONTEVALLO NEWS

Hallowe'en has been for a number of years an occasion of great enjoyment at the Technical at Montevallo. This year was no exception. The witches and imps performances began at dinner and at six o'clock. The dining hall had been appropriately decorated, and the supervisor of foods had provided such a feast as would satisfy not only the fastidious creatures of other realms, but hungry girls of this world as well. After dinner, each class had its performance, pulling off many unique and interesting stunts.

On Monday Miss Patterson, director of the home economics department, accompanied by Misses Stoddard, Buchanan, Jeter and Jansen of the faculty, carried the members of the Textile classes, fifty three in number, on a tour of inspection through the cotton mills at Siluria. The study of textiles is a very important branch of study in the home economics course; hence, this visit was not one for idle sightseeing, but one for earnest study. President T. C. Thompson and Superintendent Dilling extended many courtesies to the visitors for which they were very grateful. This mill at Siluria is one of the best in the country and is well worth visiting.

Professor Fowler, Cannon, Dowling, and Misses Brooke and Meroney, of the faculty, conducted an interesting Sunday school institute at Dogwood Methodist church on last Sunday.

Mr. and Mrs. J. W. Whatley, C. T. Lehman, Mrs. J. T. Gaudin and Miss Ruth Gaudin, of Birmingham; Mrs. Ethel Smith, Miss Carolyn Smith and Mr. Emmett Seals, of Montgomery, Mrs. T. W. Hall, Jr. and little daughter, Ethel, of Mempnis, Tenn., were interesting visitors here last Sunday.

Rev. E. [illegible] Stewart, pastor of the Bar[illegible] church, and at one time instructor in the college, h[illegible] resigned his pastorate to take effect December 1st.

The building committee of t[illegible] trustees met here on Thursday consider the final plans and spe[illegible]fications of architect W. T. W[illegible]ren for the technical buildi[illegible] Among those present were H[illegible] H. S. D. Mallory, Selma, Geor[illegible] H. Parker, Cullman, M. A. G[illegible]ham, Prattville, and W. E. [illegible] Yerby, Greensboro. The pla[illegible] and specifications were adopt[illegible] and the president was request[illegible] to advertise for bids. These bi[illegible] are to be handed in by Decemb[illegible] 4th. Other plans for the gener[illegible] enlargement of the school wer[illegible] discussed, but no definite actio[illegible] was taken.

Dr. Seale Harris, of Mobile, visited his daughter, Miss Josephine Harris, this week. While here he was the house guest of President and Mrs. Palmer.

RIDERVILLE

One of the most brilliant social events of the season was that of Friday evening when Mrs. J. W. Peeples and Mr. J. B. Rider jointly entertained at a "Victrola Musicale" at the home of Mr. J. B. Rider, complimenting the teachers of the Plantersville schools. The beauty of the Rider home was only enhanced by the decorations of ferns and cut flowers, chrysanthemums and roses being effectively used in the reception hall and dining room. Mrs. Peeples and Mr. Rider were assisted in receiving their guests by Mr. J. W. Peeples, Mr. T. E. Fitzgerald, Mrs. J. E Mattison.

Late in the evening a tempting buffet supper was served. Those who enjoyed this courtesy were: Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Lee, Mrs. J. W. Peeples, Mrs. J. E. Mattison; Misses Pitts, Milette, Kahea, Portis, Hanlin, Watson, Lawrence, Johnson; Messrs Rider, Moulder, Bowen, Fitzgerald, Dickinson, Monroe, Rasberry.

CARD OF THANKS.

Shelby, Ala., Nov. 7, 1914

Editor Press: Please allow me space in which to thank those who supported me in the recent campaign. While I feel grateful to my friends, I hold no ill will against any man because I did not get his vote. Since I have failed in my first attempt to make a record in public life, I am the more determined to strive as I have never striven to gain for myself a place in the affairs of state and prove to the people of my county and state that I am their friend.

Still, I will be contented to grow hay, stock and grain for a good many years before I would change my policies and politics in order to win a political victory. As far as my influence can be brought to bear upon our next Legislature I will use it in the interest of our rural schools and public roads just as though I had been elected, for I am deeply interested in those improvements being made, because they mean so much to the common people.

And now, Mr. Thomas, it is up to you to make good some promises, in that you have promised to give us better times, schools, roads and a reduction in our tax.

Again thanking my friends for their support, I am

Yours very truly,
L. R. SAWYER.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

LOCAL & PERSONAL

Mr. and Mrs. Joe Robinson have returned to their home in Birmingham, after visiting relatives in Clanton.

Mr. Frank Callen, who has been in Poughkeepsie, N. Y., for the past several months, is spending a while in Clanton.

Mr. G. W. Cobern, a prominent business man of Mountain Creek, was in town last Saturday.

Dr. E. A. Matthews was a business visitor to Montgomery Saturday last.

Mr. L. Cantrell transacted business in Montgomery Saturday.

Mr. R. C. Middleton of Birmingham was in Clanton several days last week as the guest of his brothers, Messrs. J. H. and J. O. Middleton.

Those coming to Clanton to attend Circuit Court, can secure comfortable rooms and good board by applying to H. B. FULTON, Clanton, Ala. 11-12-2t.

Mrs. Herbert Deering has returned to her home in Birmingham, after spending several months with her parents, Mr. and Mrs. John Robinson.

Miss Alma Jones is visiting friends in Montgomery.

Mr. and Mrs. David Dunn, and family, of Montgomery, spent Sunday with Mrs. S. J. Watts.

Miss Emma Duncan, of Prattville, was the charming guest of Mrs. G. L. Phillips last week.

Mrs. J. Q. Wade was a visitor to Montgomery Tuesday.

Mr. J. F. Goodgame, Marshal of Clanton, suffered a stroke of paralysis last Sunday, and, we regret to say, is in a very serious condition at his home in East Clanton.

Mrs. Lula M. Dudley's new book, "The Secret of a Happy Day Laborer," is now on the market, fresh from the publisher. It is beautifully bound in cloth and retails for 65 cents single copy. Call at Alred's Drug store and buy one. 11-12-4t

The following marriage licenses have been issued the past week: Mr. Howard Atchison and Miss Lona Wallace; Mr. O. S. Robinson and Miss Daisy Goss; Mr. J. W. Jones and Miss Della Mae Kelley.

Master Tommie Teel is at home again to his friends, after his annual "hike" for "furrin" parts. Little Tommie left Clanton a few weeks ago for the ostensible purpose of going to South America. Arriving at New Orleans he got all the South America he was looking for, and then back home for Tommie.

"Little Tommie Teel,
How do you feel?"

FOLE... FOR BACK... KIDNEYS AND BLADDER

Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle received a telegram last Thursday from his son, Mr. John Chappelle, stating that he was one of the victors in the recent Oklahoma election. Mr. Chappelle was the Democratic nominee for County Judge of Logan county, and was elected by a substantial majority. Logan is one of the largest and most prosperous counties of the State, Guthrie being the county seat. The new Judge went to Oklahoma a few years ago to engage in the practice of law, and since his residence there has been very successful. He had previously held the office by appointment of the governor, and that he made good is attested by the flattering vote he received on November 3rd. Judge Chappelle is well equipped for the duties of this responsible position, and his election is a distinct compliment to his worth and ability.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and despondent. Here are a few words of hope and cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Bowers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them my digestion is fine." For sale by all dealers

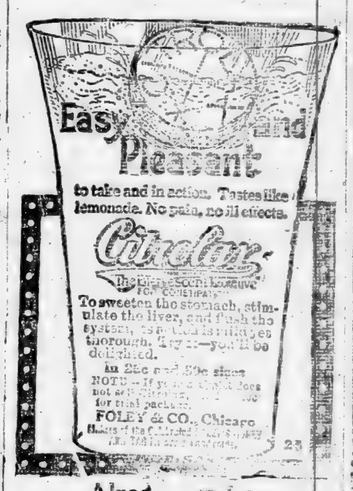
ENJOYABLE BIRTHDAY PARTY



Little Miss Gladys Kemp entertained a number of friends at her home on Second Ave. West on Saturday afternoon last, the occasion being her eighth birthday anniversary.

A salad course and hot chocolate was served. The birthday cake, around which was placed eight tiny candles and for which a prize was offered to the one who blew out the greatest number of lighted candles, proved an interesting contest and provoked much merriment, the prize falling to Master Hubert Jones.

During the afternoon many interesting games were indulged in.

The many beautiful present received attest the high esteem in which the charming little hostess is held by her young friends.

Those present were: Misses Gladys Mae Nix, Mary Powell, Sophia Mullins, Minnie Mael Pinckard, Cottie Williams, Lizzie Kemp, Jewel Davis, Mary Upchurch, Agnes Kemp, Edna Kemp; Messrs. Claudie Pipes, Jack Wade, Jack Hayes, Frank Aldridge, Grady Aldridge, Louis Aldridge.

VIRGINIA-CAROLINA CHEMICAL COMPANY SUBSCRIBES $100,000

The Press received the following telegram Monday:

"Richmond, Va., Nov. 9, 1914. Press, Clanton, Ala.

Comparatively little cotton planted in this state, but the business men of Virginia have subscribed more than per quota, one million dollars to the cotton loan fund. Richmond's portion of this half a million dollars was oversubscribed by about thirty thousand dollars within twenty seven minutes at meeting of chamber of commerce. Richmond's list was headed by Virginia-Carolina Chemical Co., with one hundred thousand dollars, the largest single subscription—five times as large as next highest.

PUBLISHED IN THE INTEREST OF CHILTON COUNTY AND HER PEOPLE — M D Foshee

VOL 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY NOVEMBER 19, 1914 NO. 32.

CIRCUIT COURT CONVENES MONDAY

The Fall Term of Circuit Court of Chilton county will convene at Clanton on Monday next, November 23rd. The Civil docket is the largest in the history of the county, 233 cases having been filed.

Clerk M. D. Foshee and his assistants have been kept busy during the past few weeks issuing subpoenas for witnesses, and Mr. Foshee informed the Press man that about four thousand subpoenas had been issued during the last three weeks. It is expected that there will be no less than four to five hundred witnesses in attendance next week.

SOLDIERS HOME

The Old Soldiers at the Home Act.

At a recent meeting of Camp 1711, U. C. V., at the old Soldiers Home, the following, introduced by Veteran Hobdy and seconded by Veteran John H. Toner, was passed by the Camp:

Whereas, as this, the 11th day of November, 1914, is the 76th birthday of our worthy Commander and Commandant of the Alabama Old Confederate Soldiers Home, be it

Resolved, that we the members of Camp 1711, join in wishing Captain Simpson many more days and years of health, happiness and prosperity.

Resolved 2nd. That his uniform kindness and many lenient acts during his eight years as Commandant of this Home has won for him the love and appreciation of the men whom he has watched over during his administration here.

Veterans John H. Toner and Samuel J. Andress submitted a report as the proceedings of the Convention recently held in Mobile in which they eulogized the good people of the city mentioned for the liberal entertainment extended to all veterans who attended the re-union.

Capt. J. M. Simpson was absent, attending to business connected with the Home, and could not respond, but, no doubt, he is pleased at the expression of the men, who like himself, fought for the Southland during the days of 1861-5.

NOTICE TO CLERKS

Chilton County Baptist Association

The minutes for 1914 of the Chilton County Baptist Associaton are now being printed at the Press office and will be ready for distribution early next week. The Clerk, Mr. W. H. Shaw, requests the clerks of the various churches to either call or send to the Press office for the minutes of their respective churches.

THORSBY NEWS

The next number of the Lyceum Course will be an entertainment by W. Powell Hale, Elocutionist, to be given at the Baptist church on Monday night, Nov. 30th. Mr. Hale has been in Thorsby before, and comes well recommended by those who have heard him. The attendance at the first number of the Course was large, and the audience was well pleased. There will still be a chance to get season tickets for the balance of the course at some reduction.

The Christian Endeavor Society will give a mock trial at Bates Hall on Friday night, Nov. 20th. Admission ten cents. The proceeds will be used as a contribution to the fund for a Headquarters Building.

A double header basket ball game was played on the grounds of the Baptist High School on Thursday, Nov. 12th. The game between the first teams resulted in a score of 11 to 7 in favor of Thorsby Institute. The game between the second teams resulted in a score of 5 to 1 in favor of the Unity-Chilton Baptist High School.

The Institute Basket Ball Team will probably have a game with a Birmingham team on Saturday, Nov. 28th, at Thorsby.

The Agriculture class at the Institute have begun work on their individual garden patches in the school garden, and are much interested in the possibilities of winter crops. On Tuesday of this week they made a trip to the farm of M. J. Barrett for a practical demonstration of the working out of the principles of animal husbandry which they have been studying on the text book.

Miss Mary Lizzie Hughes has returned to the Girls' Dormitory after an absence of three weeks because of sickness.

Mr John Husby has enrolled at the Institute, and is staying at the Boys' Dormitory.

The Alkahest favorites will give a concert in Thorsby on Thursday, Dec 10th. This will be the third ...er on the Lyceum Course.

...parations are already under ... the Contest of the Helen ... Literary Society to be held th... ...ay night before Christmas. The ... tion chosen for debate is "Reso... That the United States shoul... ...uild any more battleships ...5."

ALABA... TECHNI... ...ITUTE

At a called m... ...ing of the faculty, plans wer... discussed for a home scie... co... ...vention to be held here in January or February. Efforts will be m... ...le to secure the presence of a... teachers in the State who are interested in the home science work in schools. Since Domestic Art and Science is taught in high schools, and is spreading to other schools, it is thought that such a conference would be helpful in getting the work established on a better basis. Detailed plans of the meeting will be worked out and announced later.

The University of Alabama Glee Club will give an entertainment in the chapel on November 28th, at eight o'clock. This is a very popular attraction for the girls and usually a good number of visitors from neighboring towns are present when the Glee Club comes.

The Studiosis Club, which is composed largely of faculty members, will meet with Mrs. George Peter, of Maylene, next Monday. Several of the teachers are planning to attend and walk back to Montevallo, six miles, after the meeting. Friends of the walking party are secretely planning a relief wagon to follow along.

Friends of the school are rejoicing that the long needed class rooms will soon be under construction. The building committee met recently and approved the plans of the new technical building submitted by Architect Warren. Dr. Palmer has advertised for bids to be turned in December 4th; on which date the building committee will pass upon the bids. It is expected that work will begin on the new building soon after. This building will be complete in class room and laboratory facilities and will furnish larger opportunities for more efficient work in all the technical lines.

NEWT RIGGINS CAUGHT IN TEXAS

Sheriff Jones received a telegram Tuesday from the authorities at San Antonio, Texas, stating that Newt Riggins was under arrest in that city.

Riggins, it will be remembered, was indicted by the Grand Jury of Chilton county at the Fall Term, 1913, for operating a gaming table. After the indictment was returned against him, Riggins jumped his bond and his whereabouts have been a profound secret until his arrest Tuesday in the Texas city.

Deputy Sheriff J. T. Jones left Clanton Wednesday morning for San Antonio to bring Riggins back.

There are also two indictments against Riggins in Elmore county.

They are expected to arrive in Clanton Sunday.

Chairman Committee.

"IF YOU'LL GO, I'LL GO"

Say that to some friend when you leave him, Saturday night. Of course you will mean that you will go to church Sunday if he will go too. That's a fine way to start off. If you are undecided as to which church to attend, select the one your mother used to go to. You can't go far wrong. Any fellow's mother's religion ought to be good enough for him. So next Sunday give up the lazy hour ...d bed. Have your best clothes ready. Put 'em on and start out with your head up and your shoulders back. You're doing one of the best things you ever did in your life, and if you keep it up you will never be sorry. And you'll be surprised to see how good it feels to be in church. And above all things, if there is congregational singing, SING. Don't merely hold the book and bluff at singing. Fill up your lungs and let out the music. You'll know it, all right. You may have forgotten the words but the tune, never. Why your mother used to sing it! She'll be a happy woman when she knows that her boy was at church.

TO THE CORN CLUB BOYS

I write this to urge every boy who has grown a prize acre of corn this year to make out your report and send it to me before Saturday, Nov. 28th.

There has never been a time in the history of our country when the growing of corn needs to be stressed more than now.

Our merchants, bankers and other business men of the county have done a great part to encourage boys to grow a prize acre of corn by offering some nice and valuable prizes, and I truly hope that every boy in Chilton county will show himself a worthy competior by making out a report and sending it to me. Plant ye more corn in 1915.

Yours for better farming,
T. E. WILLIAMS,
Clanton, R. 6.

TAXES

Without indulging in self praise the L. & N. takes occasion to call attention to extracts from newspapers commenting on the necessity for advanced payment of taxes.

The Montgomery Journal, in its issue of Oct. 20, stated:

"As a result of the appeal to the tax-payers to settle their indebtedness, which was made by Gov. O'Neal, the Treasury collected about $500,000. The Louisville & Nashville Railroad was the first to pay. This assessment does not mature until Jan. 1, but the road has promptly responded to the appeal for aid."

The Montgomery Advertiser, in its issue of Oct. 20, stated:

"The Louisville & Nashville Railroad was the first pay * * * This guarantees that the state will be in a position to meet all obligations until Jan. 1st. * * The assessment against the Louisville & Nashville does not mature until January, but the officers of the company promptly responded to the appeal for aid."

The L. & N. pays one-seventeenth of the ad valorem state taxes in Alabama and the same proportion of the ad valorem county taxes in Alabama.

In response to this appeal the L. & N. paid nearly $500,000. The interest rate in Alabama is 8 per cent. Therefore the state was not only able to meet matured and maturing obligations promptly, but was saved the interest on this payment, which would amount to a considerable sum.

This action on the part of the L. & N. is but another evidence of its disposition and constant desire to cooperate with the people. Whether the issue be great or small, the L. & N. stands ready to render any assistance in its power for the general public good.

We say in all sincerety and earnestness that we have never entertained or favored any movement designed to be solely of benefit to the L. & N.

Anything detrimental to the people is detrimental to the L. & N. Anything beneficial to the people is beneficial to the L. & N.

May we indulge the hope that the people appreciate our deaire to continue to be a vital force for the profitable development of the territory through which our lines operate?

The opening of the reserve banks and cotton exchanges is stimulating all business interests.

The cold weather the past few days has been the cause of a number of fat porkers in this vicinity being beheaded.

Abe Martin says: "Th' ranks o' the down an' out are filled with fellers who nailed a horse shoe over the door instead o' puttin' a ad in a newspaper."

Don't you think while you are attending Court next week, it would be a good idea to come around and see how your subscription stands with the Press? Uncle Sam, you know, says we can't toat a fellow when he gets a year in arrears.

A report issued by the Alabama Department of Health says that: "Insanity and mental defectiveness are on the increase in Alabama as in the whole United States. Both are increasing at a greater ratio than is the population."

The next Legislature will be asked for an appropriation to establish an institution to care for our mental cripples.

The official canvass of the State vote at Montgomery last Tuesday showed that Underwood polled 63,389 votes for U. S. Senator, while his opponents, Alex C. Birch, Republican, and A. P Longshore, Progressive, received 12,320 and [illegible] Progressive, respectively. Birch polled nearly three times as many votes as Longshore. All of which shows that Bull Mooseism in Alabama, like the rest of the world, has played its last tune.

ODD BITS OF NEWS

Jackson, Ky.—Arthur Roberts, serving a term in the Frankfort Reformatory for man-slaughter, was released on his honor to make a trip here to testify in a case. As soon as he had finished his testimony he returned and was locked up.

Oberlin, O.—Oberlin students have passed a resolution condemning laws that prohibit students over 21 from voting while at college. The resolution was sent to the Governor and the Legislature.

Springfield, Mass.—The grandmothers of this town have formed a club for social service and pleasure. The chief requirement for membership is the status of grandmotherhood.

West Bend, Wis.—Great excitement was caused in church here recently when a mouse's nest was discovered in a woman's hat. The hat had been put away for the summer and the mouse had discovered how nice and soft the material of the headgear was and had settled down for the winter.

Brazil, Ind.—Firemen, wearying of playing casino and checkers, have constructed a large loom in fire headquarters and are weaving shawls, table covers and other articles.

Deafness Cannot Be Cured

by local applications, as they cannot reach the diseased portion of the ear. There is only one way to cure deafness, and that is by constitutional remedies. Deafness is caused by an inflamed condition of the mucous lining of the Eustachian Tube. When this tube is inflamed you have a rumbling sound or imperfect hearing, and when it is entirely closed, Deafness is the result, and unless the inflammation can be taken out and this tube restored to its normal condition, hearing will be destroyed forever; nine cases out of ten are caused by Catarrh, which is nothing but an inflamed condition of the mucous surfaces.

We will give One Hundred Dollars for any case of Deafness (caused by catarrh) that cannot be cured by Hall's Catarrh Cure. Send for circulars, free.

ALABAMA BANKERS IN SESSION

Resolution Passed Not to Aid Farmer Unless He Agrees To Diversify Crops.

Alabama bankers representing every section of the State, and a preponderant percentage of the State's banking capital, in session at the Capitol Tuesday, adopted without dissenting vote a resolution which pledged them to seek by every reasonable means the reduction of the cotton acreage, the diversification of crops and the consummation of the Wade syndicate plan.

The resolution went as far as to declare that financial aid would not be extended to "anyone directly or indirectly interested in the raising of cotton for the year 1915, unless such person will enter into an agreement to curtail the production and reduce the acreage in cotton at least one-half of what it was in 1914."

The bankers also endorsed heartily a recommendation to the Chairman of the Agricultural Committee of the Alabama Bankers' Association that he proceed at once with the organization of county committees. It is suggested to him that he appoint a chairman for each county in the State with authority to organize the bankers, the business men and the farmers for the purpose of obtaining a substantial and fair reduction of acreage in the respective localities.

Animals Have Odd Fears.

Elephants, Lions and Tigers Dislike Mice and Rats.

It is well known that many people have an inexplicable aversion to certain animals. Most people have a horror of snakes and other things that creep the earth. Captain Winfred Gonzales, the Director of the Zoological Annex, with Sun Brothers' World's Progress Shows, in speaking of the peculiarities of animals, says: "Animals, like human beings, have their likes and dislikes. Put certain animals together and you will expect a fight, while another two will become the friendliest of comrades. Women are proverbial for their horror of mice, but one would hardly expect an elephant to be afraid of so tiny a foe. This fear was recently shown at Winter quarters, Macon Ga., where the Sun Brothers spent their Winter months' lay-off, during some experiments to find out the likes of animals in a menagerie. The huge animal spotted the mouse as soon as it was placed in its enclosure; the elephant gave evidence of fear immediately.

"With one of his big feet he could have smashed the tiny intruder out of existence. Instead, it stood for a moment motionless, and apparently helpless with fright. Not until the mouse was removed was the elephant to be pacified, and it was some hours before the elephant regained its normal courage.

"Mice, indeed, inspire fear, or something akin to it, in a great many animals. A Bengal tiger trembled and uttered long, mournful howls the whole time a mouse was in its cage. Two rats were introduced into a lion's cage and the same fear was shown by the larger animal for the smaller ones. There have been many suggestions put forward for this extraordinary dislike of these large animals for mice. One very probable reason is that mice and rats have a peculiar smell that is highly repulsive to their enemies. A Puma, however, has no such fear. When a rat was introduced into its cage, the huge cat made a spring and that rat was a goner."

The Sun Brothers will exhibit their big animal annex and their many clever sights and performances, afternoon and night, on Saturday, November 21st, at Clanton.

GERMANS RENEW SHELLING LINE

Wintry Weather and Floods Fail to Check Efforts of Invaders.

London, Nov. 17.—Undeterred by wintry weather and floods, the Germans are still striving to break down the Allies' defense along the Franco-Belgian frontier. Although the Berlin official report says the day was quiet, there has been an almost continuous artillery duel, with occasional infantry attacks, but apparently without either side making progress.

The line from the coast to Nieuport, which has been receiving less attention since the Germans began trying to force the British out of Ypres, again has been subjected to a violent bombardment. South of Dixmude the Germans have been trying, under fire from the Allies cannon, to build works to check the flood which compelled them to evacuate part of their trenches.

At other points the big guns again have been busy, and Rheims has been subjected to another rain of shells.

FRENCH MAKE ADVANCE

From the Allies point of view probably the most important operations are those south of Verdun, where the French troops for some time have been trying further to relieve the pressure which the Germans have been exerting on the fortress. They at last have succeeded, according to the French official communication, and beside making some progress on the heights of the Meuse have advanced on St. Mihiel, the only point on the left bank of the Meuse which the Germans have held.

Another big battle is developing in Poland between the Vistula and Warta rivers, where the Russian advance has been met by large forces of Germans coming from Thorn The German plan apparently is to attack the Russian center to draw their wings from East Prussia and Cracow. In the former region the Russians report a further advance but they have not been able to dislodge the Germans from the passages of the Mazurian lakes.

MORE MONEY IN CIRCULATION THAN IS ACTUALLY NEEDED

Washington, Nov. 17.—How $170,000,000 in gold and lawful money was shifted without a hitch yesterday from the banks which are members of the Federal Reserve system to their reserve banks was told in today's reports to the Federal Reserve Board. Between $70,000,000 and $80,000,000 is yet to be transferred to meet present reserve requirements.

The first day of the twelve reserve banks apparently was devoted largely to the usual ceremonies accompanying the launching of the new organization. A few million dollars worth of commercial party, however, was rediscounted.

Officials tonight predicted large amounts of rediscounts in the near future. There is close to $300,000,000 of emergency currency and possibly $100,000,000 clearing house loan certificates outstanding all in the hands of banks and all secured by paper which officials believe in most instances would be subject to rediscount by the reserve banks. It is pointed out that there is more currency in circulation than is needed and treasury officials probably will use their influence to avoid further issues.

Under the new law the banks can obtain Federal Reserve notes by rediscounting with Reserve Banks the same sort of commercial paper they put up for emergency currency.

No demand was made yesterday so far as reports here show, for Federal Reserve notes. About $20,000,000 have been printed and are in the hands of the different reserve banks.

The Board today began collecting data designed to give the reserve banks a central credit bureau with valuable information concerning borrowers.

Best Cough Medicine for Children.

"Three years ago when I was living in Pittsburgh one of my children had a hard cold and coughed dreadfully. Upon the advice of a druggist I purchased a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy and it benefitted him at once. I find it the best cough medicine for children because it is pleasant to take. They do not object to taking it," writes Mrs. Lafayette Tuck, Homer City, Pa. This remedy contains no opium or other narcotic, and may be given to a child as confidently as to an aduli. WAR WEARY

The obligation that rests upon decent newspapers [illegible] truth is ever a sacred and [illegible] sible one. At no time should [illegible] be more honored in observance than during the continuation of the tragedy that is being enacted upon the European continent. A period like the present stiffens the demand for veracity made by a public that takes journalism seriously.

Right-minded people have wearied of the unending procession of tales of horror, cruelty and destruction. They are eager, even anxious, to address themselves to the constructive policies of peace. The distorted perspective presented them by many newspapers gives them just offense. The plain truth is, the reading public is sick and tired of the monotony of the war diet served up to them.

Yet how many sensational newspapers disregard their duty to their readers, and careless of their obligation, deliberately invent horrors for the sole purpose of claiming supremacy in the publication of exclusive news.

Never in the history of the newspaper has there been such a demand for truth; yet never in the history of the newspaper has truth been so carelessly handled.

No wonder the reading public is weary of "war news." So are we.

PROTHRO-HARRIS

A beautiful home wedding of Wednesday was that of Miss Grace Elizabeth Harris and Mr. Howell Prothro, which took place at 12:30 o'clock p.m. at the home of the bride's parents, Mr. and Mrs. W. B. Harris, on South Sixth Street.

The decorations were both artistic and elaborate. In the drawing room graceful vines of ivy were draped on the mantel and at the top of the lace curtains. Vases were filled with white Cochet roses. A large vase of gorgeous white chrysanthemums was on the piano and banked on either side were smaller chrysanthemums and asparagus fern. In the reception hall the mantle was banked with fern and Christmas eve chrysanthemums, the folding doors were fastened with asparagus fern, with here and there a pretty white chrysanthemum caught in the greenery of ferns. Mrs. Ernest Carlisle and Mrs. George Niles had charge of the bride's book, which was placed on a table in the hall, the decorations being vines and a Marie Antoinette basket of swansonia.

Immediately before the ceremony Miss Annie Wheat sang "Because," Miss Mary Bass accompanist. The strains of Mendelsshon's wedding march, played by Miss Bass announced the coming of the bridal party. Miss Gussie Dupree, Miss Musadore Brown, Miss Ruby Stevens and Miss Kathleen Prothro formed an aisle of broad white satin ribbon, through which the wedding party entered the drawing room where the ceremony was performed by the Rev. J. E. Sammons before an improvised altar of handsome ferns Little Miss Fannie Willis Niles, the ring bearer, dressed in white chiffon and lace, entered first, followed by the groom and his brother, who was his best man, Mr. Wagner Prothro, of Rover. The bride entered with her matron of honor, Mrs. G. [illegible] Denson, of Clanton, Alabama.

Miss Harris made a lovely bride in her tailored suit of one of the new shades of blue, the long tunic finished with velvet collar, cuffs and buttons, worn with a blouse of flesh pink chiff on and shadow lace. Her hat was fashioned of velvet, shaded blue ostrich plumes, and two bows of cut steel. She carried a beauti[illegible] bouquet of white rose buds tied with [illegible]

WHEN YO[illegible]UT YOUR COTTON CROP
WHAT TO DO AND HOW TO DO

"Kir[illegible] has been dethroned (for the time being at least) and farmers [illegible]uth are confronted with the gigantic task of diversifi[illegible] their [illegible] year in order to live and prosper.

[illegible]s will be easy, for they have practiced diversification. But those who have raised cotton and cotton only are at a loss what to do and how to do it.

With [illegible] benefit of this class of farmers The Tri-Weekly Constitution, a farm paper which goes three times a week to the farmer's door with the news of the world—the great war in Europe, what is being done to relieve the cotton problem, what is being done to curtail the cotton crop next year, and every other item of news worth chronicling—is running a great series of articles on diversified farming.

These articles are written by farmers who move made a success at growing other things than cotton, and some of them have become rich. They tell you what to do and how to do it. Their experience will be worth much to you if you are in a quandary as to what method of diversification to follow.

The Press has arranged to club with the Tri-Weekly Constitution. For $2 you can get The Tri-Weekly Constitution from now to January 1, and the Press for one year, and have your choice from The Tri-Weekly long list of valuable premiums free. LOCAL & PERSONAL

Miss Juanita Hearn has returned to Talladega, after visiting her aunt, Mrs. Kate Haynes.

Mr. Wolff, of the Hughes Specialty Well Drilling Co., of Charleston, S. C., arrived in Clanton last Friday and has again resumed work on drilling the well for the waterworks system. Some time ago work on the well was stopped after a depth of 546 feet had been reached. At a recent of the Town Council a deal was made with the above company to go 200 feet deeper in the hope that an ample supply of water can be obtained.

Mr. Frank Callen was a visitor to Birmingham last week.

Messss. Hance Alred and J. D. Martin motored to Wetumpka last Sundav.

Miss Beverly Hester visited Birmingham Tuesday.

Miss Rose Tvus of Birmingham is visiting relatives here.

Marriage licenses were issued the past week to the following: Miss Clarence Witcher and Miss Ella Shaw.

Rev. W. M. Olive, formerly pastor of Clanton Baptist church, but now residing at Luverne, was greeting friends here last week.

Mr. F. W. Denty left Monday for a few days visit to his old home at Vincent, Ala.

Mrs. H. I. Honeycutt of Jemison was the guest Monday of Mr. and J. T. Hester.

Those coming to Clanton to attend Circuit Court, can secure comfortable rooms and good board by applying to H. B. FULTON, Clanton, Ala. 11-12-2t.

Miss Alma Jones has returned from a visit to relatives in Montgomery.

Miss Corita Wilson spent th week-end with friends at We tumpka.

Mrs. J. H. Middleton and little son, Hurst, are visiting the former's parents, Mr. and Mrs. J. T. Ellis, at Montevallo.

Mr. and Mrs. J. M. Robinson, Messrs. J. E. Robinson, Jr., N. A. Kicker and J. P. Gore formed a jolly party spending several days on Coosa river last week. The party camped at what is known as the "Old Cove," about three miles from Adams ferry, a most delightful place. They report having had the time of their lives. Thirty four squirrels as well as a number of other game were killed.

Remarkable Cure of Croup.

"Last winter when our little boy had croup I got him a bottle of Chamberlain's Cough Remedy. I honestly believe it saved his life," writes Mrs. J. B. Cook, Indiana, Pa. "It cut the phlegm and relieved his coughing spells. I am most grateful for what this remedy has done for him." For sale by all dealers.

Mrs. Guy Higgins spent Tuesday in the capital city shopping.

Mr. E. H. Lowe was in town Saturday last, and while here paid the Press office a visit and extended his subscripton one year. Mr. Lowe informed us that he was removing from Jemison and Chilton county, but had not yet decided where he would locate. Mr. Lowe and his family have been life-long residents of Chilton, and have numbers of friends here who will deeply regret their leaving. The best wishes of the Press go with them for their future success wherever their new home may be.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and despondent. Here are a few words of hope and cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Bowers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them my digestion is fine." For sale by all dealers

CIRCUIT COURT

Circuit Court convened at Clanton on Monday morning, Judge W. W. Pearson, presiding, with Solicitor F. Lovd Tate on hand to assist the Grand Jury in its deliberations.

The Grand Jury was duly empanelled and Judge Pearson delivered his usual clear and able charge to the body defining plainly its duties in ferreting out alleged violations of law. He especially called the attention to violations of the prohibition law and gaming. The Judge stated that the Solicitor's records would doubtless show that 50 per cent of the crime committed in this Circuit was attributable to liquor.

Following is a list of the Grand Jury:

Sebe P. Shaw	Beat 2
Watt S. Willis	4
Oliver Chambers	7
Andrew N. Miner	4
John H. Patton, Jr.	2
George W. Campbell	12
M. Daniel Wyatt	4
Leonard P. Martin	2

George W. Foshee	7
Jim M. Mims	9
Thomas Jefferson Baker	4
L. Oscar Dyer	8
John T. Jones	8
Carter Willis	12
Joe D. Elam	7
Will J. Murse	15

Jim Best, Bailiff

After the Grand Jury retired to begin its labors, the petit juries were empanelled and the civil docket taken up.

The case of Hobson Abernathy vs. L. & N. Railroad Company consumed nearly all of Monday afternoon and part of Tuesday and up to Wednesday morning early the jury had not returned a verdict. It will be remembered that young Abernathy was run over by an L. & N. train last December, at Mountain Creek, losing one arm and a lower limb. His suit is for $25,000 damages.

The following other cases were disposed of:

S. F. Champion vs. L. & N. Railroad; damages; dismissed for want of prosecution.

Levy-Wolff & Pitts Shoe Co. vs. G. A. Dawson; note; dismissed by plaintiff.

The Clanton Bank, a corporation, vs. W. C. Robinson, account; in Appellate Court.

The Commercial Finance Co., a corporation, vs. W. C. Dyer, account; dismissed far want of prosecution.

Union State Bank vs. R. H. Martin, defendant, Percy Wilson, garnishee, dismissed.

Mrs. J. F. Palmer vs. J. B. Scott, continued.

C. E. Abernathy vs. Southern Railway Co., damages; settled and costs paid.

W. I. Mullins vs. G. M. Baker, appeal; in Appellate Court.

J. H. Middleton vs. MacArthur Bros. Co., damages; plaintiff takes non-suit.

William Vizard vs. Alabama Power Co., appeal; continued by agreement.

A. W. Jackson vs. G. R. Stevens, suit; judgment for plaintiff by default in sum of $114.91.

George Sheldon vs. E. E. Jackson Lumber Co., damages; settled between parties.

The prominent visiting attorneys attending the sessions of the court were: J. P. Stallings, Bowdon Harris, W. Martin, and W. A. Denson, Birmingham; E. W. Pettus, Hayneville; Stanton and R. E. Steiner, Montgomery; Frank [illegible], E. Hood, [illegible], Prattville, [illegible], Columbiana.

REVIVAL SERVICES

Revival services, which have been in progress at the Methodist church, were brought to a close Sunday night last.

The Pastor, Rev. L. H. S. Chappelle, was assisted by Rev. George Stoves, of Bessemer, a very able and entertaining minister, who presented the great truths in a strong and convincing manner.

Owing to the extreme cold weather the congregations for the first day or two were small, but on Sunday, at both morning and evening services, the church was filled with those eager to hear the message from the great divine.

While no accessions to the church were had, it is hoped that the meeting will prove a blessing to our town and will redound to its spiritual uplift.

FRANK'S CHANCES ARE VERY SLENDER

Washington, Nov. 23.—Justice Lamar today refused to issue a writ of error to bring to the supreme court for review the conviction of Leo M. Frank for the murder of Mary Phagan, a factory girl, in Atlanta, Ga., in 1913.

Attorneys applied to Justice Lamar for the writ on the grounds that a right under the federal constitution had been denied Frank when the jury's verdict was returned during his absence from the courtroom.

Henry Alexander, attorney for Frank, stated he would [illegible] whether the application for the writ would be presented to other justices.

York lawyer, is not here today, but will participate in the motion to the full bench if one is made.

"The opinion of Justice Lamar was very brief. It proceeded on the premise that Frank was absent from court voluntarily. The opinion is based upon the statement that Frank was absent with the consent of his attorneys when the verdict was returned.

If application is made to the full bench of the supreme court in Frank's behalf, it cannot be made before Monday. It is possible that other justices will be appealed to individually, and this action, if unfavorable, will be followed by an application to the full court Monday when it meets again. There is scarcely a thread of hope for Frank getting a writ of error.

THE REWARD OF COURTESY

From little sprouts big trees will often grow.

We trample upon the sprouts of today and gaze with admiration upon the giants that were sprouts of a former generation.

And it is much the same in municipal affairs. We think too much of the ending and not enough of the beginning. We overlook the little things of today which have in them the making of the big ones of tomorrow.

This tendency of human nature is strikingly illustrated in the case of a gentleman who had occasion to spend a week in a country town, and was remarkably impressed by the uniform courtesy shown him by the citizens of the place.

If he was interested in a public building, or a park, or a manufacturing enterprise, a dozen men were ready with information and explanations, pointing out the various advantages, and with ever a good word for the people. They made him welcome.

A few weeks later while traveling in another state he met a manufacturer who was in search of a change of location for his plant. He mentioned the place he had recently left, and spoke in glowing terms of the people, their characteristics, and especially of their courtesy to the stranger within their gates.

The manufacturer was much impressed, and a few days later visited the place. He is there now, with his factory and his 150 employes.

Truly, a man's tongue has a wonderful influence upon the future of his own town.

Is there a lesson in it for us?

NEWT RIGGINS BROUGHT BACK

Deputy Jones Arrived With Prisoner Monday Night.

Deputy Sheriff J. T. Jones arrived in Clanton Monday night on train No. 8, bringing with him Newt Riggins, who was arrested some days since in San Antonio, Texas.

Mr. Jones left Clanton Wednesday morning of last week for the prisoner, and after securing the necessary papers from Gov. Chilton he went direct to [illegible] in deepest mystery for twelve long months.

His trial will probably be held next week.

THE PATRIOTIC DOLLAR

War Revenue Tax of $105,000,000 Levied—Beer Bears Brunt of Burden.

Congress has levied a war tax of $105,000,000 to offset a similar amount of loss on import revenue due to the European disturbances and of this amount beer is the heaviest contributor, having been assessed approximately, $50,000,000; a stamp tax on negotiable instruments, it is estimated, will yield $31,000,000; a tax on the capital stock of banks of $4,300,000, and a tax on tobacco, perfumes, theater tickets, etc., makes the remainder.

Congress has decreed that the brewer, the banker and the investor must shoulder the musket and march to the front; that milady who would add to her beauty must first tip Uncle Sam, and a dollar that seeks pleasure must first salute the flag; that Pleasure and Profit—the twin heroes of many wars—shall fight the nation's battles and by an ingeniously arranged schedule of taxation Congress has shifted the war budget from the shoulders of Necessity to those of Choice and Gain, touching in its various ramifications almost every line of business.

All hail the dollar that bleeds for its country; that bares its breast to the fortunes of war and risks its life to preserve the stability and integrity of the nation's credit.

The market place has always been a favorite stand for war revenue collectors. The trader is a great financial patriot. His dollar is the first to rally around the star-spangled banner and the last to hear the coo of the dove of peace. He is called upon to buy cannon; to feed and clothe the boys in blue and each month cheer their hearts with the coin of the realm. Men can neither be free nor brave without food and ammunition, and money is as important a factor in war as blood. Many monuments have been erected in honor of heroes slain in battle, poems have been written eulogizing their noble deeds and the nation honors its soldiers while they live and places a monument upon their graves when they die, but very little has been said of the dollar that bears the burdens of war.

Honor to the Dollar That Bears the Burdens of War.

All honor to the dollar that answers the call to arms and, when the battle is over, bandages the wounds of stricken soldiers, lays a wreath upon the graves of fallen heroes and cares for the widows and orphans.

All honor to the industries that bend their backs under the burdens of war; lift the weight from the shoulders of the poor and build a bulwark around the nation's credit.

All honor to those who contribute to the necessities and administer to the comforts of the boys who are marching; cool the fever of afflicted soldiers and kneel with the cross beside dying heroes.

A dollar may fight its competitor in business, industries may struggle for supremacy in trade and corporations may view each other with envy or suspicion, but when the bugle calls they bury strife and rally around the flag

RUSSIANS SUCCESSFUL AGAINST GERMANS

Petrograd, November 24.—(Via London, November 25, 2:37 a.m.) An official report issued here tonight says there have been continued Russian successes on the Czenstochowa-Cracow front, where, on November 22, the Russians took 6,000 prisoners.

London, November 25.—Reuter's Petrogrrd correspondent has forwarded the following Russian official statement:

The battle of Lodz still continues. At one point Russian cavalry attacked a body of retreating infantry, inflicting great losses and capturing heavy guns.

On the Czenstochowa-Cracow front the battle is developing successfully for the Russians. On Sunday more than 6000 prisoners were taken. The enemy's attempts at a counter attack were repulsed.

AVIATORS CAPTURED

Petrograd, Nov. 24.—(Via London, Nov. 25, 12:25 a.m.)—A German aeroplane with two aviators has been captured by Cossacks 24 miles from Plock, Russian Poland. The airmen had dropped several bombs on Plock.

FIRE AT MAPLESVILLE

At 5 o'clock last Thursday evening fire broke out in the plant of the Twin Tree Lumber Company at Maplesville, which plant has a capacity of 60,000 feet daily. The fire department from Selma arrived on a special train, but before it could get into action the planer sheds, dry kilns and rough lumber sheds were destroyed. The loss is said to be partially covered by insurance.

The reading public is sick and tired of seeing such headlines as "German forces driven from Dixmude," "British Cruiser and two gunboats disabled," "German assaults checked at Yser," etc., what they are yearning for are glaring headlines announcing "Business revival," "Better prices for cotton," etc.

We are publishing this week a paper, by Dr. V. J. Gragg, which was read at the baby show the week of the Counts Fair. The publication was given us last week, but was unavoidably crowded out. The article is a most interesting one, and should commend itself to our readers, especially the mothers.

We would advise every farmer who would prosper and do well next year to begin right now to lay plans for the next crop. By all means reduce your cotton acreage, sow wheat, plant oats, raise your own meat instead of depending on the Western smokehouses, and conditions, whether there is a war in Europe or not, will be infinitely better.

The Montgomery Journal will, on Sunday next, Nov. 29th, begin the publication of a Sunday edition. The Journal is one of Alabama's brightest and newsiest afternoon papers, and under the able leadership of Horace Hood has grown into popularity with thousands of Alabamains. We are glad to announce this new move on the part of the Journal which shows the success it has attained, and shall look forward to the first issue with pleasure.

TODAY—THANKSGIVING.

Today (Thursday) in compliance with the proclamation of President Wilson and Governor O'Neal, we observe this as a day of returning thanks to "Him who doeth all things well."

While a good many of us may think that times are trying in this country on account of general business depression and low cotton, we should not lose sight of the fact that there are others who are in a far more unfortunate condition than we of the South.

We have indeed many things for which to be thankful. When we stop to think of the awful bloodshed, starvation and oppression across the Atlantic, we should be thankful that ours is the home of the free and of the brave, at peace with the rest of the world, free from the ravages of war and its attendant consequences. While it is true that conditions are not what we desire them, abundant crops have been harvested, and so far as we know none of us have gone hungry; we have plenty of raiment to keep our bodies warm and this is in striking contrast to our less fortunate neighbors across the seas.

We should be thankful that we are living, for health and happiness and for the many blessings that have been given us.

NOVEMBER 29TH TUBERCULOSIS DAY

The State Anti-Tuberculosis League reports steady enlargement of its distribution of Red Cross Seals and kindred work. More than a million have been issued, and the main work has yet to come.

The first collection among state [illegible] comes from the small mining village of Piper, where a competition among the school children is being inaugurated. Piper absorbed more seals per capita last year than any place in the State. Piper will stand a good chance to win the pennant for villages of its size.

Anniston il planning to secure a high class visiting nurse, as a result of this year's campaign. By this means the campaign is doing a work that makes for knowledge and popular enthusiasm.

Every county should have a visiting nurse. Any county willing to employ one to aid the sick and shield the homes where tuberculosis is present may retain three-fourths of the seals fund for that purpose. But there must be no saving up insignificant amounts, says the grim teacher, Experience. County health officers need nurses to serve those who cannot care for themselves, and to lay bare the facts concerning the prevalence of tuberculosis

The proposal to observe the period beginning with Thanksgiving Day for carrying on a campaign of health evan gelism is bearing fruit. One of the largest department stores south of Chicago will put a Red Cross Seal on every package that leaves their premises between Thanksgiving and Christmas.

Nearly a thousand ministers of all denominations have been personally addressed with urgent request that they speak about the great destroyer and of the forces gathering to destrov it, on Tuberculosis Day, November 29th.

The sale of seals begins everywhere on November 26th, Thanksgiving day.

"BETTEA CARE OF THE CHILD"

cold. There may at times be nothing more than a desire of clearing the throat. Such cases are often unrecognized, the presence of the adenoids not being suspected because they do not close their air passages.

When the growth is larger, more characteristic signs are sure to be present. The mouth is kept open, there is snoring when asleep, a stupid expression, more or less disturbed articulation, a persistent nasal discharge, deafness, inability to blow the nose, and more or less cough. This condition causes the child to be backward in school, many times stunts the growth, ruins the expression, injures the sight and hearing, deforms the chest, etc. And because of the constant inflamation of the mucous membrane, makes the child a ready prey to diphtheria, scarlet fever, tuberculosis, or any other disease which may chance to get in thro' the mouth while breathing, and alight on this highly inflamed mucous membrane. Operation is the only method of treatment. It may be done with or without any anaesthetic. It is not dangerous. It is one with which every general practitioner should familiarize himself. It is an operation that should never be neglected, and is done so quickly that it should not be dreaded.

If time would allow, and space permit, much might be said in regard to diseased tonsils, defective eyes, ears and teeth, and the other ailments, but we will not be able to cover so much ground at this time, so will close.

Note: I am informed that Dr. Marcus and Mrs. Marshall, who made the examination at the Chilton County Fair found in the 25 babies examined, more than 80 per cent adenoids; 5 per cent defective ears, and 40 per cent diseased tonsils.

THE RURAL CHURCH

Co-operation of Church, School and Press Essential to Community Building.

By Peter Radford.
Lecturer National Farmers' Union.

The church, the press and the school form a tripple alliance of progress that guides the destiny of every community, state and nation. Without them civilization would wither and die and through them life may attain its greatest blessing, power and knowledge. The farmers of this nation are greatly indebted to this social triumvirate for its uplifting influence, and on behalf of the American plowmen I want to thank those engaged in these high callings for their able and efficient service, and I shall offer to the press a series of articles on co-operation between these important influences and the farmers in the hope of increasing the efficiency of all by mutual understanding and organized effort. We will take up, first, the rural church.

The Farmers Are Great Church Builders.

The American farmer is the greatest church builder the world has ever known. He is the custodian of the nation's morality; upon his shoulders rests the "ark of the covenant" and he is more responsive to religious influences than any other class of citizenship.

The farmers of this nation have built 120,000 churches at a cost of $750,000,000, and the annual contribution of the nation toward all church institutions approximates $200,000,000 per annum. The farmers of the United States build 22 churches per day. There are 20,000,000 rural church communicants on the farm; and 54 per cent of the total membership of all churches reside in the country.

The farm is the power-house of all progress and the birthplace of all that is noble. The Garden of Eden was in the country and the man who would get close to God must first get close to nature.

The Functions of a Rural Church.

If the rural churches today are going to render a service which this age demands, there must be co-operation between the religious, social and economic life of the community.

The church to attain its fullest measure of success must enrich the lives of the people in the community it serves; it must build character; develop thought and increase the efficiency of human life. It must serve the social, business and intellectual, as well as the spiritual and moral side of life. If religion does not make a man more capable, more useful and more just, what good is it? We want a practical religion, one we can live by and farm by, as well as die by.

Fewer and Better Churches.

Blessed is that rural community which has but one place of worship. While competition is the life of trade, it is death to the rural church and moral starvation to the community. Petty sectarianism is a scourge that blights the life, and church prejudice saps the vitality of many communities. An over-churched community is a crime against religion, a serious handicap to society and a useless tax upon agriculture.

While denominations are essential and church pride commendable, the high teaching of universal christianity must prevail if the rural church is to fulfill its mission to agriculture.

We frequently have three or four churches in a community which is not able to adequately support one. Small congregations attend services once a month and all fail to perform the religious functions of the community. The division of religious forces and the breaking into fragments of moral effort is ofttimes little less than a calamity and defeats the very purpose they seek to promote.

COTTON REPORT

There were 16,164 bales of cotton ginned in Chilton county, prior to Nov. 14, 1914, compared with 18,637 bales ginned prior to Nov. 14, 1913.

SHEPHERD-MULLINS

A quiet but pretty home wedding was solemnized in Clanton on Saturday evening last at nine o'clock at the residence of Mr. and Mrs. J. C. Jones, brother and sister of the bride, when Miss Ruth Kate Mullins was given in marriage to Mr. James Martin Shepherd.

The ceremony, which was impressively performed by Rev. Mr. Chappelle, was witnessed by only a few invited guests.

The bride, who is a beautiful girl of the blonde type, was becoming attired in a blue traveling suit with velvet hat to match. By her lovely disposition she has gathered about her a host of admiring friends in her home town.

The groom is a prominent young business man of Gadsden. He formerly resided here, where he has many friends who congratulate him on his good fortune.

Mr. and Mrs. Shepherd left on the 10:20 train for Gadsden where they will make their future home.

CANCER CURED.

Centreville, Ala., 10-22-14.
W. R. Sims,
Birmingham. Ala.,
Dear Sir:

I take pleasure in recommending your treatment for cancer, and will say that it was wonderful in the case with my father-in-law, Dr. J. N. Williams, especially since he was nearly ninety years of age and very feble when you treated him. The cancer on his face completely healed up and gave him no trouble after you had dismissed the case. My wife and I feel very grateful to you for your successful services in his case.

Wishing you well and that you will succeed in your undertaking, I am,

Yours very truly,
W. L. PRATT,
Judge of Prabate, Bibb Co., Ala.

Despondency Due to Indigestion.

It is not at all surprising that persons who have indigestion become discouraged and despondent. Here are a few words of hope and cheer for them by Mrs. Blanche Bowers, Indiana, Pa. "For years my digestion was so poor that I could only eat the lightest foods. I tried everything that I heard of to get relief, but not until about a year ago when I saw Chamberlain's Tablets advertised and got a bottle of them, did I find the right treatment. I soon began to improve, and since taking a few bottles of them my digestion is fine." For sale by all dealers.

DEATH OF MR. JIM LOGAN

On Thursday evening, November 19, the death angels came to the home of Mr. and Mrs. Jim Logan and took from this world of care and suffering the spirit of Mr. Jim Logan. He was born December 30, 1885.

He leaves a wife and one little daughter, Kathryn, 16 months old, a host of friends and relatives to mourn his demise. He was a loving father and a devoted husband. But he has finished his work; he has written the last line of life's record. He had been sick for about five months and was in the Vaughan Infirmary of Selma till about two weeks before his death. He bore his suffering with great patience.

The remains were laid in the last resting place in the cemetery at Plantersville, Ala., the funeral services being conducted by Rev. R. R. Brasher, of Plantersville.

God, in His wisdom, has recalled
The boon his love has given,
And though the body moulders here,
The soul is safe in heaven.

'Tis hard to break the tender cord,
Where love has bound the hearts,
'Tis hard, so hard, to speak the words;
We must forever part.

Yet again we hope to meet thee,
Where the day of life is fled,
And in heaven, with joy to greet thee,
Where no farewell tears are shed.

A precious one from us is gone,
A voice we loved is stilled,
A place is vacant in our hearts,
Which never can be filled.

His loving niece.
FLORENCE LOGAN.

A REMARKABLE WAR STORY

Frederick Palmer Now Witnessing Fulfillment of Prophecy Described in "The Last Shot."

Frederick Palmer, the author of the remarkable story, "The Last Shot," is a typical cosmopolitan. He not only knows war and the men who make war, but he knows the world and has been practically all over it.

Mr. Palmer is a native of Pennsylvania, born at Pleasantville in that state in 1873. He was residing in England at the time the Grecian-Turkish war of 1895 began and went to the front as a correspondent. At the close of this war he went to the Klondike as a correspondent. He was in the Orient in 1898 when the war between the United States and Spain began, and was with Admiral Dewey at the battle of Manila, reporting it for the London Times and a number of American newspapers. He remained with the American army in the Philippines throughout the campaign against Aguinaldo. When the international expedition for the rescue of the foreign residents in Peking was organized at the time of the Boxer uprising in China he joined it in the capacity of a correspondent for his papers.

From 1900 to 1903 Mr. Palmer saw service in the Central and South American and the Macedonian insurrections. With the breaking out of war between Japan and Russia he joined the first Japanese army in the field as the representative of the London Times and Collier's Weekly, and was almost the only correspondent who saw active service with the Japanese army. He was in Constantinople during the Turkish revolution of 1909, and was with the Bulgarian army throughout the Balkan war of 1912-13.

In addition to this active service as a war correspondent, Mr. Palmer has circled the globe with Admiral Dewey, and again with the American battle-ship fleet in 1907-8. He is familiar with every capital of Europe, and has personal acquaintance with a very large number of prominent European personages, soldiers and statesmen and naval commanders.

"BETTER CARE OF THE CHILD"

Editor Clanton Press:

The following paper, read by me at the recent Baby Show, during the County Fair, is offered for publication, at the request of the management of the Chilton County Fair. V. J. GRAGG.

"BETTER CARE OF THE CHILD"

If you would ask me what a child most needed, my answer would be, "A healthy, intelligent and educated mother." It is impossible for a doctor to treat a child fairly well, to have them well clothed, and well nourished without the proper co-operation of a mother or nurse. Much of the benefit to be derived from the doctor's instructions are without the realms of the drug store. For example: The diet, fresh air, cold, heat, baths, massage, etc., are all important in the care of children. An infant or young child can never be treated the same as an adult, neither by drugs or other measures. The mother or nurse should be flexible and should make the care and treatment of each individual adaptable to that particular child.

It must be remembered that children vary greatly in their physical and mental equipments, much more than do adults. The physician who invariably treats all his cases alike and the mother who undertakes to treat all her children alike will necessarily make many mistakes. Every child must be studied from its own peculiar standpoints.

The disorders of nutrition form a large part of ills of children, and a tremendous amount of patience is required in dealing with these cases. In fact, if a mother loses patience in cases of malnutrition or intestinal disorders in children, the battle is virtually lost.

Chronic colitis, mal-nutrition, or nephritis may require months or even years for correcting, and yet the final results may be satisfactory. In giving children medicine, two points should ever be kept in mind. First, the good we expect to accomplish. Second, the possible harm that might result from the treatment. For example: We can make a baby stop crying by giving it soothing syrup containing opiates. In this case the only good result is to stop the baby's noise, while the evil effect of the opiate, recklessly administered, is to ruin his digestive system, clog up his excretions, form a bad habit of requiring medicine and do many other harmful things. Therefore, a great deal of good judgment should be used in administering drugs to a child.

In order for a doctor to secure the full co-operation and confidence of a mother; who is and should be the nurse, in most cases; he should explain to her the requirements of the growing child. Let us take for example, a case where the mother does not furnish the proper nourishment for the child, and the matter of artificial feeding must be gone into, if he explains to a mother of fair intelligence, that condensed milk and the ordinary proprietary foods, when prepared for use, are weak in fat, weak in proteid, and contain much less nutrition than does mothers milk,—the birth right of the child. She will at once be convinced that such food is not suitable for her baby, and it will be comparatively easy to show her that cow's milk in a majority of cases, is proper substitute for mother's milk. It is certainly right to have the mother know as much of child life as she is capable of understanding. She should be encouraged to attend lectures to mothers, or if she cannot do this, she should subscribe to a good mothers journal, where she will find from time to time many helpful hints and valuable advice.

Children of such mothers will be better specimens of their race, and as adults, they will always have reasons to be glad and thankful that their mothers were educated in child management. The fundamental principle in the life of the young, is growth and development. This applies to the lower animals as well as to man, and the type of animal, whether it be man or the lower animal, depends in no small measure upon the way in which it has obeyed nature's laws during its growth.

Heredity, of course, is an important factor, but care and surroundings count for more. The young of the lower animals may possess the finest of heredity, but if its early life is neglected, the animal will fall short of what it might have been. On the other hand another animal without the benefits of good blood may, when given all the advantages of faithful and scientific care during its growth; surpass, and be decidedly superior to, the more fortunate in birth.

The child is not here through a choice of its own, why should it be neglected any more than the lower animal?

Now, the nutrition of a child under the varying circumstances of health and age is too broad a subject to take up in detail today, so we shall go on and touch a few of the most important ailments of the young.

Let us take Gastro-Enteric diseases, that is, the diseases of the stomach and bowels, that is so fatal in the young. The principal and immediate cause of these diseases is the infection of the stomach and bowel contents by bacteria. These germs are usually carried into the stomach by contaminated food, and are allowed to remain and flourish there by feeding improper foods. This group of diseases, commonly called "summer complaint" of children, probably offers the greatest field of life saving measures that are available to the intelligent mother or nurse.

When a young child develop a diarrhoea of dysentery, the mother should at once stop giving milk, should give a dose of castor oil, and give a carbohydrate diet, and if the child does not improve, the mother should call a physician. It would be well for her to know that these summer diseases are produced by bacteria, and that milk furnishes the best culture medium for these germs. Another thing she should know, is how to dress the child in summer and winter. She should know the necessity of fresh air day and night, and the value of outdoor life at all seasons of the year. She should know that a so called "cold" in the head is usually an infection of the mucous membrane of the nose and throat and is more often due to dusty streets or close ill ventilated rooms, than it is to being exposed to the open air. She should know that a child cries from many other causes than hunger and that it should not be allowed to nurse every time it complains; she should know that fever, whatever its cause, requires a light diet; she should know that the giving of drugs to children is a habit that should be condemned, and that a healthy child requires little or nothing in the drug line.

Another very common ailment, and one which demands attention and is easily relieved, is adenoids. This is a hypertrophy or overgrowth of the mucous glands of the nasopharyngeal vault. They are frequently associated with enlarged tonsils, but are found entirely independent of tonsilar disease. The use of the child appears to have had little influence upon the character of the voice. Sleep may occur in any one, but are more common in children from 2 to 8 years of age.

WHEN YOU CUT YOUR COTTON CROP
WHAT TO DO AND HOW TO DO

"King Cotton" has been dethroned (for the time being at least) and farmers of the South are confronted with the gigantic task of diversifying their crops next year in order to live and prosper.

To some this will be easy, for they have practiced diversification for many years. But those who have raised cotton and cotton only are at a loss to know just what to do and how to do it.

For the benefit of this class of farmers The Tri-Weekly Constitution, the great farm paper which goes three times a week to the farmer's home with all the news of the world—the great war in Europe, what is being done to relieve the cotton problem, what is being done to curtail the cotton crop next year, and every other item of news worth chronicling—is now running a great series of articles on diversified farming.

These articles are written by farmers who have made a success of growing other things than cotton, and some of them have become rich. They will tell you what to do and how to do it. Their experience will be worth a fortune to you if you are in a quandary as to what method of diversification to follow.

The Press has arranged to club with the Tri-Weekly Constitution. For $2 you can get The Tri-Weekly Constitution from now to January 1, 1915, and the Press for one year, and have your choice from The Tri-Weekly's long list of valuable premiums free. Call at our office, inspect this premium list, and subscribe at once.

THORSBY NOTES

The Alkahest Favorites, the next number on the entertainment course, will come Thursday night, December 10th, at 7:30 p.m., at Bates Hall. This entertainment is a concert by three talented young women. Miss Galley, the violinist, played last summer at Chautauqua, N. Y., and was enthusiastically received. Miss Beatty, the soprano, has sung on the best lyceum platforms with marked success. Miss Caython, the reader, is an Alabamian, whose home is in Mobile, and who has brought honor to her home state by her success as an elocutionist.

This is the last concert on the entertainment course and everyone within reach of Thorsby should make it a point to attend and hear these artistes. Admission 50c and 25c.

The entertainment by W. Powell Hale at the Baptist church on Monday night of this week was attended by a full house, and was enjoyed by all.

The East Lake basket ball team was to have played the Institute team on Saturday last but did not come on account of rain; they are planning to come on Saturday of this week, December 5th. The game will be called at 2:30 p.m. A good game is promised. The Institute boys have put their ground into better shape than ever before, and have been doing some good practice work the past week.

The Ladies' Guild met at the home of Mrs. M. Anderson on Friday of last week. A very pleasant afternoon was enjoyed.

Members of Thorsby Institute passed a pleasant evening at the home of Mrs. A. K. Horn on last Thursday, and on Friday evening at the home of Rev. E. W. Butler. Several of the people went to the Crosby Players on the afternoon of Thanksgiving and had a very [illegible]

FROM VERA CRUZ MEXICO TO WASHINGTON, D. C., VIA. CUBA AND HAITI

(BY CLAUD E. MARCUS, H. A., U. S. NAVY.)

On the thirteenth day of October the Hospital Ship "Solace" sailed from Vera Cruz, Mexico, to Washington, D. C., via. Cuba and Haiti. The distance is about three thousand miles and we made the trip in seventeen days—rather slow travel, when the Atlantic is skimmed in six days, but when you have finished this article, and heard the experiences we had, you can readily see that we made good time while under way.

Our voyage was no exception to those usually experienced in the tropics, where a good ship with a jolly bunch of hospital corpsmen make dullness a dream. By day there was the exhiliaration of brightness and breeze; by night the coolness and repose. If the moon was large and brilliant, her fantastic glory gave an invitation to romance. This might easily have been our case though it was not, as scarcely a half dozen vessels appeared to relieve for a moment the acapulcos loneliness

The first land we sighted was Cape San Antonio, on the western extremity of Cuba, "The Pearl of the Antilles." By this time we had entered Broa bay. Not long after entering this little body of water, away to the southward could be seen "The Isle of Pines." As we saw this little island, which Columbus called "Evangelita," fading in the distance, we were plying the same waters in which the "Flying Squadron," under command of Commodore W. S. Schley and Rear Admiral Sampson, wrought destruction to the Spanish fleet, on July 3rd, 1898. Along the southern coast of Cuba we never lost sight of land. The peaks of the Sierra del Corbre loomed high above the horizon At intervals could be seen a cross on the shore to mark the watery grave of some Spanish Man O' War that had been the target of our navy, when Admiral Cervera made his fatal dash out of Santiago Bay with his fleet, and attempted to escape along the coast to the West. Upon one occasion, just south of the entrance to Santiago Bay, could be seen the remains of two Spanish cruisers, where they had been run upon the beach and wrecked, in their frantic efforts to escape the galling fire of the American cruiser, "Brooklyn," and the battleships, "Iowa," "Indiana," Oregon" and "Texas."

The next thing of interest in our course down the coast was the city of Santiago, while we could not get a good view of the city on account of the great fortifications. The entrance to the city is guarded by Moro Castle, a picturesque fortification on a promontory to the right, built by Governor Pedro de la Rocca in 1640, and Zocapa Castle on a corresponding height opposite. These two structures were about all that we could see of this ancient city.

Within a few hours after passing this notable city, we were directing our course into Guantanamo Bay, and soon we beheld the little village of Caimanera, where a body of marines were landed on June 10, 1898, and had made a daring attempt to hold that place. We arrived in Guantanamo Bay [illegible] about 2:30 in the [illegible] of Haiti loomed grandly from the east, and we were ploughing thru the "Windward Passage."

On November 8th, about 1:30, we sighted the U. S. S. "Tacoma" lying at anchor off Cape Haitien. We pulled alongside and anchored for about an hour to take on a few parties who were not in condition to remain in tropical waters.

About four hours after leaving the Tacoma the most exciting experience of the trip occurred. At about ten minutes after eight everything was brought to a dead silence by the rapid strokes of the ship's bell, then a short interval of silence, followed by two quick strokes, which told our well disciplined minds that the ship was on fire. It was below decks, amidship. We soon discovered that the reserve coal bunkers were on fire. Within less than three minutes all hands were on deck, all hose connections made, all air-tight doors closed, and an inexhaustable stream of water ready to be turned on. Upon investigation it was found that a hole would have to be cut through the bulkhead before the fire could be reached, this consuming considerable time, and the fire being confined, a gas soon formed which made it impossible for the men to work for any length of time without being overcome by these noxious gases. Those overcome were carried on deck by first-aid parties and after they had received first-aid treatment, they immediately went back to their stations, to be carried out again in a very short while, in the same condition as before. After the flames had been extinguished, upon investigation it was found that the bunker would have to be emptied at once, as the coal was in such a condition that it was generating gas and would be in danger of igniting at any moment. All hands worked all night and well into the following day removing the coal, it taking a long time, as baskets were the only means to be had on ship board for removing it.

The men showed great bravery, although the position of the ship at the time of the fire was not very perilous, as we were only about three miles off the coast, as soon as the fire was discovered, a wireless was sent out and the battleship "Kansas," which was anchored at Puerto Plato, Haiti, informed us that they were coming to our rescue under forced draft, making 21 knots an hour. But before she arrived we had the fire under control; we sent out another wireless, the "Kansas" turned about, and we continued upon our course.

"The men showed great bravery," said Commander Von Wedekind. "Every man did his duty, and absolute order prevailed from the first. The [illegible] can not be too highly praised for their immediate action in time of danger," said he.

The next morning we pulled into San Domingo Harbor. This old city is a strange mixture of enduring relics of the former splendor and the present domiciles of the living generation. It is partly enclosed by the old Spanish walls, upon which can be seen the ancient cannon and bulletins of chivalrous and courageous [illegible]

Do your Christmas shopping early.

Talk's cheap. Maybe that's the reason Uncle Sam included telephone calls in his war tax measure.

Last week's session of Circuit Court established a record in this county for the number of mistrials, juries failing to reach an agreement in four or five cases.

The first Sunday issue of the Montgomery Journal was a hummer. The issue contained 38 pages, brim full of good reading matter and a liberal share of advertising, and on the whole is a most crrditable edition. Editor Hood and the management are to be congratulated on such an auspicious beginning of their new venture.

The war tax went into effect Tuesday. For all packages shipped by express a tax of one cent must be paid. For all telephone calls where the call costs 15 cents one cent extra must be paid. For life insurance policies one-half cent for each dollar of the premium must be paid. The manufacturers will pay four cents on every hundred sticks of chewing gum. The proprietors of theatres, bowling alleys and other places of amusement and sellers of liquors, cigars and tobaccos, perfumes and other luxuries must pay a tax for each thousand dollars of capital invested. There are many other taxes, including the following tax on deeds: Consideration over $100 and not exceeding $500, 50c. and each additional $500, 50c. Penalty for not affixing stamp as above required $100.

Promissory notes not exceeding $100, 2 cents; and each additional $100, 2 cents. Stamps can be obtained from John D. McNeel, Collector of Internal Revenue, Birmingham, Ala.

ALABAMA POTATOES ARE AHEAD

In reply to a notice we gave Mr. Barkley on his potatoes, a few weeks ago, we received from Mr. Hugh Foshee, of Clanton, Ala., a clipping from the Clanton Press, in which is the following:

"Perhaps the largest sweet potatoes ever grown in Chilton county were exhibited by Mr. Jodie Landsford, of Cooper, eleven potatoes weighing 63 pounds, the largest one weighing twelve pounds."

Mr. Foshee added, "You ain't got no taters."

Jodie sho done been got some taters.—Eldorado (Ark.) Times.

ALABAMA GIRLS' TECHNICAL INSTITUTE

Thanksgiving was an unusually pleasant day at the school. At 10 o'clock Mr. Oscar W. Underwood, Jr, spoke to an overflowing audience of school and townspeople on his recent observations in the war zone of Europe. Mr. Underwood showed himself a keen observer of events connected with the great struggle and presented a very clear and lucid picture of the situation. His description of the horrors of war, the devastation of the country, and the misery of the people made Thanksgiving mean more than it usually does to us. Why should we not be thankful?—We have food, a shelter over us, our friends near us, and a chance to work and to be kind.

After Mr. Underwood's address there was a very exciting game of basket ball between the Seniors and Sophomores. Class spirit ran high. Each team had about an equal number of followers, and each was enthusiastically supported and "rooted" for. The "dope" figured the Sophomores to win easily. It brought overconfidence and overconfidence produced carelessness, and carelessness resulted in a goal for the Seniors, and a goal for the Seniors spelled demoralization, and that meant the Seniors walked away with the game 21 to 10. For all that, it was the prettiest and fastest game seen since the girls took up basket ball five or six years ago.

Afterward a characteristic Thanksgiving feast was spread in the dining room, which the girls and visitors enjoyed almost as much as the basket ball game.

Among the visitors who spent Thanksgiving at the school were: Miss Ruby Bryan, of Anniston; Miss Mildred Meroney, of Marbury; Mr. Thos. Palmer, Jr., of Birmingham; Mr. and Mrs. W. T. Callen, of Clanton; Mr. Wm. Brunson, University; Mr. Wm. Spencer, of Birmingham.

Dr. Palmer, Miss Tappan, the extension worker, and several of the teachers visited the Ebenezer school on Monday. Talks were made and plans discussed for the betterment of the Ebenezer school. This is in line with the extension movement started at the A. G. T. I. this year. Whereby the school will be enabled to carry its work into the various schools of the county and state.

Mr. and Mrs. Jones-Williams entertained a number of school people at an elegant ten course dinner on Thanksgiving night.

SOUTHERN EXPRESS COMPANY INAUGURATES GOOD MOVE

The Southern Express Company, with its four thousand offices throughout the South, has inaugurated a system of co-operative marketing which means much to the dealers, shippers and growers in Alabama.

In an effort to bring the dealer, shipper and grower into closer contact with the consumer, this Company has compiled four most attractive booklets on the following subjects:

List of dealers in and shippers and growers of Oranges, Lemons, Limes, Pineapples, etc., on the lines of the Southern Express Company; another pamphlet containing information with reference to Fish, Oysters, Shrimp, Crabs and Clams; another on Butter, Eggs and Poultry, and still another on Fruits and Vegetables.

These pamphlets give the names of the shippers and post office address, the products to be shipped, and during what season shipments are made.

The pamphlets set out this information in most comprehensive style, not only for the state of Alabama, but for every State through which the Southern Express Company operates from Louisiana to Virginia.

The pamphlets are placed in the hands of the agents at the large distributing points in the territory covered by the Company, and on the front page of the publications there is written "Agents cannot more effectively solicit business than by creating it through the placing of consumers or dealers in direct communication with producers."

The Southern Express Company is conducting an extensive advertising campaign in the interest of its service, laying special stress upon the features enumerated herewith and the first of the series of advertisements to be run by this company along this line appears elsewhere in this issue.

This campaign promises to do much toward enlarging the market for Alabama products in the nearby states.

HELP THE POOR AND NEEDY

The Civic Improvement League composed of Clanton ladies, of which Mrs. E. M. Pinckard is President, has done many things since its organization for the civic betterment of our town, not the least of which is the beautifying of our cemetery grounds.

These kind ladies have now begun a movement which should commend itself to all—that of bringing Christmas cheer and happiness to the needy and destitute. There are many within the confines of our county who, unless they are remembered by the charitable hand of a generous public, the Yuletide will mean little to them. It was for the purpose of helping these unfortunates that this movement was started, and it is hoped that this appeal will touch a responsive chord in the hearts of every one.

You are requested by the League to leave donations to this fund at the Press office and to report the names of the worthy needy.

A CORRECTION

Editor Press:—Please allow me to correct an error in the list of prize winners at the recent County Fair as published in your paper.

The list furnished you showed that Mrs. O. C. Mastin won first prize for the largest and best display of canned fruits, and second prize for largest and best display of canned vegetables.

This was an error of the Secretary in making up said lists, as the report of the judges gave these prizes to Mrs. L. O. Vickers.

Thanking you for making the above correction I am,

Yours truly,
J. N. DENNIS,
Sec'y Chilton Co. Fair.

DEATH OF MRS. P. M. GUTHRIE

Girard, Ala., Dec. 1.—Mrs. P. M. Guthrie, wife of Rev. P. M. Guthrie, Pastor of the First Methodist church of this city, died at an early hour this morning at the parsonage of a complication of diseases. It had been known for some time that Mrs. Guthrie's diseases were incurable, but she bore her suffering with a Christian patience that was remarkable and remained cheerful to the end. The funeral will be held in the local church today and interment in the family lot of the Tallassee cemetery tomorrow. Mrs. Guthrie was an untiring Christian worker and was well known in this capacity in Montgomery, Selma and other cities where Dr. Guthrie has been pastor.—Montgomery Advertiser.

Dr. Guthrie, several years ago, was pastor of Clanton Methodist church, and the said intelligence of Mrs. Guthrie's demise is received here with keen regret, where she was greatly beloved.

DEVASTATION

Devastation is rampant in Europe. Thousands of people are giving up their lives. Not only are millions of dollars being spent, but production has ceased. Industry is paralyzed.

Any great world disaster casts its shadow around the entire earth. People in every walk of life suffer. Just now the South, the cotton producing section of the world, is in a slump.

The brains and energy and financial resources of the entire country are busy, devising ways and means to relieve the situation.

In the meantime it is encumbent on our people to look conditions squarely in the face; to fully realize the necessity of meeting the situation with hope and determination.

The South is not pauperized. It has experienced, and risen superior to, far greater troubles. Let us conserve our possessions, readjust our resources, plan our economies, and get down to business on a basis imposed by changed conditions.

The L. & N. writes of these things because, like the people, the L. & N. has suffered. Nothing can affect the people without having a corresponding effect on the L. & N.

Both freight and passenger traffic has dropped with a thud. Fixed charges remained the same. Net result, loss in revenue. There is no alternative other than to reduce operating expenses. You cannot live at the rate you have been accustomed unless you go into debt.

While we are not alarmists in any sense of the word, we wish to express the opinion that this is a time for repression of our fault finding tendencies; a time to control our extravagant impulses.

We mention these things because they are pertinent to the times and because the L. & N. is in the same boat as the individual who must be careful in the management of his business affairs.

Let's help one another.

ed in the New World. It was founded by the gentle Las Casas, who was called by his followers "The Apostle of the Indies." We could also see the ruins of the old Cathedral built in 1540. The remains of Christopher Columbus' son, Diego Colon, had been placed in a vault beneath its chapels, and upon petition of the survivors of the family, the remains of the discoverer were brought and placed beside those of his son. When the colony was ceded to France in 1795, Spain was permitted to remove these precious relics to Havana, which she is supposed to have done with great solemnity and much ceremony. But it is pretty well demonstrated that the wrong casket was removed and that the remains of Christopher Columbus are still in the ruins of this old cathedral in the city of San Domingo, Haiti.

We remained in the harbor of this ancient city until about four o'clock in the afternoon of November 10th, when our departure was announced by the band on the cruiser "Washington" playing the first bar of the "Star Spangled Banner," followed by "Home Sweet Home," and we turned our bow northward, and were under way for the land of liberty once more.

After leaving San Domingo, we had the advantage of a southwest wind, a smooth sea and the pleasure of seeing the rising and setting of the sun, which would make the artist a millionaire, could he put it on canvas as it was seen from our decks. Three days from Haiti all of these luxuries were at an end, when we received wireless messages from weather stations further up the coast, and soon we were sailing in high seas and through dense fog After six days we arrived in Hampton Roads, on the 16th. We had a beautiful sail up the Chesapeake Bay. The moon, casting a mellow glow on the tiny waves, made a romantic scene, and on the morning of the 17th, the beauty was increased as we entered the world-famed Potomac. The early morning sun made the river look like a ribbon as it wound its way down the valleys of those beautiful, golden-crowned hills of Virginia. It is not worth while to describe the picturesque scenery along the Potomac, as its history for beautiful homesteads is known the world over. But too much cannot be said of the sacred hill at Mount Vernon, the home of General George Washington. The ship's bell tolls and every man, officers and crew, stands attention as they pass the last resting place of the father of our country.

When we were about ten miles from Washington we could see Washington Monument, as it stands like a sentinel over the city that bears his name. Our arrival was announced by the station band, to the tune of "Hail, Hail, The Whole Gang's Here," and thus what is thought to be a very interesting voyage by a Chilton county boy ended.

The State vs. Fannie Goodgame, vagrancy; continued by defendant.

DEATH OF MR. M. C. JONES.

Early Sunday morning about 2:30 o'clock occurred the death at his home in Clanton of Mr. M. Crit Jones.

Mr. Jones had been a sufferer covering a period of several months with that dreadful malady Bright's disease. His health began to fail him about the first of the present year, and though he made several trips to the springs and was given every attention known to medical science, the fatal disease had fastened its grip upon his once vigorous constitution and he continued to grow worse until death came as a sweet relief.

In the death of Mr. Jones Clanton loses one of its most popular and highly esteemed citizens. Than Crit Jones there were few men in Chilton more widely known or who enjoyed more the universal good will and companionship of his fellows.

Born in the Mulberry neighborhood 38 years ago he was a lifelong resident of Chilton county.

Mr. Jones came to Clanton about 16 years ago and has held positions of trust with some of the leading business men of this place.

Seven years ago he became associated with his brother in the mercantile business, the firm name being B. E. Jones & Bro., and was a member of the firm at the time of his death.

Possessed of a cheery disposition Crit easily made friends, and by his fair dealings and courteous manner he won the esteem of all with whom he came in contact.

Mr. Jones was a kind and affectionate husband and father, generous and kind hearted, he possessed to a marked degree those excellent traits that bind together the ties of brotherly friendship. His demise has cast a pall over the entire community.

The funeral took place from the Methodist church Sunday afternoon, Rev. S. M. Adams officiating. The Woodmen of the World, of which the deceased was an ardent member, attended the last sad rites in a body.

A widow and two children, and the following brothers and sisters survive the deceased: Messrs B. H., B. L., B. E., R. J., Durwood and Charley; Mrs. Fred L. Martin of Montgomery, Mrs. Lizzie Swann of Birmingham, Mrs. Barney Scales of Maplesville and Mrs. David Vines of Maplesville.

CHINA BECOMING NEW

China is the oldest nation in the world. Great empires have risen and fallen, and now they are known only by a few scraps of history, and by the ruins of the cities which have been unearthed to such a large extent within recent years. Before these ancient empires had their balmy days, China existed as a great country. And China has remained old during all these centuries, even up to modern times. While other nations have been making progress in the arts and sciences, China has been China of old. This has been due to the conservative temperament of the people and to the fundamental principles of their religion and life. Their wisest sages have taught absolute obedience to parents, and this lead to worship of the ancestors. If one should do anything different from the way his father did it, he would be a disobedient child. They have always looked to the past, while many other people have looked to the future.

But China is becoming new. In a generation or two there will be no more old China. In government, she has a republic organized with the various departments of government like other nations. It is not a republic in the same sense that America is. The people do not have a direct part in it like they do in America. I think as they become more intelligent they will have a greater voice in the government. At present the great majority are so ignorant they know nothing about the larger affairs of the government.

China has been a peaceful nation and the people are a peace loving people. But now she is organizing a standing army like the so-called Christian nations have. She is also acquiring a navy. At present her navy is no more than a huge joke, but she has a good start toward a modern navy, and has it in mind to build up a navy as she can.

But the change in the people themselves is more interesting to some people than the changes in government, and it is about these that I wish to write a few words now.

Change in method of work. Everything in China is done by hand. Even large stones and huge timbers for building are moved by hand. A stone weighing a ton or two is often carried a long distance by hand. The men put ropes under it and put poles through the ropes till enough men are around it to carry it. This is largely done to the present time. Some time ago I wrote about how all the farming is done by hand. But they are beginning to learn the use of machines. This is true in net work as much as it is in sewing. You may see sewing machines by the hundred. As one goes down the street in Canton he can see them at work in the clothing shops. It is always men who use them. I have not seen a woman using one. Last Spring when I made a trip to the interior, even five hundred miles from the coast, I saw Singer sewing machines. I remember one dirty little officer, as white men would scarcely expect anything, but [illegible] that I saw [illegible]

There are a large number of manufactured articles [illegible] looking [illegible] tools [illegible] and [illegible] are [illegible]

MUST PAY FOR THE PAPER

Judge George Thomas, of Columbus, Neb., recently decided that if a man accepts a paper that is sent him he must pay for it. The decision was rendered in the case brought by the Columbus (Neb) Telegram against a man for $2.35. The telegram had been sent to the man's home and he had accepted the paper. When called upon to pay for it he refused and suit was brought. When Judge Thomas heard the evidence he instructed the jury to bring in a verdict for the Telegram. Judge Thomas rules that the old common law, that what a man received and and used, he was bound to to pay for, applied in this instance.

if one gets out into the interior of China and finds things made in America, he knows they are all right. It is often amusing to see the Chinese are adopting foreign dress. Here in Canton a large number, especially of men, dress like men in America do. But often often sees it mixed. For instance, an old deacon in one of our churches came out with a coat on and thought he was dressed up. One of our leading men presiding at a Christmas entertainment had on a coat and trousers and had on a common sweater, instead of a collar and tie, with a dress shirt, and he and the people thought he was some dressed up. But I think to a large extent the Chinese will retain their own style of dress.

Standard oil may be seen everywhere. It is shipped out here in 4-gallon cans by the ship load. Even the smallest villages use Standard oil for lighting. They use the cans to make all sorts of things. Lamps are made of them. Dipping cups, pans, medicine bottles, and things too numerous to mention.

In education and thought China is becoming new. Formerly the idea of education was to make scholars as they could get office, but now at least some of them have the idea of education for education's sake, and so those educated may assume their places as citizens of the country and of the world. Instead of giving all their time to the study of the old classics they are studying modern subjects, Geography, arithmetic, medicine, history and many other things. Their language is becoming much enriched by the addition of new words. Many of the ideas from the outside world have to seek new characters for their expression. Sometimes when there is no word to mean an idea expressed by an English word, they put together a combination of characters that sound as near like the English word as possible, and then [illegible] they can.

It is, and will be for some time to come, very interesting to watch the development of China from an old empire to a new and flourishing republic. Formerly they thought there was no country in the world but China. Even the [illegible] people, in the [illegible] positions, [illegible] that there are other people [illegible] [illegible]

CIRCUIT COURT ADJOURNS WEDNESDAY

The following cases were tried in Circuit Court Monday:

E. H. Foshee vs. J. H. Middleton; jury and verdict for plaintiff for $450.

W. H. Wynne vs. J. E. and A. M. Gowan; judgment for plaintiff for $485.

The Alabama Power Company applied to Judge Pearson for a change of venue in about 150 suits filed in circuit court. The company through its attorneys contended that a fair trial in Chilton could not be had on account of the prejudiced mind of the citizens.

After hearing petitions for and against removal, Judge Pearson Wednesday morning ruled that the cases be tried in this county. Whereupon the Company asked for a continuance until the next term of court, which was granted.

The suits involve claims of more than $2,000,000 against the Company for alleged damages, the plaintiffs claiming that their lands have been damaged by the overflow from the Company's dam at Lock 12, and that they have suffered from malaria and other sickness.

All other cases set for trial this week were continued and court adjourned for the term Wednesday morning.

CHURCH-TO-CHURCH CAMPAIGN

To the Churches of the Unity Association:

Dear Brethren:—

It has been my desire to have a "church-to-church campaign" in the association for some time past. Such a campaign would do a world of good to the churches visited. It means that we are to have a representative of the State Mission Board, a representative of the Foreign Mission Board, a representative of the Sunday School Work, and a representative of the Woman's Work to visit the churches and hold a one-day meeting at each church. There will be no expense except to entertain the speakers the day they are with you. Will every pastor and church in the association write me at once if you will join in such a meeting as this? I beg you brethren to not disappoint me, but write me now and let's make our association one of the best in the State.

Yours for service,

R. R. BRASHER.

Entered at the Post Office at Clanton, Ala., as second-class mail matter under act of Congress, March 3rd, 1879.

On account of a heavy run on advertising, some matter intended for this issue was unavoidably left out.

The slogan "Buy a bale of cotton" has been supplanted by "Sell a bale and pay your debts."

It strikes us, from the way some of the new legislators have been expressing themselves to Hugh Roberts in the Age-Herald, a bunch of office holders will take a holiday after the Legislature meets in January.

Who is the Clanton correspondent to the Montgomery Advertiser? This question has been asked the Press man many times. News sent to the Advertiser from Clanton and appearing as "Special to the Advertiser," is, in a good many instances, to use the slang expression, "balled up," misleading and does not at all times state the truth.

Several weeks ago a news item from Clanton was published in the Advertiser to the effect that the Chilton County Fair was in full blast, big crowds were in attendance, etc., when, as a matter of fact, the Fair did not open until a week later.

Again in the issue of December 3rd the following startling article appeared in the Advertiser's columns under the caption "Judge Selects Veniremen:"

Special to the Advertiser.

Clanton, Ala., Dec. 2.—Circuit Court is nearing the end of its second week. Some cases have moved slowly. Judge W. W. Pearson called on the Chilton county officials to furnish to him, personally, a list of men eligible for jury duty six months hence, and from this list selected by himself he wanted the jurors for the next term of his court selected.

There is not a word of truth in the above and the article is a gross injustice to Judge Pearson. The jurors are selected in the regular manner prescribed by law and in no other way. We dare say that Judge Pearson does not know the jury personnel of fifty in the county.

It is hard to understand how anyone who resides in Clanton (we do not believe they do) and knows what is going on, would lend in such "news" stripped of every vestage of fact.

If all the Advertiser's correspondents were like this particular individual, that paper's readers would be in a sad plight for the news as it actually occurs.

LIFE ON A MAN O'WAR

Jodie Wagoner Writes Interesting Letter from Vera Cruz.

U. S. S. Texas,
Vera Cruz, Mexico, Nov. 24

Editor Clanton Press:

If you will allow me a small space in your valuable paper I will write a letter to my friends and others who wish to read it.

Well, we are still in the Mexican waters where we have been ever since May 27th, except just a short trip made for target practice and a little repairs and then we had our full power run as I told you in my last letter to the Press. Then we proceeded to Tampico in August. When we left Tampico Roads, Mex., all we could see was that we were off our way to Galveston, Texas, for instead of going to Galveston we came sub rosa to Pensacola, Fla., where we stayed about a week and then returned to Vera Cruz, Mexico, and back to Tampico.

On November 1st we got up anchor and the nose of the good ship Texas got under way for Galveston, Tex. So on the 5th we arrived at Galveston. Men having relatives living in Texas were granted five days leave. So you may bet that I muttered strong with the furlough party, for my mother and father were visiting in Mineola, Texas, at that time, and I had a good excuse for my leave.

At one p.m., Nov. 6th, we landed. I got my ticket for Houston. After arriving in Houston I spent a couple of hours riding through the principal parts of the city, and I must say that Houston is certainly a wonderful city.

At 8:45 p.m. I boarded a train for Dallas and arrived there at 8:15 the following morning (Sunday). Spent a couple of hours there, as the T. & P. train was one a half hours late. I also took a ride through Dallas on a car, and I think Dallas is the pride of the South. I was very sorry I could not get to spend more time, but my stay was limited.

About 10 a.m. Sunday, the 7th, I got on the train for dear old Mineola, for some one was there that I was longing to see. I got to Mineola at one p.m., and went out to Pine Mills, as there was where my people were. It is useless to say that I had a good time. I only spent 26 hours with my people before returning to the ship. I'll tell you, I had more thoughts about staying than I did returning to my ship. But at three a.m. Tuesday I bade them all good bye, which was very, very hard to do. That was a moment long to be remembered by me. At five a.m. I boarded the train for Galveston and returned by way of Palestine. We stayed in Palestine three hours and naturally from me that being nothing to be laughed at, it is a very beautiful city. I returned aboard my ship at midnight, November 10th. We got under way for Vera Cruz and have been here ever since. The army left Vera Cruz yesterday and the transports were not out of sight when two big armies met in Vera Cruz, and all you see is fighting. The rebels are trying to take Vera Cruz from the federals, and I can't say how it will come out. We can see them fighting plain from the ship. We are standing by to land our battalion in case they should fire on Americans there.

When the thing is settled I will write and tell you all about it. This is enough for this time. Best regards to all.

Respectfully,
J. WAGONER.

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop of Rossville, Ohio, writes: "About a year ago I was troubled with indigestion and had sick headache that lasted for two or three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies but nothing helped me until during one of those sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in a short time." Do Your Xmas Shopping Before Dec. 23

We make this request as we believe it will be as much to your interest as ours

This is not an ordinary year—people have been thinking differently from what they have thought in former years, and we believe that our store most carefully expresses it. The gift thought is in evidence everywhere. Practical and useful gifts are here, and displayed in a manner that will definitely help those seeking gifts for young and old.

The children will be delighted with a visit to our TOY LAND and we want you to bring them often as they will have to decide what they want Santa to bring them.

This Is a Hospitable Store

It is our desire that it should be the most accommodating store to you always. We also want it to be the most helpful. We are always glad to help make suggestions.

Below are a few of the many things we now have in stock:

Diamonds, Jewelry, Watches, Clocks, Cut Glass, Silverware, Leather Goods, Bibles, Kodaks and Fancy Goods, Dolls and Toys, Fireworks, Candies, Fruits and Nuts.

Start your gift seeking early so that nothing will have to be done in rush. Let us help you to make this the most comfortable and happy CHRISTMAS season you have ever known.

Chappelle, Sr.; Titus Mission, J. C. Buttram; Verbena, W. A. Prince; Wetumpka, C. C. Daniel.

Rev. Mr. Chalker, the new pastor at Clanton, comes to us from Linden, Ala., where he has been stationed for the past two years. He is a young man of about 35 years and has a family. He comes highly recommended as a splendid preacher and a most pleasant and excellent gentleman. While we regret to lose Rev. Chappelle, we are indeed fortunate in securing the services of such an able preacher for the coming year, and the Press, together with the citizens of Clanton, join in extending to him and his family a most cordial welcome to our community.

VOL. 5. CLANTON, ALA., THURSDAY DECEMBER 31, 1914 NO. 38

DEATH OF MRS. D. C. ALRED

'Twas on Christmas evening at 8:30 o'clock when everybody was enjoying the Christmas times and good health that the Great Spirit called at the home of Mr. D. C. Alred and wafted into eternal glory the spirit of his kind and loving wife.

In the death of this good lady Clanton loses one of its most highly esteemed and beloved ladies. Possessed of many noble traits of character and with a pleasant disposition and by her personal magnetism she endeared herself to all with whom she came in contact. She was a good neighbor, and a loyal and devoted church worker, being a member of the Clanton Baptist Church at the time of her demise. The deceased was a devoted wife and mother and leaves a husband and four children—two boys and two girls, Marjorine, aged 9; Leo, aged 7, Robert aged 4, and Virginia, aged 2.

She was the daughter of Mr. and Mrs. N. J. Calloway, who, together with two sisters, Mrs. B. F. Higgins and Mrs. Grady F. Harris, survive her.

Mrs. Alred was taken ill on November 9th when every possible means of cure and care were administered by her husband, Dr. J. P. Hayes, her mother, Miss Della Cornell, a trained nurse of Montgomery and others—but, it was God's will that she be taken into His glory.

As a child she was a smart and lively girl, as a young lady she was pure and virtuous; as a daughter she was respectful and obedient; as a wife she was kind, and affectionate, and as a mother she was gentle, sweet and loving.

The funeral took place at Sardis on Saturday afternoon, Rev. J. W. Fancher, pastor of the Baptist Church officiating. A large number of sorrowing friends and relatives attended the funeral to pay their last tribute of respect.

It is hard for us to understand why the Lord would take the mother of these children and the wife of this husband at so early an age, but He is willing and will lead and comfort always. It is hard to give her up, but we do not, dear friends and relatives, we are assured that she is resting in the arms of Jesus.

A friend who knew and loved her,
MR. AND MRS. T. E. WILLIAMS.

THE SCHOOL TEACHERS GET THEIR PAY

On last Saturday the teachers of the rural schools in Jefferson county, numbering 200 men and women, were paid in full for services specified on the December pay roll. The pay roll amounted to $18,000.00 or $18,000.00 and payment took place in Birmingham in the midst of the teaching district. Announcement to this effect was made from the office of P. M. McNeil, superintendent of the county board of education. The Parisian company had offered to finance the proposition and on the next morning the disbursement was made and payment in cash was handled steadily by the Parisian company on the second floor of the building.

It was stated that the executive of this company had consented to accommodate the county to the extent of advancing the pay roll for teachers [illegible]

Superintendent [illegible] sheriff of [illegible] county [illegible] ment expressing their gratification at being able to secure the payment of salaries to the rural teachers despite the depleted condition of the state treasury. The statement referred to is as follows:

"We are much gratified at being enabled to announce that negotiations have been successfully terminated whereby the teachers of the rural districts of the county will receive their December salaries in time to be of service during the holidays despite the present depleted condition of the treasury. The holiday pay roll has heretofore been financed by some bank with which a member of the board was connected, but this year this connection had been severed and other arrangement was found necessary. Several efforts on the part of the county board to secure the necessary money to meet the regular holiday pay roll were without success and it is therefore with a distinct sense of gratitude that we accept the gratuitous offer of the management of the Parisian company to advance our cash requirements for this purpose absolutely free of charge to the county and teachers with the statement that neither the board nor teachers need feel under any obligations to the firm. We therefore wish to express our high appreciation of the service rendered by this enterprising concern at this juncture.

"Disbursement will begin Saturday morning at promptly at 8 o'clock on the second floor of the Parisian establishment, 1208 Third avenue, and will continue until full payment has been made. Assistant Superintendent Hewitt will be on hand to identify those applying for pay. All teachers who can do so are urged to apply Saturday for payment, so as to be able to avail themselves of this means of identification. Payment will be continued, however, until full disbursement has been made. The full pay roll for rural teachers will be placed in the hands of the Parisian people, and the teachers applying for salaries upon being identified will only be required to sign an acknowledgement of the amount received. The Parisian company will be paid in full at the time when the teachers would ordinarily receive payment which would probably be more than one month from now, but an exact date has not been set."

Mr. L. Block, manager of the Parisian, when seen by an Age-Herald reporter made the following statement:

"My concern is glad to be of any little service of which it is capable either to the county or to the teachers, and requests that the visiting teachers shall not feel obligated to make purchases from our establishment. All we desire is the good will of the out-of-town visitors."—Age-Herald.

THE FARMERS AND THE HOLDING PLAN

Fort Worth, Tex., Dec. 26.—Pat Neff, state labor commissioner of the Farmers' Union and agricultural expert, has given out an interview on the legislative plan to relieve cotton holders. In which he presents the following statement of the subject. Editors wants to know what the farmers become of the money paid in when the co-operation of the banks [illegible]

HOMELESS BELGIAN WOMEN ON THE WAY TO THE BREAD LINE

Uncle Sam Offers All Americans a Chance to Feed Starving Belgium

Arrangements Made For Sending Parcel Post Packages From Rural Districts. How to Aid the Stricken Little Sister of the World

By WILL IRWIN

FOR the first time in its history the postoffice department has been enlisted in a charitable undertaking. From this time forth any American who wishes to give food to the starving people of Belgium has only to stamp his parcel in the regular way and send it through the parcel post. It will go as straight and fast as rail and water will carry it to the doors of the starving Belgians, and the money he has paid for stamps will be refunded to the donor by the American Commission For Relief in Belgium, the executive offices of which are at 71 Broadway, New York city.

Seven million people, mostly women, children and old men, are still shut up in Belgium. Industry stopped when the Germans came; the money gave out through the payment of fines and indemnities; the crops were mainly ruined. With the coasts cut off, Belgium, which imports three-quarters of her food supply in normal times, could import no more. Work is gone; money is gone; most important of all, food is gone. The German conquerors, who need all their own supplies to sustain them in the proposed "siege of Germany" by the allies, cannot and will not feed them. The allies, fearing that the Germans will seize any food coming from a hostile source, cannot or will not feed them. America must feed them or they will starve. There is no other way. Seven million people, many last year the most industrious, peaceable and prosperous nation in Europe, will go to their graves this winter unless America gives as never nation gave before.

While Belgium needs everything, she needs most of all just food—non-perishable food which will stand the test of ocean transportation, such as flour of any kind, peas, beans and preserved meats. The donor has only to put up his gift in packages of not less than twenty-five pounds nor more than fifty pounds; stamp it in the usual way and mail it at the nearest postoffice. If the donor adds his own name and address, TOGETHER WITH THE LETTER "R," the money he has paid for stamps will be refunded to him by the commission.

Packages mailed from ALABAMA should be addressed to WAREHOUSE COMPANY, BIRMINGHAM, MAGNOLIA COMPRESS AND WAREHOUSE COMPANY, MOBILE, who are collecting agents for this district.

Congress to meet the emergency by lending money on cotton so as to enable the poor farmer to hold his crop, but the request was rejected, or rather modified by the government agreeing to join with bankers in providing a fund of $135,000,000 for lending on cotton. The anti-trust law had a special construction placed upon it, the patriotism of bankers was appealed to, and headlines full of hope were flashed across the columns of the leading newspapers of the nation for, a few months, but—where is the money? No farmer has ever seen a dollar of it.

"There is nothing quite so destructive to those in distress as false hope, and if this movement, which has been so persistently heralded to the world, has failed, we are entitled to know it.

"I want call attention to the fact that the farmer—the owner of the property involved—was never consulted in the transaction. The story was told him as children are told the story of 'Aladdin's Lights' and the bedtime story of 'Rainbow with the pot of gold,' and it seems to be classed as some sort of literature. The farmer was never taken into the confidence or the councils of the [illegible] plan and [illegible] ## CLANTON HAS ANOTHER FIRE

Saturday night last about ten-thirty the cry of fire was again heard in Clanton. Bells rung and fire arms were discharged incessantly, and in a short while nearly every citizen of the town was awakened and it was at once discovered that the bording works and grist mill of Mr. J. P. Morrow was on fire.

Despite hard work to extinguish the flames, the building which was an old one-story frame structure, burned rapidly and was reduced to ashes in a short time.

Adjoining the bording works was the warehouse of the Kemp Bros., which was also laid low by the flames.

The blacksmith shop of Mr. J. H. Vinson was torn down to prevent the further spread of the flames.

In the store house of the Kemp Bros. [illegible] Probate Judge Dr. N. S. Johnson, [illegible] were covered with insurance.

The flames cat their way to the new Upchurch building, and it appeared for a time that this building was in imminent danger. Men and boys reached the upper story and with buckets and water, and by dint of hard work the building was saved only after all the windows on the north side of the building had been burned out. Had the flames gotten beyond control it is possible that the entire block would have gone, entailing a loss of many thousands of dollars.

UNITY-CHILTON BAPTIST HIGH SCHOOL

FALL TERM. THORSBY, ALA.

This has come and gone. Some went to school, some did not. You may be one of those who did. I am sure you do not regret the wise choice made. But you may have a friend who needs a word from you to help him or her make the same wise decision.

But you may be one of those who did not go. If so, we would like to help you to see your mistake not to equip yourself for successful undertakings of some kind puts you in the position of the workman who goes to his work with poor, dull tools, doomed to failure at last. Of course you can prepare some at home, but will you?

SPRING TERM.

But, perhaps, you are saying that it is too late this year. We think not. There yet remains five months. In this time one who realizes he must, can do a vast amount of good solid work that will put him in line for the next year's regular work. Special coaching will be given in those subjects in which pupils are behind in seventh and higher grades. So there is no excuse for dull tools. Come along and let us grind and polish you up, so you will shine in some laudable calling.

COURSES OF STUDY.

We offer you regular courses in Literary, Business, Music and Expression Departments.

We coach you for the regular Spring State Examination or prepare you for civil service, shorthand and bookkeeping examination.

OUR SCHOOL.

Our school is on the accredited list of the colleges and universities of the state and work done under our direction is accepted by them without examination.

AN OLD VETERAN TALKS AND A COMRADE TELLS WHAT HE SAID.

To the Editor of the Press:

This correspondent who resides at the Alabama Soldiers Home talked with an aged inmate—82 years old, who said, (on being told that his words would be taken literally) that he was glad to express his Christmas thoughts in connection with some reminiscence.

"As an inmate of the Alabama Old Soldiers Home, which is provided by the State for the Old Confederate veterans I desire upon the nearness of this 1914 anniversary of the birth of our Savior to give an expression of thanks for the preservation of life until we have reached the ripe old age of 80 years and over, and also to be thankful for the privilege of a membership in this Home, provided by the good people of the State, where an indigent veteran can live out his few remaining years in quietude and comfort and await the last [illegible] of the dead."

"I also want, in this connection, to pay a small tribute to the officials and general management of this Home. Capt. J. M. Simpson and Dr. J. P. Ellsberry are both men equal to the occasion, and all that is necessary to qualify them for the positions they hold is embodied in their personality.

"The good Daughters of the Confederacy have, to a great extent, supplied the Commandant with money and table luxuries ample enough to make this a most enjoyable christmas.

[Here, the worthy old veteran, leaned back in his rocking chair, and permitting his thoughts to be of the dark days of 1861-5 continued, slowly]

"As I look back through the long vista of years to the day when deadly war prevailed thro' our Southland and sacrifices were made to meet the demands, I contrast the comforts now enjoyed at this Home with those days at this season of the year when the ground was covered with snow in dear old Virginia and the hungry and scantily-clothed Southern soldiers stalked through the dreary camp.

"The records of those days are known, and they have been written often in history pages. However let me tell you of an incident—I refer to the ironclad Merrimac and the Federal Monitor which took place in Hampton Roads, Virginia. The Merrimac, which was the first ironclad built by the Confederacy, was clad with plain railroad iron, and she was at that time thought to be very formidable.

"After she was completed and ready for action a call was made for men to man the sea fighter, and a number of soldiers belonging a Louisiana regiment stationed at Norfolk, Virginia, were recruited by their chaplain, a catholic Priest, and boldly left the land forces, boarded the Merrimac, there, to do or die, for their Southland.

"The Merrimac then steamed, down the river from Norfolk into Hampton Roads where she encountered several Federal warships and did the work of destruction effectively.

"Then the Merrimac started on her return to Norfolk and was approached by a monitor that stood in her path, and here an engagement took place that was [illegible] and destructive. [illegible]

Beginning to-morrow write it 1915.

From all accounts the Henderson inaugural promises to be a "swell affair."

The weather man has been dishing out a disagreeable brand of weather for the past several days.

Uncle Sam is the latest to enter the newspaper field. On January 2, 1915, the Daily Commercial Report will be issued by the Department of Commerce and the publication will contain all the important commercial news of the world.

The two last fires in Clanton shows how helpless we are with an inadequate water supply. Water mains and fire plugs are located all over town, but there is no water, and you can't do much with a fire when there is no water, that's a cinch. The sooner the well driller reaches an ample supply of water, the better it will be for our town and citizens.

We venture to say that there is not another town in Alabama where the citizens fight conflagrations with more loyalty than they do in Clanton. When an alarm is given men, boys and everybody turns out, and what is more they don't stand around looking for the fourth of July or some other holiday, but just as quickly as they arrive on the scene of action they are busy as Trojans exerting every effort to save the property of their fellows. Yes, take it from us, if we had an army of a few thousand soldiers that would scrap as do Clanton citizens at a fire, we could terminate any war in a short time.

The County High School.

The announcement on the streets of Clanton on last Wednesday morning that the State High School Commission at Montgomery had appointed a principal for the Chilton County High School created considerable excitement among the citizens of the town who contributed the principal portion of the ten thousand dollars which the people raised by popular subscription last summer for the erection of the County High School building.

In the past few years, in fact, ever since the passage of the law establishing High Schools in the counties, efforts have been made by the people of Clanton at different times looking to the location of the County High School for Chilton County at Clanton, but, at each time the matter was allowed to go by without any suostantial accomplishment until about two years ago Prof. J. J. Pickens was engaged as Principal of Clanton High School and came to live among us. Prof. Pickens saw at once the needs of a County High School and begun a campaign to work up sentiment in favor of such a school. He worked at it incessantly, all of the time paying the expenses of the campaign out of his private funds and giving his spare time to the work. During this time he carried on a correspondence campaign and made several talks on occasions where opportunity offered, and, finally when the time came for subscriptions to the building fund he subscribed liberally to the fund and paid his subscription. As is usual in such undertakings some of the subscribers to the building fund failed to pay the money they had promised and some embarrassment came about by the Town of Clanton failing to provide promptly for the payment of four thousand dollars from the town treasury which had been promised by the mayor and council, but the matter was finally secured by some of the many interested citizens lending their endorsement at the People's Savings Bank.

All financial matters having been arranged and proper conveyance to the State of Alabama of a twenty acre tract of land donated by Messrs. J. Earle and Amzi Gowan for a location the contract was let for the erection of the handsome High School building which is now nearing completion. At the same time it was announced that the school would be ready to open its doors on January 1st.

As the opening of the County High School would provide for the High School grades heretofore taught in the Clanton High School by Prof. Pickens, the Clanton School Board re-arranged the Clanton School, engaged a new principal and retained only the teachers for the primary or common school grades. These students of the Clanton School who would be transferred to the County High School being those directly under Prof. Pickens and because Pickens had made a High School possible, most of the people believing that without his efforts the funds for the building would not have been secured, his friends naturally expected that he would be appointed to the Principalship of the County High School and very naturally they were very much disappointed at the announcement of the appointment of another gentleman to the place.

On Wednesday evening a call was passed around to such subscribers to the High School building fund as could be seen and a mass meeting was held at the Court House on the same evening. Moses Robinson was chairman of the meeting and Guy Higgins acted as Secretary. Much discussion was indulged and finally resolutions were adopted condemning the action of the State Board of Education, and particularly the action of the State Superintendent of Education, W. F. Feagin, and requesting the Principal-elect not to accept the place under such circumstances.

However, notwithstanding all this, and the action taken at the mass meeting by the citizens, they realize the school means for the upbuilding of our town and county, and they can be depended upon to give the institution their united and hearty support.

Prof. C. C. Slaton, of Quitman, Ala., was the gentleman appointed to the Principalship, and he is here arranging to open the school which is to begin on next Monday, January 4th, and have its formal opening later when the building is completed.

Prof. Slaton comes highly recommended as an educator, and we wish him and the school the greatest measure of success. Prof. Slaton is by no means a stranger in Chilton County. He is related to the Reynolds family by marriage and has taught school in the county in other years.

CULP'S SCHOOL

Everybody enjoyed Christmas. On last Thursday evening a Christmas tree and box supper was held at Culp's School House with large attendance.

Santa Claus was present and with the assistance of his brother Santa, excelled himself in liberality and furnished amusement. The guests were entertained by an excellent string band, which added greatly to the festivities.

The box supper was greatly enjoyed. Miss W. C. McCrew sold at auction many handsomely decorated boxes, filled with the best of edibles. Again the color scheme of green, red and yellow was carried out.

After the boxes were sold, a [illegible] by Mr. [illegible] was rendered by Miss [illegible] teacher of the Culp school, and Miss Lena Rasberry, of the Mulberry community. GIVE THE BOY A CHANCE

The world's record for corn raising belongs to Walter L. Denson, an Alabama boy, yet in his early teens. Last year this boy raised 232 bushels of corn on a single acre of land, which is the largest yield per acre ever recorded. This remarkable record was made by an ordinary boy on ordinary land. He became interested in corn-raising and studied into the matter of the kind and proper use of fertilizers and proper cultivation. As a result of putting his knowledge to practical use, he has raised 232 bushels of corn on one acre of land, thereby winning the championship of the world.

What Walter L. Deason has done serves to show what a common every-day, out-and-out boy can do if he is given the chance. There are thousands of ambitious boys on the rich farms of this state who never know what it is to be encouraged to take an interest in agriculture or stock-raising. If these boys were given a small plot of ground and some seed-corn, for example, to plant and cultivate, a circus would not be able to turn their thoughts very far away from the enchanted spot where a wonderful harvest will be theirs to reap. A boy may not be able to raise 232 bushels of corn on an acre of his father's land, but he can do well enough to make his efforts worth while. What boy in this county is going after that world's championship record next year.

JAPAN NOT WELL UNDERSTOOD

Eastern Empire Has Through the Centuries Retained Keen Sense of Its Individuality.

Japanese history has been the record of a practically uninterrupted racial life. The islands which constitute the empire of Japan have not only never been conquered, they have never been invaded, writes Hamilton W. Mable in the Outlook.

The emperor now reigning is the 123d of his dynasty; the development of the life of the people, whatever its limitations and defects, has been uninterrupted by disturbance from without. It has been deeply influenced by Asiatic ideals and conventions; but the foreign ideals and manners which have found acceptance by the Japanese have made their way by persuasion, not by arms.

Japan differs radically from the other countries of the East in its possession of a sensitive national consciousness and of a thorough and minute social and political organization. In this respect it stands in striking contrast to other oriental countries. So far as the feeling of radical unity and the consciousness of sharply defined national aims and interests are concerned, India and China have been mere geographical terms, conveying no such group of ideas, convictions, and mental habits as the word Italy, France and England convey.

Japan, on the other hand, has as keen a sense of its individuality, so as to speak, as any western nation; and in point of thoroughness of organization stands beside Germany. The immense significance of this fact has not yet been recognized in the West.

SURE OF ONLY ONE THING

Wellington Could Tell Little of Battle Plans, But He Knew Himself and Uxbridge.

Wellington's reticence once drew a protest from Lord Uxbridge, the brilliant cavalry leader who lost a leg at Waterloo. On the eve of the great battle Uxbridge, although next to Wellington in command, knew nothing of his chief's plans for the morrow's battle. With trepidation he approached the duke. If Wellington were killed Uxbridge would become commander in chief. What was the plan? The duke listened patiently.

"Tell me, Uxbridge, who will attack the first tomorrow—I or Bonaparte?"

"Undoubtedly Bonaparte."

"Well, Bonaparte hasn't given me any idea of his projects, and as my plans depend upon his plans, how can you expect me to tell you mine?"

Uxbridge bowed and was about to retire when the duke added in the friendliest way: "There's one thing certain, Uxbridge, whatever happens, you and I will do our duty."

"The Ideal Catalogue."

A librarian's idea of the most useful form of catalogue for a library is given as follows:

"The ideal catalogue for a public library is one published with one line entries, each being about twice as long as the average newspaper column is wide. This catalogue is published in the form of a newspaper, on cheap paper, cheaply printed. It is sold by the library at about two cents a copy. The copies sold are soon worn out or thrown away and do not come back in after years to vex the librarian. The library keeps the whole thing in type, takes out some titles every month, adds new ones, and prints a new edition. This catalogue contains author entries only. If a man wishes to know anything about the books in the public library that this catalogue does not tell he goes to the library and finds out by asking; if he wishes information concerning books on a certain subject he goes to a bibliography of that subject; if he wishes to know certain specific things about certain books he asks to see the books themselves."

Old Sayings About the Weather.

If it thunders on Sunday, the death of a great man will follow; on Monday, the death of a woman is portended; on Tuesday in early summer, an abundance of grain; on Wednesday, warfare is threatened; on Thursday, an abundance of both sheep and of corn; on Friday, a man of note will be murdered, and on Saturday, there will be a pestilence or some other great disaster.

There are some people who run all through the journey of life with their backs to the locomotive. They are always looking behind them. They are always thinking of the past. They are always talking about the past. They are always longing for the past. They are always living in the past. They are always sighing for the past. They are always weeping for the past. CHILD LABOR LAW TO BE OBJECT OF ACTIVE CAMPAIGN

Plans were laid for active campaign for a new child labor law during the coming session of the Legislature at a meeting of the Alabama Child Labor Committee.

Since last September a number of investigators have been at work making a survey of child labor conditions within the State. Their report was presented to the committee by Mrs. W. H Murdoch, the Chairman, "Children under 14 years of age were found employed in cotton mills, soft drink stands, messenger service, department stores, moving pictures, factories, office buildings and other occupations," Mrs. Murdock stated, "And in nearly all of these occupations the hours of work were excessively long.

"The utter folly of expecting young children to get any education when they are put to work at the age of eleven or twelve or thirteen years has been proven by our study of the school records of such children," Mrs. Murdoch said. "Nothing is more absurd than the misdirected view of those who are trying to crowd an education on top of a long day's work of a growing child.

"Case after case we found of boys eleven and twelve years of age who worked ten and eleven hours a day and went to night school after that. It is needless to say that they got practically nothing out of their schooling after such a day's labor."

NO INJURY TO INDUSTRIES.

Mrs. Murdock reported that the results of the investigation indicated that there could not possibly be any injury to the industries of the State from the complete prohibition of child labor under fourteen years of age.

The committee unanimously agreed to support a bill that would give Alabama one of the best child labor laws of any State of the South. The final draft of the bill has not been completed, but the essential features are: (1) a fourteen year minimum age limit with a requirement that children up to sixteen years obtain certificates from the school authorities to prove their age and to show that they have attended school at least sixteen weeks of the preceding year; (2) children under sixteen not to work more than nine hours a day nor fifty hours a week, nor after night; (3) children under sixteen to be prohibited from work in mines and certain dangerous occupations where they are exposed to physical or moral hazard; (4) the regulation of the employment of children in the demoralizing night messenger service in larger cities, and (5) provision for more adequate inspection of places where children are employed in order that the law may be enforced and the health of the children protected.

The Alabama Child Labor Committee is working in cooperation with the State Federation of Women's Clubs, and other agencies and has for many years been attempting to get better legislation for children. Prominent among the members of the committee are Judge S. D Murphy, Mrs. L. Haley, Judge W. I. Grubb, Dr. Morris Newfield, Otto Marx, Frank P. Glass of Birmingham, Judge Henry Chamberlain, Mrs. Erwin Craighead of Mobile, R. E. Pettus of Huntsville; T. Verner, of Tuscaloosa, William Woods, of Anniston; Lem Green, of Eufaula, and Dr. W. H. Rev. and Mrs. L. S. H. Chappelle and daughter, Miss Marguerite, left Tuesday morning for their new home at Tallassee. Rev. Mr. Chappelle and his estimable family have resided in Clanton for the past two years, the former serving as pastor of the Methodist church. He is an able and conscientious preacher, and during his pastorate here he has ever striven for the advancement of Christianity. Mrs. Chappelle and her charming and accomplished daughter leave behind many admiring friends; they are a valuable asset to the social and religious life of any community, and while regretting their departure, their hosts of friends here cherish the hope that they will be pleased with their new surroundings.

Both of the contracting parties reside at Evergreen, where they have many friends.

DEATH OF AN OLD RESIDENT OF CHILTON

Mr. D. H. Mullins, a life-long resident of Chilton county, died suddenly at the home of his son, at Helena, on the night of December 25. Death was the result of bronchical trouble.

Mr. Mullins had been a resident of Chilton county all of his life, having been born on Yellow Leaf 73 years ago. About three weeks ago he removed to Helena where he intended to spend the remainder of his days.

Mr. Mullins was one of our best known and highly respected citizens. He was a gallant Confederate soldier, and gave four years of his life to the cause of the South. He is survived by a widow and six children, four sons, all of whom reside at Helena, and two daughters, one of whom resides in Texas.

Mr. Mullins was a consistent member of the Baptist church for more than forty years. Interment was had at Helena cemetery on Sunday.

BRUCE-JONES

A lovely wedding of much interest to their friends was that of Mr. Homer L. Bruce and Miss Maude Alee Jones on Christmas day. The bride wore a becoming gown of mid-night blue cloth with accessories to match.

The many friends of the young couple join in wishing them a happy and prosperous life together.

CARDS OF THANKS

We wish to express our sincere thanks to our many friends for their sympathy and kindness shown us during the illness and death of our dear wife and daughter, Mrs. Eva Alred.

Also we wish to thank those who gave such beautiful floral offerings as the last tribute of respect to her.

D. C. ALRED,
MR. and MRS. N. J. CALLOWAY.

Editor Press:

Permit us through the columns of the Press to extend our heartfelt thanks to the good people of Clanton for their expressions of sympathy and acts of kindness extended to us during the recent fire in Clanton which destroyed our home. May Heaven's richest blessing rest upon them all is our sincere wish. MR. and MRS. F. W. DENTY

COMPLIMENTARY TO MISS BEVERLY HESTER

Tuesday's Age-Herald contained a double column "cut" of Miss Beverley Hester, the talented young daughter of Mr. and Mrs. J. A. Hester, of Clanton. Miss Hester is a music pupil of Mrs. Rivers, in Birmingham, and Dolly Dalrymple in the same issue of the Age-Herald pays her the following compliment:

A few days ago when I dropped in for a moment to see Mrs. Rivers, I found two children who are simply phenomenal. One of them little 13 year old "Tot" Wilson, wasn't a stranger to me, because I had heard this child play and I knew of the splendid work she has been doing for the past few years under Mrs. Rivers' instruction.

The other, little Beverley, just thirteen, was a brand new acquaintance, who turned out to be one of the most interesting I had made in many moons.

Both of these children are out-of-town pupils of Mrs. Rivers, one little Miss Wilson belonging to Tennessee, while the other, little Miss Hester, comes from Clanton. Twice a week she makes the trip to have her lessons with Mrs. Rivers, and would go hundreds of miles further if it were necessary to study with her, for she adores her, and thinks there is nobody in the world like her.

Both of these children I speak of are unusually gifted, studious and determined to win in their chosen vocation—capable to an uncanny degree, and just at the threshold of their teens.

It was both a pleasure and an [illegible]

HOGS, CATTLE OR MEN—WHICH?

Governor Ferris Values Men More Than Live Stock.

"Michigan is making a vigorous effort to 'stamp out' hog cholera. Hogs are marketable," said Governor Woodbridge N. Ferris to the citizens of his state in a recent proclamation calling for co-operation in the anti-tuberculosis campaign. "Michigan is making a vigorous effort to 'stamp out' tuberculosis in cattle. Cattle are marketable. Why not make a strenuous effort to 'stamp out' tuberculosis in men, women and children? Human beings are priceless."

Red Cross Christmas Seals are a means for every man, woman and child in the United States to have a share in "stamping out" tuberculosis. Have you bought your share?

BETTY GETS A CHANCE.

Red Cross Seals Helped Her to Get Well.

She was real pretty and so full of fun that the dimples were always showing in her round, red cheeks. Her eyes were big and brown, and her nut colored hair curled naturally in little ringlets over her forehead and ears. She was just eighteen when we first met her and so neat and attractive that one would think she belonged to the well to do class of working people, but when we followed her to her home one day we confronted startling facts.

The red in her cheeks was the flush of unnatural inward fever, the high spirits were a pitiful antidote to pitiless conditions, and the big brown eyes saw only squalor when they were not fixed upon a typewriting machine or closed persistently to any view but an imaginary bright one.

The room we entered was a general living space, used also as an eating, cooking and sleeping apartment. There was but one bed, and Betty had to sleep in it with her mother, who was too weak to sit up. An open cupidor sat where it would be conveniently near the bed, which placed it by the stove, where their food was cooked. The mother, who was suffering in an advanced stage of tuberculosis, did not like cold air, and her querulous demands caused Betty to keep the door and windows closed.

"Well," said cheerful Betty, with a laugh, "that isn't so bad as not having any windows or doors to close, is it? Things might be worse."

"Infinitely worse," said the Wise One. "You might even take a notion to stuff the windows and doors with rags to cut out what oxygen comes in through the cracks."

Red Cross Christmas Seals, with their cheery message of hope, gave Betty a chance to get well after her mother died. Is it worth while to save the Bettys?

SEAL ON EACH SOLE.

"Am I using Red Cross Christmas Seals?" reiterated a good natured old cobbler as he looked up from the shoe he was repairing to the person who stood blocking the doorway of the little shop and who had asked the question originally. "I don't know of them. What are they for?" he asked.

When told that the little stickers were being sold all over the United States to raise money to prevent tuberculosis the cobbler became very much interested.

"Now, I call that a good cause," he drawled. "I don't write any letters, and I don't send any Christmas packages. There's just me and the old woman left. I can't use my seals that way, but I'll tell you how I can use them. I will stick a seal on the sole of every shoe I tap."

PRESIDENT WILSON ON RED CROSS SEALS.

As an expression of his interest in the Red Cross Seal and Anti-tuberculosis Campaign President Wilson recently wrote to the National Association For the Study and Prevention of Tuberculosis:

"May I not take this occasion to express to you my deep interest in the work of the National Anti-tuberculosis association and my hope that its work is growing in efficiency and extent from year to year? May I not particularly express my interest in the Red Cross Christmas Seal, whose sale has been the means of raising funds for the work?

"It seems to me that this is a particularly interesting and valuable way of enabling the people of the country to give this great work their support."

SANTA CLAUS HAS TUBERCULOSIS.

On Christmas eve little Dorothy, just recovered of the whooping cough, was doing some fancy whooping herself—pay that had come.

"Dorothy, dear," the mother said, "you mustn't keep coughing or Santa Claus won't come. If he hears you coughing he'll be afraid to come in."

"I should worry," Dorothy retorted, showing full familiarity with modern slang. "He's got tuberculosis, too, said."

"Tuberculosis! Who told you Santa Claus had tuberculosis?"

"Oh, everybody knows that. That's why he has to wear rubbers inside his shoes every day."

Aiding Education

Realising that next to health education is the most vital force in life the L. & N. long ago adopted a policy of co-operation in educating the young people located along its lines.

We do not confine our efforts to our advertisements, which are published to inform the people of our policies and ambitions for the prosperity of the whole country. Believing that whatever contributes to the educational and religious welfare of the people contributes to the welfare of the L. & N., we have rendered substantial assistance to the public schools of the community.

The L. & N. has paid in many instances illegal school taxes, where the levies were clearly unconstitutional, in order to keep the public schools from being closed. This policy has been in force for some twenty years, during which time many thousands of dollars of illegal school levies have been paid into the public treasury to educate the people of the state, in addition to the legal levies we were compelled by law to pay.

At times these illegal levies became unfair and burdensome, causing their constitutionality to be tested in the courts. Some of the taxpayers took the position that these levies could not be collected as a matter of law, and the courts upheld that position.

The L. & N. paid, and continues to pay, some of the illegal levies which no law compels, always reserving the right to resist payment of those levies which are not in the interest of the general public good, or which might be unduly burdensome.

The levies are paid on the same policy of development that causes the L. & N. to operate dairy cars, maintain an industrial bureau, send out agricultural experts, analyze minerals and promote industry generally.

We could cite numerous specific instances, but we are determined not to indulge in self praise. We simply want to inform the people so that the people will know of our spirit of mutual co-operation for the general public good.

LOUISVILLE AND NASHVILLE RAILROAD COMPANY

WHAT BARNUM SAID

P. T. Barnum once said: "If you have nineteen dollars to put to use, pay ten dollars for the article and nine dollars for the advertising. I can out talk any man but a printer. The man who published a paper and talks every week to a thousand men, while I am talking to one, is the man I am afraid of, and I want to be his friend. The business man who does not advertise is a poor stick. Trade with the men who advertise if you want to get bargains and the worth of your money."

Sick Headache.

Sick headache is nearly always caused by disorders of the stomach. Correct them and the periodic attacks of sick headache will disappear. Mrs. John Bishop of Roseville, Ohio, writes: "About a year ago I was troubled with indigestion and had sick headache that lasted for two or three days at a time. I doctored and tried a number of remedies but nothing helped me until during one of these sick spells a friend advised me to take Chamberlain's Tablets. This medicine relieved me in a short time."
